INTRODUCTION

TO THE

GRiHYA-SûTRAS.

We begin our introductory remarks on the literature of the Grîhya-sûtras with the attempt to collect the more important data which throw light on the development of the Grîhya ritual during the oldest period of Hindu antiquity. There are, as it seems, no direct traces of the Grîhya ceremonies in the most ancient portion of Vedic literature. It is certain indeed that a number of the most important of those ceremonies are contemporaneous with or even earlier than the most ancient hymns of the Rigveda, as far as their fundamental elements and character are concerned, whatever their precise arrangement may have been. However, in the literature of the oldest period they play no part. It was another portion of the ritual that attracted the attention of the poets to whom we owe the hymns to Agni, Indra, and the other deities of the Vedic Olympus, viz. the offerings of the Srauta-Ritual with their far superior pomp, or, to state the matter more precisely, among the offerings of the Srauta-Ritual the Soma offering. In the Soma offering centred the thought, the poetry, and we may almost say the life of the Vasishâs, of the Visvâmîtras, &c., in whose families the poetry of the Rig-veda had its home. We may assume that the acts of the Grîhya worship, being more limited in extent and simpler in their ritual construction than the great Soma offerings, were not yet at that time, so far as they existed at all, decked out with the reciting of the poetic texts, which we find later on connected with them, and which in the case of the Soma offering came early to be used. Probably they were celebrated in simple unadorned fashion; what the person making the offering had to say was doubtless limited to short, possibly prose formulas, so that these ceremonies remained free from the poetry of the above-mentioned families of priests. We think that the character of the verses given in the Grhya-sutras, which had to be repeated at the performance of the different ceremonies, justifies us in making these conjectures. Some of these verses indeed are old Vedic verses, but we have no proof that they were composed for the purposes of the Grhya ceremonies, and the connection in which we find them in the Rig-veda proves rather the contrary. Another portion of these verses and songs proves to have been composed indeed for the very Grhya ceremonies for which they are prescribed in the texts of the ritual; but these verses are more recent than the old parts of the Rig-veda. Part of them are found in the Rig-veda in a position which speaks for their more recent origin, others are not contained in the Rig-veda at all. Many of these verses are found in the more recent Vedic Samhitas, especially in the Atharva-veda, a Samhitâ which may be regarded in the main as a treasure of Grhya verses; others finally have not as yet been traced to any Vedic Samhitâ, and we know them from the Grhya-sutras only. We may infer that, during the latter part of the Rig-veda period, ceremonies such as marriage and burial began to be decked out with poetry as had long been the case with the Soma offering. The principal collection of marriage sentences and the sentences for the

1 It is doubtful whether at the time of the Rig-veda the custom was established for the sacrificer to keep burning constantly a sacred Grhya fire besides the three Srauta fires. There is, as far as I know, no express mention of the Grhya fire in the Rig-veda; but that is no proof that it had then not yet come into use. Of the Srauta fires the gârhapatiya is the only one that is mentioned, though all three were known beyond a doubt. (Ludwig, Rig-veda, vol. iii, p. 325; in some of the passages cited the word gârhapatiya does not refer to the gâ. apatya fire.)

2 Rig-veda X, 85. It is clear that what we have here is not a hymn intended to be recited all at once, but that, as in a number of other cases in the Rig-veda, the single verses or groups of verses were to be used at different points in the performance of a rite (or, in other cases, in the telling of a story). Compare my paper, 'Âhyâna-Hymnen im Rig-veda,' Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, vol. xxxix, p. 83.—Many verses of Rig-veda X, 85 occur again in the fourteenth book of the Atharva-veda.

burial of the dead ¹ are found in the tenth Mandala of the Rig-veda, which, for the most part, is known to be of later origin than the preceding portions of the collections ². If we look into the character of the verses, which these long Grhya songs are composed of, we shall find additional grounds for assuming their early origin. A few remarks about their metrical character will make this clear ³. There is no other metre in which the contrast between the early and later periods of Vedic literature manifests itself so clearly as in the AnushUbb-metre ⁴. The AnushUbb hemistich consists of sixteen syllables, which are divided by the caesura into two halves of eight syllables each. The second of these halves has as a rule the iambic ending (ο - ο ο ), though this rule was not so strictly carried out in the early as in the later period ⁵. The iambic ending is also the rule in the older parts of the Veda for the close of the first half, i.e. for the four syllables before the caesura ⁶. We know that the later prosody, as we see it in certain late parts of Vedic literature, in the Pali Pitakas of the Buddhists, and later in the great epic poems, not only departs from the usage of the older period, but adopts a directly contrary course, i.e. the iambic ending of the first pada, which was formerly the rule, is not allowed at all later, and instead of it the prevailing ending is the antispast (ο - - ο ο ). It goes without saying that such a change in metrical usage, as the one just described, cannot have ² Compare my Hymnen des Rig-veda, vol. i (Prolegomena), pp. 263 seq.

⁵ Compare Max Müller’s introduction to his English translation of the Rig-veda, vol. i, pp. cxiv seq.
taken place at one jump. And accordingly a consideration of the Vedic texts reveals a transition period or rather a series of several transition periods between the old and the new standpoints. The first change is that every other ending of the first pāda is allowed by the side of the iambic ending. The two forms of the ending, the one prevailing in the earliest, and the one prevailing in the later period of the prosody, the iambic (\( \cdot \cdot \cdot \\)) and the antispastic (\( \cdot \cdot \cdot \\)), are those that occur most frequently in the intermediate period, but besides them all other possible forms are allowed\(^1\).

This is precisely the stage of metrical development which the great Grīhya songs of the tenth Mandala of the Rigveda have reached. Let us consider, for instance, the marriage songs and the marriage sayings, X, 85, and see what kind of ending there is at the end of the first pāda. Of the first seventeen verses of this Sūkta sixteen are in Anuśṭubh metre (verse 14 is Trisūśtubh); we have therefore thirty-two cases in which the metrical form of these syllables must be investigated. The quantity of the syllable immediately preceding the caesura being a matter of indifference, we have not sixteen but only eight a priori possible combinations for the form of the last four syllables of the pāda; I give each of these forms below, adding each time in how many of the thirty-two cases it is used:

\begin{align*}
\text{I} & \quad \text{II} & \quad \text{III} & \quad \text{IV} & \quad \text{V} & \quad \text{VI} & \quad \text{VII} & \quad \text{VIII} \\ \end{align*}

\[32\]

\(^1\) Compare the statistics as to the frequency of the different metrical forms at the ending of the first pāda, p. 63 of my above-quoted paper, and Hymnen des Rig-veda, vol. i, p. 28. I have endeavoured in the same paper, p. 65 seq., to make it seem probable that this was the stage of prosody prevailing during the government of the two Kuru kings Parikshit and Čana-megaya.
INTRODUCTION.

We see that all the possible combinations are actually represented in these thirty-two cases, and accordingly the metrical build of this Sūkta shows that it belongs to a period to which only the latest songs of the Rig-veda collection can be referred, but the peculiarities of which may be often noticed in the Atharva-veda and in the verses scattered throughout the Brāhmaṇa literature 1.

A hasty glance suffices to show that those verses of the Grihya ritual which do not appear in the Samhitās, but which are quoted at full length in the Grihya-sūtras, are also in the same stage. For instance, the seven Anushtubh verses which are quoted Sāṅkhāyana-Grihya I, 19, 5. 6, give us the following relations, if we investigate them as we did those in Rig-veda X, 85:

Thus even the small number of fourteen hemistichs is enough to give us seven of the eight existing combinations, and no single one occurs at all often enough to allow us to call it predominant.

Or we may take the saying that accompanies the performance of the medhāganana on the new-born child. In the version of Āṣvalāyana 2 we have:

- - -  || -
medhām te devah Savitā

- - -  || - -
medhāṃ te Asvinau devau.

In the version adopted in the school of Gobhila 3 the context of the first line is different, but the metre is the same:

Or the saying with which the pupil (brahmaśārin) has to lay a log of wood on the fire of the teacher:\(^1\) tayā tvam Agne vardhasva.

There would be no object in multiplying the number of examples; those here given are sufficient to prove our proposition, that the development of the Grīhya rites in the form in which they are described to us in the Sūtras, that especially their being accompanied with verses, which were to be recited by their performance, is later than the time of the oldest Vedic poetry, and coincides rather with the transition period in the development of the Anushūabh metre, a period which lies between the old Vedic and the later Buddhistic and epic form.

Besides the formulae intended to be recited during the performance of the various sacred acts, the Grīhya-sūtras contain a second kind of verses, which differ essentially from the first kind in regard to metre; viz. verses of ritualistic character, which are inserted here and there between the prose Sūtras, and of which the subject-matter is similar to that of the surrounding prose. We shall have to consider these yagñagāthās, as they are occasionally called, later; at present let us go on looking for traces of the Grīhya ritual and for the origin of Grīhya literature in the literature which precedes the Sūtras.

The Brāhmaṇa texts, which, as a whole, have for their subject-matter the Vaitānīka ceremonies celebrated with the three holy fires, furnish evidence that the Grīhya fire, together with the holy acts accomplished in connection with it, were also already known. The Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa\(^2\) gives this fire the most usual name, the same name which is used for it in the Śūtras, grīhya agni, and describes a ceremony to be performed over this fire with expressions which agree exactly with the style of the Grīhya-sūtras 1. We often find in the Brāhmaṇa texts also mention of the terminus technicus, which the Grīhya-sūtras use many times as a comprehensive term for the offerings connected with Grīhya ritual, the word pākayagūṇa 2. For instance, the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa 3, in order to designate the whole body of offerings, uses the expression: all offerings, those that are Pākayagūṇas and the others. It is especially common to find the Pākayagūṇas mentioned in the Brāhmaṇa texts in connection with the mythology of Manu. The Taittiriya Samhitā 4 opposes the whole body of sacrifices to the Pākayagūṇas. The former belonged to the gods, who through it attained to the heavenly world; the latter concerned Manu: thus the goddess Idā turned to him. Similar remarks, bringing Manu or the goddess Idā into relation with the Pākayagūṇas, are to be found Taittiriya Samhitā VI, 2, 5, 4; Aitareya-Brāhmaṇa III, 40, 2. However, in this case as in many others, the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa contains the most detailed data, from which we see how the idea of Manu as the performer of Pākayagūṇas is connected with the history of the great deluge, out of which Manu alone was left. We read in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa 5:

vishāyānvaрабdhāya rītving antataḥ kamsena katurgrīhitās tisra āgyāhutir aindrīḥ prpadam gnhoti, &c.

1 Some of the places in which the St. Petersburg dictionary sees names of the Grīhya fire in Brāhmaṇa texts are erroneous or doubtful. Taittiriya Samhitā V, 5, 9, 2, not grīhya but gahya is to be read. Aupāsana, Satapatha Brāhmaṇa XII, 3, 5, 5, seems not to refer to a sacrificial fire. Following the identity of aupāsana and sabhya maintained in the dictionary under the heading aupāsana, one might be tempted in a place like Satapatha Brāhmaṇa II, 3, 2, 3 to refer the words ya esha sabhāyām agnīḥ to the domestic fire. A different fire is however really meant (Katyāyana-Srauta-sūtra IV, 9, 20).

2 Saṅkhāyana I, 1, 1: pākayagūṇa vyākhyāyāmaḥ; I, 5, 1 = Paraskara I, 4, 1: kātvāraḥ pākayagūṇa huto sutah prahutaḥ práṣita iti.

3 I, 4, 2, 10: sarvān yagān... ye ka pākayagūṇa ye kāte.

4 I, 7, 1, 3: sarvena vai yagñena devāḥ suvargamlokam āyam, pākayagūna Manur arāmyat, &c.

5 I, 8, 1, 6 seq. The translation is that of Prof. Max Müller (India, what can it teach us? p. 135 seq.).
'Now the flood had carried away all these creatures, and thus Manu was left there alone. Then Manu went about singing praises and toiling, wishing for offspring. And he sacrificed there also with a Pāka-sacrifice. He poured clarified butter, thickened milk, whey, and curds in the water as a libation.' It is then told how the goddess Iḍā arose out of this offering. I presume that the story of the Pākayagūṇa as the first offering made by Manu after the great flood, stands in a certain correlation to the idea of the introduction of the three sacrificial fires through Purūravas. Purūravas is the son of Iḍā; the original man Manu, who brings forth Iḍā through his offering, cannot have made use of a form of offering which presupposes the existence of Iḍā, and which moreover is based on the triad of the sacred fires introduced by Purūravas; hence Manu's offering must have been a Pākayagūṇa; we read in one of the Grihya-sūtras: 'All Pākayagūṇas are performed without Iḍā.'

There are still other passages in the Brāhmaṇa texts showing that the Grihya offerings were already known; I will mention a saying of Yāgūṇavalkya's reported in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa: he would not allow that the daily morning and evening offering was a common offering, but said that, in a certain measure, it was a Pākayagūṇa. Finally I would call attention to the offering prescribed in the last book of the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa for the man ‘who wishes that a learned son should be born to him;’ it is there stated that the preparation of the Āgya (clarified butter) should be performed ‘according to the rule of the Sthālipāka (pot-boiling),’ and the way in which the offering is to 1 It is true that, as far as I know, passages expressly stating this with regard to Purūravas have not yet been pointed out in the Brāhmaṇa texts; but the words in Satapatha Brāhmaṇa XI, 5, 1, 14–17, and even in Rig-veda X, 95, 18 stand in close connection to this prominent characteristic of Purūravas in the later texts.

2 Sāṅkhāyana I, 10, 5.

4 XIV, 9, 4, 18 = Brhadāranyaka VI, 4, 19 (Sacred Books of the East, vol. xv, p. 220). Cf. Grihya-samgraha I, 114 for the expression sthālipākāvṛtā which is here used, and which has a technical force in the Grihya literature.
be performed is described by means of an expression, upaghātam¹, which often occurs in the Grihya literature in a technical sense.

We thus see that the Brāhmaṇa books are acquainted with the Grihya fire, and know about the Grihya offerings and their permanent technical peculiarities; and it is not merely the later portions of the Brāhmaṇa works such as the fourteenth book of the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, in which we meet with evidence of this kind; we find it also in portions against the antiquity of which no objections can be raised.

While therefore on the one hand the Brāhmaṇa texts prove the existence of the Grihya ceremonial, we see on the other hand, and first of all by means of the Brāhmaṇa texts themselves, that a literary treatment of this ritualistic subject-matter, as we find it in the Brāhmaṇas themselves with regard to the Srauta offerings, cannot then have existed. If there had existed texts, similar to the Brāhmaṇa texts preserved to us, which treated of the Grihya ritual, then, even supposing the texts themselves had disappeared, we should still necessarily find traces of them in the Brāhmaṇas and Śūtras. He who will take the trouble to collect in the Brāhmaṇa texts the scattered references to the then existing literature, will be astonished at the great mass of notices of this kind that are preserved: but nowhere do we find traces of Grihya Brāhmaṇas. And besides, if such works had ever existed, we should be at a loss to understand the difference which the Hindus make between the Srauta-sūtras based on Śrutī (revelation), and the Grihya-sūtras resting on Smṛti (tradition) alone². The sacred Grihya acts are regarded as 'smārta,' and when the question is raised with what right they can be considered as a duty resting on the sacrificer alongside of the Srauta acts, the answer is given that they too are based on a Sākhā of the Veda, but that this Sākhā is hidden, so that its existence can only be demonstrated by reasoning.\(^1\)

But the Brâhmaṇa texts furnish us still in another way the most decisive arguments to prove that there have been no expositions of the Grihya ritual in Brâhmaṇa form: they contain exceptionally and scattered through their mass sections, in which they treat of subjects which according to later custom would have been treated in the Grihya-sūtras. Precisely this sporadic appearance of Grihya chapters in the midst of expositions of a totally different contents leads us to draw the conclusion that literary compositions did not then exist, in which these chapters would have occupied their proper place as integral parts of a whole. Discussions of questions of Grihya ritual are found in the Brâhmaṇa literature, naturally enough in those appendices of various kinds which generally follow the exposition of the principal subject of the Srauta ritual. Accordingly we find in the eleventh book of the Satapatha Brâhmaṇa \(^2\), among the manifold additions to subjects previously treated, which make up the principal contents of this book \(^3\), an exposition of the Upanayana, i.e. the solemn reception of the pupil by the teacher, who is to teach him the Veda. The way in which the chapter on the Upanayana is joined to the preceding one, is eminently characteristic; it shows that it is the merest accident which has brought about in that place the discussion of a subject connected with the Grihya ritual, and that a ceremony such as the Upanayana is properly not in its proper place in the midst of the literature of Brâhmaṇa texts. A dialogue (brahmodya) between Uddâlaka and Saukeleya precedes; the two talk of the Agnihotra and of various expiations (prāyaschitta) connected with that sacrifice. At the end Saukeleya, filled with astonishment at the wisdom of Uddâlaka, declares that he wishes to come to him as a pupil (upâyâni bhagavantam), and Uddâlaka accepts him as his pupil. It is the telling of this story and the decisive words upâyâni and upanînaye which furnish the occasion for introducing the following section on the Upanayana. The subject is there treated in the peculiar style of the Brâhmaṇa texts, a style which we need not characterize here. I shall only mention one point, viz. that into the description and explanation of the Upanayana ceremony has been inserted one of those 51lokas, such as we often find in the Grīhya-sūtras also, as a sort of ornamental amplification of the prose exposition. 'Here a Sloka is also sung,' says the Brâhmaṇa:

ākāryo garbhī bhavati hastam âdhâya dakshinam tritiyasyām sa gāyate sâvitrīyā saha brâhmaṇah.

From this passage we see, on the one hand, that the composition of such isolated Slokas explaining certain points of the Grīhya ritual goes back to quite an early period; on the other hand, we are compelled to assume that the Slokas of this kind which are quoted in the Grīhya-sūtras differ nevertheless from the analogous Slokas of the early period, or at any rate that the old Slokas must have undergone a change which modernized their structure, so as to be received into the Grīhya-sūtras; for the metre of the Sloka just quoted, which has the antispast before the caesura in neither of its two halves, and which has even a double iambus before the caesura in one half, is decidedly of an older type than the one peculiar to the Slokas quoted in the Grīhya-sūtras.

1 This is also the way in which Sâyana understands the matter; he makes the following remark: tam hopaninya ity upanayanasya prastutatvat taddharmā asmin brâhmaṇe nirūpyante.
2 Cf. above, p. xiv; below, p. xxxv.
3 Sect. 12 of the chapter quoted.
4 'The teacher becomes pregnant by laying his right hand (on the pupil for the Upanayana); on the third day he (i.e. the pupil) is born as a Brâhmaṇa along with the Sâvitrī (which is repeated to him on that day).'
5 It is not likely that verses of this kind are taken from more comprehensive and connected metrical texts.
6 Cf. on this point below, p. xxxv.
Another Grihya section in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa seems to have found its place there through a similar accidental kind of joining on to a preceding chapter as the above-mentioned passage. In XI, 5, 5 a story of the battle of the gods and Asuras is told: the gods beat the Asuras back by means of constantly larger Sattra celebrations and conquer for themselves the world of heaven. It seems to me that the description of the great Sattras celebrated by the gods is the occasion of the joining on of a section beginning with the words 1: 'There are five great sacrifices (mahāyagūnas); they are great Sattras: the offering to Beings, the offering to men, the offering to the Fathers (i.e. the Manes), the offering to the Gods, the offering to the Brahman.' After this introduction follows an account of one of the five great offerings, namely of the Brahmayagaṇa, i.e. of the daily Veda recitation (svādhyāya). The third Adhyāya of Āsvalāyana's Grihya-sūtra begins in exactly the same way with the sentence: 'Now (follow) the five sacrifices: the sacrifice to the Gods, the sacrifice to the Beings, the sacrifice to the Fathers, the sacrifice to the Brahman, the sacrifice to men,' and then follows here also a discussion of the Brahmayagaṇa, which is entirely analogous to that given in the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa. Āsvalāyana here does not content himself with describing the actual course of ceremonies as is the rule in the Sūtra texts; he undertakes, quite in the way of the Brāhmaṇa texts, to explain their meaning: 'In that he recites the Rikas, he thereby satiates the gods with oblations of milk, in that (he recites) the Yagus, with oblations of ghee, &c. It is plain that the mode of exposition adopted by Āsvalāyana in this passage, which is different from the usual Sūtra style, finds its explanation in the supposition that exceptionally in this case the author of the Grihya-sūtra had before him a Brāhmaṇa text, which he could take as his model, whether that text was the Satapatha itself or another similar text.

Among the extremely various prescriptions which we find in the last sections of the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa, there is a rather long section, which also really belongs to the Grhhyā domain. To quote from this section ¹: 'If a man wishes that a learned son should be born to him, famous, a public man, a popular speaker, that he should know all the Vedas, and that he should live to his full age, then, after having prepared boiled rice with meat and butter, they should both eat, being fit to have offspring,' &c. Then follows a description of an Āgya offering, after which the marital cohabitation is to be performed with certain formulas. This, however, is not the last of the acts through which the father assures himself of the possession of such a distinguished son; certain rites follow, which are to be performed at birth and after birth, the Āyushya ceremony and the Medhāganana. These rites are here prescribed for the special case where the father has the above-mentioned wishes for the prosperity of his child; but the description agrees essentially with the description of the corresponding acts in the Grhhyā-sūtras ², which are inculcated for all cases, without reference to a determined wish of the father. It is a justifiable conjecture that, although this certainly does not apply to the whole of ceremonies described in the Grhhyā-sūtras, many portions of these ceremonies and verses that were used in connection with them, &c., were first developed, not as a universal rite or duty, but as the special possession of individuals, who hoped to attain special goods and advantages by performing the ceremony in this way.

It was only later, as I think, that such prescriptions

² Cf. Prof. Max Müller's notes to the passage quoted from the Brhad Āraṇyaka. I must mention in this connection a point touched upon by Prof. Müller, loc. cit. p. 222, note 1, viz. that Āraṇāyana, Grihya I, 13, 1, expressly calls 'the Upanishad' the text in which the Puṣāsvana and similar ceremonies are treated. It is probable that the Upanishad which Āraṇāyana had in mind treated these rites not as a duty to which all were bound, but as a secret that assured the realisation of certain wishes. This follows from the character of the Upanishads, which did not form a part of the Vedic course which all had to study, but rather contained a secret doctrine intended for the few.
assumed the character of universality, with which we find them propounded in the Grihya-sutras.

It is scarcely necessary to go through the sections of the texts of other Vedic schools referring to the Grihya ritual in the same way in which we have done it in the case of the Satapatha Brahmana. The data which we have produced from the great Brähmana of the white Yagur-veda, will be sufficient for our purpose, which is to give an idea of the stage in which the literary treatment of the Grihya ritual stood during the Brähmana period. As we see, there were then properly no Grihya texts; but many of the elements which we find later in the Grihya texts were either already formed or were in the process of formation. Most of the verses which are used for the Grihya acts—in so far as they are not verses composed in the oldest period for the Soma offering and transferred to the Grihya ceremonies—bear the formal imprint of the Brähmana period; the domestic sacrificial fire and the ritual peculiarities of the Pākayāgūnas which were to be performed at it, were known; descriptions of some such Pākayāgūnas were given in prose; there were also already Slokas which gave in metrical form explanations about certain points of the Grihya ritual, just as we find in the Brähmana texts analogous Slokas referring to subjects connected with the Srauta ritual.

Thus was the next step which the literary development took in the Sûtra period prepared and rendered easy. The more systematic character which the exposition of the ritualistic discipline assumed in this period, necessarily led to the taking of this step: the domain of the Grihya sacrifices was recognised and expounded as a second great principal part of the ritual of sacrifices alongside of the Srauta domain which was alone attended to in the earlier period. The Grihya-sutras arose which treat, according to the expression of Āvalâyana in his first sentence, of the grihyāni¹ as distinguished from the vaitânikâni, or, as Sânkhâyana says, of the pâkayāgûnas, or, as Pâraskara says, of the grihyästhâlîpâkânâm karma. The Grīhya-sūtras treat their subject of course in exactly the same style in which the sacrifices of the Srauta ritual had been treated by the Srauta-sūtras, which they constantly assume to be known and which are the works of teachers of the same Vedic schools, and oftentimes even perhaps the works of the same authors. Only certain differences in the character of the two groups of texts are naturally conditioned on the one hand by the greater complexity of the Srauta sacrifices and the comparative simplicity of the Grīhya sacrifices, on the other hand by the fact that the Srauta-sūtras are entirely based on Brāhmaṇa texts, in which the same subjects were treated, while the Grīhya-sūtras, as we have seen, possessed such a foundation only for a very small portion of their contents.

It goes without saying that the above-mentioned statement that the subjects treated of in the Grīhya-sūtras are Pākayāgūṇas¹ or Grīhyasthālipākas should not be pressed with the utmost strictness, as though nothing were treated in the Grīhya-sūtras which does not come under these heads. First of all the term Sthālipāka is too narrow, since it does not include the offerings of sacrificial butter which constituted a great number of ceremonies. But besides many ceremonies and observances are taught in the Grīhya-sūtras, which cannot in any way be characterised as sacrifices at all, only possessing some inner resemblance to the group of sacrifices there treated of, or standing in more or less close connection with them ².

The Sūtra texts divide the Pākayāgūṇas in various ways; either four or seven principal forms are taken up. The

² Compare, for instance, the account of the ceremonies which are to be performed for the journey of the newly-married pair to their new home, Sāṅkhāyana-Grīhya I, 15, or the observances to which the Snātaka is bound, Gobhila III, 5, &c. According to the rule Sāṅkhāyana I, 12, 13 we are, however, to suppose a sacrifice in many ceremonies where there does not seem to be any.
commonest division is that into the four classes of the hutas, ahutas, prahutas, prāsitas\(^1\). The division into seven classes is doubtless occasioned by the division of the Havirya\(g\)nas and of the Somaya\(g\)nas, which also each include seven classes\(^2\); for the nature of the sacrifices in question would hardly of itself have led to such a division. The seven classes taken up are either those given by Gautama VIII, 15\(^3\): ‘The seven kinds of Pākayag\(n\)as, viz. the Ash\(t\)akā, the Pārvana (Sthālipāka, offered on the new and full moon days), the funeral oblations, the Srāvani, the Āgrahāyaṇī, the K\(a\)itri, and the Āsvayūgī.’ Or else the seven classes are established as follows, the fourfold division being utilised to some extent\(^4\): ‘Huta, Prahu\(τ\)a, Âhu\(τ\)a (sic, not Ahuta), the spit-ox sacrifice, the Bali offering, the re-descent (on the Āgrahāyaṇa day), the Ash\(t\)akā sacrifice.’ According to the account of Prof. Bühler\(^5\), the exposition of Baudhāyana, who gives this division, keeps closely to the course which it prescribes. For the rest, however, the Grihya texts with which I am acquainted do not follow any of these divisions, and this is easily accounted for, if we consider the artificial character of these classifications, which are undertaken merely for the sake of having a complete scheme of the sacrifices. On the contrary, as a whole the texts give an arrangement which is based on the nature of the ceremonies they describe. In many instances we find considerable variations between the texts of the different schools; often enough, in a given text, the place

\(^1\) Sāṇkhāyana I, 5, 1; 10, 7; Pāraskara I, 4, 1. Doubtless Prof. Bühler is right in finding the same division mentioned also Vasishṭha XXVI, 10 (Sacred Books of the East, vol. xiv, p. 128). Āśvalāyana (I, 1, 2) mentions only three of the four classes.

\(^2\) In Lāvāyana (V, 4, 22-24) all the sacrifices are divided into seven Havirya\(g\)a-sawsthas and into seven Soma-sawsthas, so that the Pākayag\(n\)as do not form a class of their own; they are strangely brought in as the last of the Havirya\(g\)nas. Cf. Indische Studien, X, 325.

which is assigned to a given chapter is not to be explained without assuming a certain arbitrariness on the part of the author. But, as a whole, we cannot fail to recognise in the arrangement of the different texts a certain agreement, which we will here merely try to explain in its main traits; the points of detail, which would complete what we here say, will occur of themselves to any one who looks at the texts themselves.

The domestic life of the Hindus represents, so to speak, a circle, in which it is in a certain measure indifferent what point is selected as the starting-point. Two especially important epochs in this life are: on the one hand, the period of studentship of the young Brahmaśārins devoted to the study of the Veda; at the beginning of this period comes the ceremony of the Upanayana, at the end that of the Samāvartana; on the other hand, marriage (vivāha), which besides has a special importance for the Grīhya ritual, from the circumstance, that as a rule the cultus of the domestic sacrificial fire begins with marriage. One can just as well imagine an exposition of the Grīhya ritual, which proceeds from the description of the studentship to that of the marriage, as one which proceeds from the description of the marriage to that of the studentship. The Samāvartana, which designates the end of the period of studentship, gives the Hindu the right and the duty to found a household. On the other hand, if the exposition begins with the marriage, there follows naturally the series of ceremonies which are to be performed up to the birth of a child, and then the ceremonies for the young child, which finally lead up to the Upanayana and a description of the period of studentship. The Hiranyakesi-sūtra alone, of the Sūtras treated of in these translations, follows the first of the two orders mentioned; the other texts follow the other order,

1 Hiranyakesin says: samāvṛtta ādāryakulān mātāpitaraṇa bibhṛyāt, tābhyaṁ anugṛñāto bhāryāṃ upayākhet.

2 The same may be said with regard to two other Grīhya texts which also belong to the black Yagur-veda, the Mānava and the Kāṭhaka. See Jolly, Das Dharmasūtra des Viṣṇu und das Kāṭhakagrīhyasūtra, p. 75; Von Bradke, Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländ. Gesellschaft, vol. xxxvi, p. 445.
which has been already described by Prof. Max Müller almost thirty years ago, and we cannot do better than to give his description 1: 'Then (i.e. after the marriage) follow the Samskāras, the rites to be performed at the conception of a child, at various periods before his birth, at the time of his birth, the ceremony of naming the child, of carrying him out to see the sun, of feeding him, of cutting his hair, and lastly of investing him as a student, and handing him to a Guru, under whose care he is to study the sacred writings, that is to say, to learn them by heart, and to perform all the offices of a Brahmaṇārīn, or religious student.'

In this way we find, as a rule, in the foreground in the first part of the Grihya-sūtras this great group of acts which accompany the domestic life from marriage to the studentship and the Samavartana of the child sprung from wedlock. We find, however, inserted into the description of these ceremonies, in various ways in the different Sūtras, the exposition of a few ritualistic matters which we have not yet mentioned. In the first place a description of the setting up of the sacred domestic fire, i.e. of the ceremony which in the domain of the Grihya ritual corresponds to the agnyādheya of the Srauta ritual. The setting up of the fire forms the necessary preliminary to all sacred acts; the regular time for it is the wedding 2, so that the fire used for the wedding acts accompanies the young couple to their home, and there forms the centre of their household worship. Accordingly in the Grihya-sūtras the description of the setting up of the fire stands, as a rule, at the beginning of the whole, not far from the description of the wedding.

Next the introductory sections of the Grihya-sūtras have to describe the type of the Grihya sacrifice, which is universally available and recurs at all household ceremonies. This can be done in such a way that this type is described for itself, without direct reference to a particular sacrifice. This is the case in Pāraskara, who in the first chapter of his

1 History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature, p. 204.
2 See, for instance, Pāraskara I, 2, 1: अवसाथ्याद्धानम् दाराकाले.
Sūtra describes the rites recurring at each sacrifice, and then remarks: 'This ritual holds good, whenever a sacrifice is offered.' Similarly Āsvalāyana, in one of the first chapters of his work, enumerates the rites which are to be performed 'whenever he intends to sacrifice.' Other texts give a general description of the Grhya sacrifice by exemplifying it by one special sacrifice. Sāṅkhāyana chooses for this the sacrifice which the bridegroom has to offer, when a favourable answer has been granted to his wooing; Gobhila gives at least the greater part of the rules in question à propos of the full moon and of the new moon sacrifice; Hiranyakeshin, who opens his account at the period of the studentship of the young Brāhmaṇa, describes the sacrificial type à propos of the Upanayana rite.

The sacrifices which are to be offered daily at morning and at evening, those which are celebrated monthly on the days of the new moon and of the full moon—the Grhya copies of the Agnihotra and of the Darsapūrṇamāsa sacrifices—and, thirdly, the daily distribution of the Bali offerings: these ceremonies are commonly described along with what we have called the first great group of the Grhya acts, immediately preceding or following the Vivāha.

We find, as a second group of sacred acts, a series of celebrations, which, if the man has founded his household, are to be performed regularly at certain times of the year at the household fire. So the Sravāṇa sacrifice, which is offered to the snakes at the time when, on account of the danger from snakes, a raised couch is necessary at night. At the end of this period the festival of the redescent is celebrated: the exchanging of the high couch for the low couch on the ground. Between these two festivals comes the Prishtaka offering on the full-moon day of the month Āsvayugā; it receives in the Grhya texts the place corresponding to that which actually belongs to it in the series of the festivals. As a rule the acts we have just mentioned are followed, in accordance with the natural series, by the Ashtakà festivals, which are celebrated during the last months of the year.

Alongside of these acts which are connected with fixed points of the year we find in the various Grihya texts an account of a series of other ceremonies, which, in accordance with their nature, have no such fixed position in the system of the ritual. Thus, for instance, the rites which refer to the choice of a piece of ground to build a house or to the building itself; further, the rites connected with agriculture and cattle raising. In many texts we find together with this group of acts also an account of the ceremonies, related to fixed points in the year, which stand in connection with the annual course of Vedic study: the description of the opening festival and of the closing festival of the school term, as well as a point which generally follows these descriptions, the rules as to the anadhyâya, i.e. as to the occasions which necessitate an intermission in the study of the Veda for a longer or for a shorter period. As a rule, the Grihya-sûtras bring the account of these things into the group of acts which refer to the household life of the Grihastha; for the Adhyâpana, i.e. the teaching of the Veda, held the first place among the rights and duties of the Brâhma/'a who had completed his time at school. On the other hand these ceremonies can naturally also be considered as connected with the school life of the young Hindu, and accordingly they are placed in that division by Gobhila, between the description of the Upanayana and that of the Samâvartana.

The sacred acts connected with the burial and the worship of the dead (the various kinds of Srâddha rites) may be designated as a third group of the ceremonies which are described to us in the Grihya-sûtras. Finally, a fourth group comprises the acts which are connected with the attainment of particular desires (kâmyâni). Among the texts here translated we find a somewhat detailed account of these ceremonies in the Gobhila-sūtra and in the Khādira-Grhīhya only.\footnote{Gobhila IV, 5 seq.; Khād. IV, 1 seq.}

These remarks cannot claim to give a complete outline of the contents and arrangement of the Grhīhya texts; they only aim at giving an idea of the fundamental traits, which in each particular text are modified by manifold variations, but which nevertheless are to these variations as the rule is to the exceptions.

We must now speak of the relations of the Grhīhya-sūtras to the two other kinds of Sūtra texts, with which they have so many points of contact in the Srauta-sūtras and the Dharma-sūtras.

Prof. Bührler, in several places of the excellent introductions which he has prefixed to his translations of the Dharma-sūtras, has called attention to the fact that the relation in which the Sūtra texts of the same school stand to each other is very different in different schools. Many schools possess a great corpus of Sūtras, the parts of which are the Srauta-sūtra, the Grhīhya-sūtra, &c. This is, for instance, the case with the Āpastambhiya school\footnote{Bührler, Sacred Books of the East, vol. ii, pp. xi seq.}; its Sūtra is divided into thirty Prānas, the contents of which are divided as follows:

I–XXIV: Srauta-sūtra.
XXV: Paribhāshās, &c.
XXVI: Mantras for the Grhīya-sūtra.
XXVII: Grhīya-sūtra.
XXVIII–XXIX: Dharma-sūtra.
XXX: Sulva-sūtra.

In other cases the single Sūtra texts stand more independently side by side; they are not considered as parts of one and the same great work, but as different works. Of course it is the Dharma-sūtras above all which could be freed from the connection with the other Sūtra texts to such an extent, that even their belonging to a distinct Vedic school may be doubtful. The contents of this class of Sūtras indeed have hardly any connection with the subdivisions and differences of the Vedic texts handed down in the various schools; there was no reason why Brahmans, who studied various Sākhās of the Veda, should not learn the ordinances concerning law and morals given in these Sūtras as they were formulated in the same texts. The Grihya-sūtras are not so independent of the differences of the Vedic schools. The close analogy between the sacrificial ritual of the Grihya acts and that of the Srauta acts, and the consequent necessity of taking into account the Srauta ritual in the exposition of the Grihya ritual, necessarily brought the Grihya-sūtras into closer connection with and into greater dependence on the Srauta-sūtras than in the case of the Dharma-sūtras.

But above all, the Grihya ceremonies demanded the knowledge of numerous Mantras, and accordingly as these Mantras were borrowed from the one or the other Mantra Sākhā, there followed in the case of the Grihya text in question an intimate connection with the corresponding Mantra school. We find accordingly as a general rule, that each Grihya-sūtra presupposes a Vedic Samhitā, whose Mantras it quotes only in their Pratikas, and that besides each Grihya-sūtra presupposes a previous

1 Professor Jolly in his article on the Dharma-sūtra of Vishnu, p. 71, note 1, points out that in the eyes of Hindu commentators also the Dharma-sūtras differ from the Grihya-sūtras in that the former contain rather the universal rules, while the latter contain the rules peculiar to individual schools. Cf. Weber, Indische Literaturgeschichte, 2. Aufl., S. 296.

2 It seems as though the choice of the Mantras which were to be prescribed for the Grihya ceremonies had often been intentionally made so as to comprise as many Mantras as possible occurring in the Mantra-Sākhā, which served as foundation to the Grihya texts in question.

3 When Govindasvāmin (quoted by Bühler, Sacred Books of the East, vol. xiv, p. xiii) designates the Grihyasāstrāṇi as sarvādhiśāstrāṇi, this should not be understood literally. In general it is true the Grihya acts are the same for the disciples of all the Vedic schools, but the Mantras to be used in connection with them differ.

4 In the introduction to Gobhila I have treated of the special case where a Grihya-sūtra, besides being connected with one of the great Samhitās, is connected also with a Grihya-sawhitā of its own, so to speak, with a collection of the Mantras to be used at the Grihya acts.
knowledge of the ritual which is acquired through the study of the proper Srauta-sūtra. It is not necessary to quote the numerous places where the Grihya-sūtras either expressly refer to the Srauta-sūtras, or point to them by repeating the same phrases or often even whole Sūtras. It will be sufficient to quote one out of many places, the opening words of the Āsvalāyana-Grihya, which in a way characterise this work as a second part of the Srauta-sūtra:

‘The rites based on the spreading (of the three sacred fires) have been declared; we shall declare the Grihya rites.’

Thus it is not difficult to perceive the dependence of the Grihya-sūtras on the Srauta-sūtras; but there remains the much more difficult question whether in each particular case both texts are to be regarded as by the same author, or whether the Grihya-sūtra is an appendix to the Srauta-sūtra composed by another author. Tradition accepts the one alternative for some Sūtras; for other Sūtras it accepts the other; thus in the domain of the Rig-veda literature Āsvalāyana and Sāṅkhāyana are credited with the authorship of a Srauta-sūtra as well as of a Grihya-sūtra; the same is true of Āpastamba, Hiṅgayacsin, and other authors.

On the other hand, the authorship of the Grihya-sūtras which follow the Srauta-sūtras of Kātyāyana, Lātyāyana, Drāhyāyana, is not ascribed to Kātyāyana, Lātyāyana, Drāhyāyana, but to Pāraskara, Gobhila, and Khādirā-kārya.

It seems to me that we should consider the testimony of tradition as entirely trustworthy in the second class of cases. Tradition is very much inclined to ascribe to celebrated masters and heads of schools the origin of works which are acknowledged authorities in their schools, even though they are not the authors. But it is not likely that tradition should have made a mistake in the opposite direction, that e.g. it should designate Pāraskara as author when Kātyāyana himself was the author.

1 In the domain of the Atharva-veda literature alone we find this relation reversed; here the Srauta-sūtra (the Vaitāna-sūtra) presupposes the Grihya-sūtra (the Kauśika-sūtra). Cf. Prof. Garbe’s preface to his edition of the Vaitāna-sūtra, p. vii. This relation is not extraordinary, considering the secondary character of the Vaitāna-sūtra.

2 Uktāni vaitānikāni, grihyāni vakshyāmaḥ.

We shall not be able to trust so implicitly to tradition where it puts down the same author for the Grihya-sūtra as for the corresponding Srauta-sūtra; the possibility that such data are false is so large that we have to treat them as doubtful so long as we have not discovered certain proofs of their correctness. At present, so far as I can see, we are just as little justified in considering that such a proof has been made as we are able to prove the opposite state of things. It is easy to find the many agreements in contents and expression which exist, for instance, between the Srauta-sūtra and Grihya-sūtra of Sāñkhâyana, or between the Srauta-sūtra and the Grihya-sūtra of Āsvalâyana\(^1\). But these agreements cannot be considered as sufficient proof that in each case the Grihya-sūtra and the Srauta-sūtra are by the same author. Even if the author of the Grihya-sūtra was not Āsvalâyana or Sāñkhâyana in person, still he must have been at all events perfectly familiar with the works of those teachers, and must have intended to fit his work to theirs as closely as possible, so that agreements of this kind can in no way astonish us\(^2\). On the other hand, if the Srauta-sūtras and Grihya-sūtras are read together, it is easy to discover small irregularities in the exposition, repetitions and such like, which might seem to indicate different authors. But the irregularities of this kind which have been detected up to the present are scarcely of such a character as not to be easily ascribable to mistakes and carelessness such as even a careful author may be guilty of in the course of a large work. It seems to me then that until the discovery of further circumstances throwing light on the question of the identity of the authors of the Srautas and of the Gṛhya, it would be premature if we were to venture on a decision of this question in one direction or the other.

\(^2\) For this reason I cannot accept the reasoning through which Prof. Bühler (Sacred Books of the East, vol. ii, p. xiv) attempts to prove the identity of the author of the Srauta-sūtra and of the Dharma-sūtra of the Āpastambīya school. Bühler seems to assume that the repetition of the same Sūtra, and of the same irregular grammatical form in the Srauta-sūtra and in the Dharma-sūtra, must either be purely accidental, or, if this is impossible, that it proves the identity of the authors. But there remains a third possible explanation, that the two texts are by different authors, one of whom knows and imitates the style of the other.

Prof. Bühler’s investigations have made perfectly clear the relation in which the Gṛhya-sūtras and the Dharma-sūtras stand to each other in those cases, where we have texts of both kinds by the same school. In the case of the Gṛhya-sūtra and the Dharma-sūtra of the Āpastamba he has proved that both texts were the work of the same author according to a common plan, so that the Gṛhya-sūtra is as short and terse as possible, because Āpastamba had reserved for the Dharma-sūtra a portion of the subject-matter generally treated of in the Gṛhya-sūtras. Besides there are references in each of the two texts to the other which strengthen the proof of their being written by the same author. In the Sūtra collection of Hiranyakṣiṇi the state of things is different. Here, as Prof. Bühler has also shown, we find numerous discrepancies between the Gṛhya and the Dharma-sūtra, which are owing to the fact, that while this teacher took as Dharma-sūtra that of Āpastamba with some unessential changes, he composed a Gṛhya-sūtra of his own. Of the two Sūtras of Baudhāyana, the same distinguished scholar, to whom we owe the remarks we have just mentioned, has treated in the Sacred Books of the East, vol. xiv, p. xxxi.

I believe that every reader who compares the two kinds of texts will notice that the frame within which the exposition of the Dharma-sūtras is inclosed, is an essentially broader one than in the case of the Grīhya-sūtras. We have here, I think, the same phenomenon that may also be observed, for instance, in the domain of the Buddhist Vinaya literature, where the exposition of the life of the community was at first given only in connection with the explanation of the list of sins (Pātimokkha) which was promulgated every half month at the meetings of the spiritual brethren. It was not till later that a more comprehensive exposition, touching all the sides of the life of the community was attempted, an exposition which, on the one hand, no longer limited itself to the points discussed in the Pātimokkha, and which, on the other hand, necessarily had much in common with what was laid down in the Pātimokkha. The relation of the Grīhya-sūtras and Dharma-sūtras seems to me to be of a similar nature. The Grīhya-sūtras begin to treat of the events of the daily life of the household, but they do not yet undertake to exhaust the great mass of this subject-matter; on the contrary they confine themselves principally to the ritual or sacrificial side of household life, as is natural owing to their connection with the older ritualistic literature. Then the Dharma-sūtras take an important step further; their purpose is to describe the whole of the rights and customs which prevail in private, civic, and public life. They naturally among other things touch upon the ceremonies treated in the Grīhya-sūtras, but they generally merely mention them and discuss the questions of law and custom which are connected with them, without undertaking to go into the technical ordinances as to the way in which these ceremonies are to be performed.

1 Cf. my remarks in the introduction to the Śākhāyana-Gṛhya, vol. xxix, pp. 5, 6.

Only in a few cases do portions treated of in the domain of the Dharma-sūtras happen to coincide with portions treated of in the Grīhya-sūtras. Thus especially, apart from a few objects of less importance, the detailed rules for the behaviour of the Snātaka and the rules for the interruptions of the Veda study (anadhyāya) are generally treated in an exactly similar way in the texts of the one and those of the other category.

We have spoken above of the metrical peculiarities of the Mantras quoted in the Grīhyasūtras, the metre of which clearly proves what is indubitable from other reasons, that most, if not all, of these verses were composed at a perceptibly older period than the descriptions of the sacred acts in the midst of which they are inserted. A second kind of verses which are quoted in the Grīhyasūtras must be carefully distinguished from these. It is doubtful whether there are any to be found among them which the authors of the Sūtras have themselves composed; but they were composed at a period decidedly more recent than those Mantras, and they therefore exhibit metrical peculiarities which are essentially different. The verses I mean are Slokas of ritual contents, which are quoted to confirm or to complete what is stated in the prose, and which are introduced by such expressions as tad aphy āhuḥ 'here they say also,' or tad api slokāḥ 'here there are also Slokas,' and other similar phrases.

We called attention above (p. xix) to the fact that a verse of this kind occurs in one of the Grīhya chapters of the Satapatha Brāhmana, in a metre corresponding to the peculiarities of the older literary style. On the other hand, the verses appearing in the Grīhyasūtras differ only in a few cases from the standard of the later Sloka prosody, as we have it, e.g. in the Mahābhārata and in the laws of Manu. In the Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländ. Gesellschaft, vol. xxxvii, p. 67, I have given tables for the verses in question out of the Sānkhāyana-Grīhya, and these tables show that the characteristic ending of the first 1 We do not mean to deny that among these verses too a few of especially modern appearance are to be found; e.g. this is true of the verses which Dr. Von Bradke has quoted from the Mānava-Grīhya II, 14, 34 (Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländ. Gesellschaft, vol. xxxvi, p. 429).

2 Let me here refer to the fact that one of these verses (Ārvalāyana-Grīhya IV, 7, 16) concludes with the words, 'thus said Saunaka.'

3 Ārvalāyana-Grīhya I, 3, 10 designates such a verse as yagnāgāthā.
Sloka Pāda for the later period \( \sigma - \sigma \), which, for instance, in the Nalopākhyaṇa of the Mahābhārata covers precisely five-sixths of all the cases, occurs in Śāṅkhāyana in thirty cases out of thirty-nine, that is in about three quarters of the cases; Śāṅkhāyana has still twice the ending \( \sigma - \sigma \) which is the rule in the Rig-veda, but which is forbidden by the later prosody: prahutah pithrikarmanaḥ, uktvā mantraṃ sprised apaḥ. It may be observed that a similar treatment of the Sloka metre appears also in the Rig-veda Prātiśākhya of Saunaka. Here too the modern form of the ending of the first pāda dominates, although sometimes the old iambic form is preserved, e.g. II, 5 antahpadamvivrit-tayaḥ, III, 6 anudāttodaye punaḥ.

It seems evident that we have in this Sloka form of the Śūtra period, the last preparatory stage which the development of this metre had to traverse, before it arrived at the shape which it assumes in epic poetry; and it is to be hoped that more exhaustive observations on this point (account being especially taken of the numerous verses quoted in the Dharma-śūtras) will throw an important light on the chronology of the literature of this period lying between the Vedas and the post-Vedic age.

We add to these remarks on the Slokas quoted in the Grīhya-śūtras, that we come upon a number of passages in the midst of the prose of the Śūtras, which without being in any way externally designated as verses, have an unmistakable metrical character, being evidently verses which the authors of the Śūtras found ready made, and which they used for their own aphorisms, either without changing them at all, or with such slight changes that the original form remained clearly recognisable. Thus we read in Āsvalāyana (Grīhya I, 6, 8), as a definition of the Rākṣhasa marriage: hatvā bhittvā ka sirśhāni rudatīm rudadhbyo

1 The few verses which are found in Gobhila preserve the same metrical standard as those quoted in Sāṅkhāyana; it follows that in Gobhila IV, 7, 23, avatthād agnihāyanṛ brūyat, we cannot change brūyat in ṛ, as Prof. Knauer proposes. The supernumerary syllable of the first foot is unobjectionable, but the form \( \sigma - \sigma \) of the second foot should not be touched.

2 Both passages are to be found in Sāṅkhāyana-Grīhya I, 10.
INTRODUCTION.

haret: the approximation of these words to the Sloka metre cannot escape attention, and it is only necessary to make rudadbhyah and rudatīm change places in order to obtain a regular Sloka hemistich. In Gobhila the Sūtras I, 2, 21–27 represent three hemistichs, which with one exception (na ka sopānatkaḥ kvaṅkit) exactly conform to the laws of the Sloka metre. II, 4, 2 gives also a hemistich by slightly changing the order:

Mahāvrīkshān smasānam ka nadīs ka vishamāni ka

Somewhat more remote from the original verses is the wording of the Sūtras I, 6, 8, 9 na pravasann upavased ity āhuḥ, patnyā vrataṁ bhavatīti; we have the metrical order in one of the Slokas quoted by Sāṅkhāyana (Grīhya II, 17): nopavasaḥ pravāse syāt patni dharayate vrataṁ.

The verses which are thus either expressly quoted, or at any rate made use of by the authors of the Grīhya-sūtras, do not seem to be taken from connected metrical works any more than the yagñagāthās quoted in the Brāhmānas; on the contrary in a later period of literature, when texts similar to Manu’s Code were composed, they evidently furnished these texts with some of their materials.

Leaving out of consideration the Khādira-Grīhya, which is evidently a recast of the Gobhiliya-Grīhya, and the Sūtra of Hiranyakesin, which is, at least in part, based on that of Āpastamba, we are not in regard to the other Grīhya texts in a condition to prove that one of them borrowed from the other. It often happens that single Sūtras or whole rows of Sūtras agree so exactly in different texts that this agreement cannot be ascribed to chance; but this does not—so far at least—enable us to tell which text is to be looked upon as the source of the other, or whether they have a common source which has been lost.

1 The text has: nadīs ka vishamāni ka mahāvrīkshān smasānam ka.
2 Cf. Indische Studien, XV, n. We do not mean to imply anything as to the metrical portions of other Sūtra texts than the Grīhya-sūtras. As regards some verses quoted in the Baudhāyana-Dharma-sūtra, Prof. Bühler (Sacred Books of the East, vol. xiv, p. xli) has shown that they are actually borrowed from a metrical treatise on the Sacred Law.

I will content myself with mentioning two such cases of agreement, in the one of which we can at least prove that a certain Sūtra cannot originally spring from one of the texts in which we find it, while in the other case we are able by means of a possibly not too uncertain conjecture to reconstruct the opening Sūtras of a lost Grīhya-sūtra.

The description of the vṛishotsarga (i.e. of the setting a bull at liberty) agrees almost word for word in the Sūtras of Śaṅkhāyana (III, 11), Pāraskara (III, 9), and in the Kāṭhaka-Grīhya. In Śaṅkhāyana we read:

§ 15: nabhyasthe-numantrayate mayobhūr ity anuvāka-seshena.

('When the bull is in the midst of the cows, he recites over them the texts "mayobhūḥ, &c.," down to the end of the Anuvāka.')

On the other hand in Pāraskara we have:

§ 7: nabhyastham abhimantrayate mayobhūr ity anuvāka-seshena.

('When the bull is in the midst of the cows, he recites over it the texts "mayobhūḥ, &c.," down to the end of the Anuvāka.')

The quotation mayobhūḥ is clear, if we refer it to the Rig-veda. Hymn X, 169, which stands about in the middle of an Anuvāka, begins with this word. On the other hand in the Vāgasaneyi Samhitā there is no Mantra beginning with Mayobhūḥ; we find this word in the middle of the Mantra XVIII, 45, and there follow verses whose use at the vṛishotsarga would seem in part extremely strange. There can thus be no doubt that Pāraskara here borrowed from a Sūtra text belonging to the Rig-veda, a Pratika, which, when referred to the Vāgasaneyi Samhitā, results in nonsense.

The other passage which I wish to discuss here is Pāra-

1 In the Taittiriya Samhitā (VII, 4, 17) mayobhūḥ is the beginning of an Anuvāka; the expression anuvāka-seshena would have no meaning if referred to this text.
INTRODUCTION.

skara I, 4, 1-5. Pāraskara, being just on the point of describing the marriage ritual, prefixes a few sentences, the position of which here it is not very easy to understand. A general division of all Pākayāgīnas—general remarks on the nature of the place for sacrificing: this looks very strange between a discussion of the Arghya and marriage ceremonies. Now these same sentences are found almost word for word and with the same passing on to the marriage ritual in Sāṅkhāyana also (Gṛihya I, 5, 1-5). Here, as in other cases, we have the borrowing word for word of such portions of text from an older text, and, closely related to this phenomenon, the fact that the sentences in question are awkwardly woven into the context of the Gṛihya where we read them, and are poorly connected with the surrounding parts. Unless we are much deceived, we have here a fragment from an older source inserted without connection and without change. It would seem that this fragment was the beginning of the original work; for the style and contents of these Sūtras are peculiarly appropriate for the beginning. Thus, if this conjecture is right, that old lost Gṛihya began with the main division of all the Pākayāgīnas into four classes, and then proceeded at once to the marriage ritual. Later, when the texts which we have, came into existence, the feeling evidently arose, that in this way an important part of the matter had been overlooked. The supplementary matter was then inserted before the old beginning, which then naturally, as is to be seen in our texts, joins on rather strangely and abruptly to these newly-added portions.
INTRODUCTION
TO THE
GRIHYA-SŪTRA OF GOBHILA.

The Gṛhya-sūtra of Gobhila differs from those of Sāṅkhāyana, Ārvalāyana, Pāraskara, Hiranyakeshin in one essential point: while these texts presuppose only the same Vedic Samhitās on which also the corresponding Srauta-sūtras are based, viz. the Rig-veda-Samhitā, the Vāgasaneyi-Samhitā, and the Taittiriya-Samhitā; the Sūtra of Gobhila, on the other hand, presupposes, beside the Samhitā of the Sāma-veda¹, another collection of Mantras which evidently was composed expressly with the purpose of being used at Gṛhya ceremonies: this collection is preserved to us under the title of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, and it has been edited at Calcutta (1873), with a commentary and Bengali translation by Satyavrata Sāmasramin².

Prof. Knauer of Kiew, to whom all students of the Gṛhya literature are highly indebted for his very accurate edition and translation of Gobhila, has been the first to examine into the relation in which the two texts, the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa and the Gobhiliya-sūtra, stand to each other. He has very kindly enabled me to make use, before they were published, of the results of his investigations, which he has laid down in the introduction to his translation of Gobhila. While I wish, therefore, to acknowledge the obligation under which Prof. Knauer has thus laid me, I must try, on the other side, to state my own opinion as to the problem in question, which in some points differs from, or is even opposed to, the theory by which Prof. Knauer has tried to solve it.

¹ The term ‘Samhitā of the Sāma-veda’ ought to be understood here in its narrower sense as denoting the so-called first book of the Samhitā, the Kāanda-Ārāñika or collection of Yoni verses (see on the relation between this collection and the second book my remarks in the Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, vol. xxxviii, pp. 464 seq.). Prof. Knauer in his list of the verses quoted by Gobhila (p. 29 of his translation of the Gobhiliya-Gṛhya) states that Sāma-veda II, 1138 (= I, 276) and 1139 is quoted in Gobhila III, 9, 6, but an accurate analysis of the words of Gobhila shows that the verse II, 1139 is not referred to, so that only the verse II, 1138 remains, which occurs also in the first book of the Samhitā. The ‘dvīka’ of which Gobhila speaks in that Sūtra is not a dvīka, but, as the commentators rightly understand it (see Knauer’s edition of the text, p. xii), it is a dyad of Sāmans or melodies, the two Kāvasha Sāmans which are based on the text I, 276, and are given in the great Sāma-veda edition of Satyavrata Sāmasramin, vol. i, pp. 566, 567.

² In the same way the Gṛhya-sūtra of Āpastamba stands in connection with a similar collection of Gṛhya verses and formulas, the Āpastambīya-Mantrapāṭha.

To begin with that side of the question regarding which there can scarcely be any doubt: it is certain, I believe, that Gobhila supposes the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa to be known to the students of his Sūtra. The reasons which show this are obvious enough. By far the greater part of the Mantras of which Gobhila quotes the first words, are not found in the Śaṁveda nor, for the most part, in any other Vedic Šaṁhitā, except in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, in which they stand in exactly the same order in which they are referred to by Gobhila. The descriptions of the Grhyya sacrifices by Gobhila would have been meaningless and useless, and the sacrificer who had to perform his domestic ceremonies according to the ritual of Gobhila, would have been unable to do so, unless he had known those Mantras as contained in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa. And not only the Mantras, but also the order in which the Mantras stood, for Sūtras such as, for instance, Gobh. II, i, 10 ('With the two following verses he should wash,' &c.), would have no meaning except for one who had studied the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa which alone could show which 'the two following verses' were.

There are, consequently, two possibilities: either the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa existed before the Gobhiliya-sūtra, or the two works have been composed together and on one common plan. It is the first of these alternatives which Prof. Knauer maintains; I wish, on the other hand, to call the attention of Vedic scholars to some facts which seem to me to render the second more probable.

1 Cf. Knauer's Introduction, pp. 24, 31 seq.

A great part of the Mantras which have to be recited, according to Gobhila, at the performance of the Grihīya ceremonies, are not given in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, but they are either found in the Sāma-veda-Samhitā and then their Pratikas are quoted by Gobhila, or they are cited by Gobhila in extenso. Thus for the ceremonies described in the first Prapāṭhaka of Gobhila, such as the morning and evening offerings and the sacrifices of the full and new moon, the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa gives, with one single exception, no Mantras at all; but those Mantras, most of which consist only of a few words, are given by Gobhila only. It is scarcely to be believed that in a Sāma which had to contain the Mantras required for the performance of the Grihīya sacrifices, the Mantras belonging to the two daily and the two fortnightly sacrifices, which occupy one of the first places among all Grihīya ceremonies and are treated of accordingly in all Grihīya-sūtras, should have been omitted, unless that Samhitā was intended to stand in relation to another text by which that deficiency was supplied; and the Gobhīliya-sūtra exactly supplies it. Prof. Knauer thinks that those Mantras were omitted because they had already found their place in the Srauta ritual; but we must not forget that in the Srauta ritual of the Sāma-vedins neither the Agnihotra nor the Darsapūrṇamaṇasa sacrifices, which are performed without the assistance of priests of the Udgātri class, are treated of. Moreover the one Mantra to which we have already alluded, the single one which corresponds in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa to the first book of Gobhila, seems to me quite sufficient to show that it was not the intention of the compiler of that text to disregard that group of sacrifices; he gave that Mantra only, because the other Mantras, consisting of but a few words, were given in extenso in the Gobhila text. The Mantra of which we speak, belongs to the description of the paryukshana of the sacrificial fire. The sacrificer pours out water to the south, the west, and the north of the fire, with the Mantras, 'Adite-numanyasva, 'Anumate-numanyasva, 'Sarasvaty anumanyasva'; then he sprinkles water round the fire once or three times with a longer Mantra, 'Deva Savita/prasuvam prasuvam yagnapatim bhagavya. Divyo gandharva/ketapuk ketam nah punatu. Vākaspatir vākam nah svadatu.' This last one is the Mantra given in its entirety in the Mantra-Brāhmaḥa, while Gobhila¹ has only the first words of it. To assume here that the author of the Mantra-Brāhmaḥa knew only of that one Mantra, and that at the time of Gobhila the custom of the Sāma-vedins had undergone a change, so that they used four Mantras instead of the one, would be, in my opinion, an artificial and not very probable way of explaining the facts; a much more natural supposition would be, I believe, that the Sūtra and the Mantra-Brāhmaḥa describe one and the same form of the ceremony, so that the Brāhmaḥa, by omitting the short Mantras, which were given in the Sūtra in their entirety, implicitly refers to the Sūtra, and the Sūtra, on the other hand, by quoting only the first words of the longer Mantra, refers to the Brāhmaḥa in which the full text of that Mantra was given.

Among the numerous ceremonies described by Gobhila, which could furnish the occasion for similar remarks, we select only two: the rites performed in the evening of the wedding-day², and the sacrifice on the full-moon day of Āsvayuṇa³. The bridegroom, having carried away his bride from her home, takes her to the house of a Brāhmaḥa, and when the stars have appeared, he makes six oblations with the six verses lekhāsandhiṣṭu pakṣhmasu (Mantra-Br. I, 3, 1–6): these are given in the Mantra-Brāhmaḥa, and Gobhila has only the Pratika. Then follow two short Mantras: the bride, to whom the polar-star has been shown, addresses that star with the words: dhruvam asi dhruvāham patikule bhūyāsam amushyāsāv iti; and when she sees the star Arundhati, she says, ruddhāham asmi. As the full wording of these Mantras is given by Gobhila, they are omitted in the Brāhmaṇa. Finally the bridegroom recites over the bride the Rik dhruvā dyaur dhruvā prithivi, &c.; this we find in the M.-B. (I, 3, 7), the Pratika only being quoted by Gobhila. If one were to suppose here that in the two texts two different stages in the development of this ceremony are represented, so that only the Mantras lekhāsandhishu and dhruvā dyaur would belong to the more ancient form of it, while the Mantras dhruvam asī and ruddhāham asmi would have been introduced at a later time, it may perhaps not be possible to disprove, in the strictest sense of the word, such an opinion. But I think the data we have given point to another solution of the problem which, if not the only admissible, is yet the most probable and natural one. Gobhila gave the full wording of the shorter Mantras with which the description of the ceremony could be interwoven without becoming obscure or disproportionate; the longer Mantras would have interrupted, rather tediously and inconveniently, the coherency of his ritual statements; so he separated them from the rest of his work and made a separate Saṃhitā of them. It is true that there are some exceptions to the rule that all long Mantras are given in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa and all short Mantras only in the Sūtra: on the one hand, there are some Mantras of considerable extent that are given by Gobhila and omitted in the Brāhmaṇa, thus, for instance, the Mantra yady asi saumī used at a preparatory ceremony that belongs to the Puṇṇasavana. On the other hand, a number of short Mantras which Gobhila gives in extenso, are found nevertheless also in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa: such is the case, for instance, with many of the Mantras belonging to the worship of the Fathers, Gobhila IV, 2, 3, Mantra-Br. II. 3.

1 Gobh. II, 6, 7. It is possible, though we have no positive evidence for this conjecture, that such statements regarding preparatory or auxiliary ceremonies may here and there have been added to the Sūtra collection in a later time. The Khādira-Grīhya (II, 2, 20) has instead of that long Mantra only a few words which in the Gobhiliya-sūtra stand at the end of it.
It appears then, that allowance must be made for a certain inconsistency or carelessness in the distribution of the material between the two texts: and such an assumption will easily be allowed by any one who does not entertain very exaggerated ideas as to the care and reflection which presided over the composition of the Sutra texts.

I will add only a few words concerning a second Grihya ceremony, which calls for the same sort of comment as the rites which have just been discussed. For the offering on the day of the full moon, Gobhila prescribes (III, 8, 2) first the verse á no mitravaruṇā, second the verse mā nas toke. The Mantra-Brāhmaṇa (II, 1, 8) has the second of these verses only, not the first: conversely, the first verse alone, and not the second, is to be found in the Samhitā of the Sāma-veda (I, 220). We could hardly assume, as I think, that the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa presupposed another form of the rite differing from Gobhila’s; we should be much more inclined to consider the leaving out of that matter, which was contained in other texts of the Sāma-veda, as a proof that the compiler of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa assumed that those texts were known.

And this brings me to one of Prof. Knauer’s conjectures concerning the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa which I have not yet touched. According to tradition we consider the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa as belonging to the Sāma-veda; in the Calcutta edition it is designated as the ‘Sāma-vedasya Mantra-Brāhmaṇam.’ Prof. Knauer thinks that it is doubtful whether the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa belonged to the Sāma-veda originally. He conjectures that it existed already in the 1 Any one who holds the view that the ritualistic formulas, which are not contained in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, represent later extensions of the ceremonies in question, will do well to notice how in any one of the offerings of the Śrauta ritual which we possess, both in the old description of the Sāhītā and Brāhmaṇa texts, and in the more recent description of the Śutra texts, Mantras have been added in more recent times to the former ones. I think that it would be difficult to draw from such observations any argument of analogy calculated to support Dr. Knauer’s opinion as to the relation of the Mantras in Gobhila and in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa.

INTRODUCTION.

period during which the separate schools were as yet in the process of sifting, when there were as yet no Sáma-vedists in the later and stricter sense of the term ¹. For out of 249 Mantras of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa there are only four which are found in the Sáma-veda ², as Prof. Knauer has shown, while a much greater number of these Mantras occur in the other Vedic Samhitás. I should be inclined to conclude the other way: just because the author of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa presupposed a knowledge of the Samhitás of the Sáma-veda, but not of the other Vedas—or in other words because he destined his work for Sáma-vedins, he did not need to repeat what was in the Sáma-veda, but was compelled to incorporate in his compilation the Mantras out of the Rig-veda or of the Yagur-veda ³. Moreover, I would draw the same conclusions from the Mantras cited by Gobhila which are absent in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, as I did from the Mantras which occur in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, but are not to be found in the Sáma-veda. Those Mantras are all to be found in the Sáma-veda with the exception of those which Gobhila has in extenso, and which therefore could be omitted in the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa. If we examine the thirteen Mantras collected by Prof. Knauer (p. 29), we find that in the case of nine of them the passage of the Sáma-veda (always of the first Arūka of the Sáma-veda) where they are to be found is quoted by Prof. Knauer.

¹ Besides the reasons given below in opposition to this conjecture, I may be permitted to point out that this hypothesis is contrary to the whole chronology of the Grhya literature which we endeavoured to arrive at in the general introduction. It is a priori extremely improbable that there was a Grhya Samhitá at a time when there was as yet no Sáma-veda.

³ Notice that of the four exceptional cases which we put together in the previous note, three cases are Mantras which are found only in the second Arūka of the Sáma-veda, not in the first (cf. above, p. 3, note 1). The fourth verse (M.-B. II, 4, 2) is to be found in the first Arūka, it is true, but it stands closely related to two verses which are not to be found in that Arūka (M.-B. II, 4, 3-4). This explains why it was put into the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa, as well as those two verses.
The four other cases are:

- tak kákshur devahitam, III, 8, 5.
- sam anyá yanti, III, 9, 7.
- pragápataye, IV, 7, 36.

Of these Mantras the first is contained in the Sáma-veda (I, 369) just as the nine first-mentioned ones; the second is quoted by Gobhila in extenso; the third is to be found in the Árauyyaka division of the Sáma-veda I (vol. ii, p. 292, ed. Bibl. Ind.); in the fourth finally the text is corrupt; it is intended for the verse out of the Mantra-Bráhmaṇa Pragápatana tvam etáany anyáḥ. Thus the four apparent exceptions all vanish, and we have in the Mantras which are absent in the Mantra-Bráhmaṇa a new proof that this text belongs to the literature of the Sáma-veda.

Thus, according to my view, we may describe the origin of the Mantra-Bráhmaṇa as follows. The Sáma-veda contained in its Samhitá a much smaller number of Mantras applicable to the Gríhya rites than either the Rig-veda or the Yağur-veda; the peculiar character of the Sáman texts, intended for musical recitations at the most important sacrificial offerings, was quite remote from the character of formulas suitable for the celebration of a wedding, for the birth of a child, for the consecration of fields and flocks. Hence it is that, to a much greater extent than Árvaláyana or Påraskara, Gobhila mentions Mantras for which a reference to the Samhitá was not sufficient; and this led to the compiling of a separate Samhitá of such Gríhya-mantras, which presupposes the Gríhya-sūtra, just as the latter presupposes this Samhitá. The almost perfect agreement of the Mantra-Bráhmaṇa with Gobhila furnishes a valuable

1 One will not object that the Mantras in question which are absent in the Mantra-Bráhmaṇa are all to be found in the Rig-veda as well as in the Sáma-veda. Since almost all the verses of the Sáma-veda are taken from the Rig-veda there is nothing astonishing about this. Before one could conclude from this that the Mantra-Bráhmaṇa belongs to the Rig-veda he would have to answer the question, How is it that the verses in question are always verses of the Rig-veda which are repeated in the Sáma-veda? Why are there not among them verses which are not to be found in the Sáma-veda?
warrant for the good preservation of the two texts: of small discrepancies I have noted only two: Mantra-Brāhmaṇa I, 6, 15, the formula āgaṇtrā samaganмаhǐ is given for the ceremony of the Upanayana, while Gobhila does not prescribe this Mantra for this ceremony, although other Grihya texts do; and secondly, the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa II, 5, 1–7 does not consist of six verses as Gobh. IV, 6, 5–6 allows us to assume, but of seven verses.

In concluding this introduction notice is to be drawn to the fact that the text of Gobhila has preserved for us the traces of a division differing from the one into four Prapāthakas which is handed down by tradition: in a number of places certain Sūtras or the last words of certain Sūtras are set down twice, a well-known way of indicating the close of a chapter. This repetition, besides occurring at the end of the first, third, and fourth Prapāthaka (not at the end of the second), is to be found in the following places which become more frequent towards the close of the work: I, 4, 31; III, 6, 15; IV, 1, 22; 4, 34; 5, 34; 6, 16.
GRIHYA-SŪTRA OF GOBHILA.

PRAPĀTHAKA I, KĀNDIKĀ 1.

1. Now henceforth we shall explain the domestic sacrifices.

2. He should perform (the ceremonies) wearing the sacrificial cord on his left shoulder and having sipped water.

3. During the northern course of the sun, at the time of the increasing moon, on an auspicious day, before noon: this he should know as the (proper) time (for performing the ceremonies).

5. I cannot give this translation of the words ‘sarvāny evān-vāhāryavanti’ without expressing my doubts as to whether the commentator, whom I have followed, is right. He says: ‘anu paskād āhriyate yasmāt prakrītam karma iti, anu paskād āhriyate yat prastutāt (prakrītāt?) karmāna iti ānvāhāryam nāndīmukhāsṛāddham dakshiṇā kokyate.’ It is evident that the first explanation of anvāhārya as a ceremony after which the chief sacrifice follows, is inadmissible. Below, IV, 4, 3. 4, Gobhila himself defines the Anvāhārya Śrāddha as a monthly ceremony (comp. Manu III, 123; Max Müller, India, p. 240); it is, consequently, different from a Śrāddha accompanying each Grihya sacrifice. The Sloka which the commentary quotes from a ‘grihyāntara’ seems to me not to remove the doubt; I think rather that it contains a speculation based on this very passage of Gobhila, taken in the sense in Beginning from the centre of it he should draw a line from west to east, (another line) from south to north which touches that line at its western end, and three lines from west to east (touching the northwards-turned line at three different points) in its midst (i.e. at neither of its ends). He then should besprinkle (those lines with water).

10. In this way the Lakshava (i.e. the preparation of the place for the sacred fire) is performed everywhere.

Thus I rather believe that we ought to understand anvâhârya as a mess of food like that offered after the darsapûramâsau sacrifices to the officiating priests (Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsopfer, 133), and I propose to translate: All (sacrifices) are followed by (the offering of) the Anvâhârya food (to the priest).

7. The text goes on to treat of the setting up of the domestic fire. Khâdîra-Grihya I, 3, 1.

14. On the full-moon day or on the new-moon day: then he should celebrate the setting up of his (sacred domestic) fire.

15. He should get fire from a Vaisya's house or from a frying-pan, and should set it up (as his sacred fire);

16. Or (he should fetch it) from the house of one who offers many sacrifices, be it a Brâhmaṇa, or a Râganya, or a Vaisya.

17. Or he may kindle another fire by attrition and may set it up.

18. That is pure, but it does not bring prosperity.

19. He may do what he likes (of the things stated as admissible in the last Sûtras).

20. When he puts (at the end of his studentship) the last piece of wood (on the fire), or when he sacrifices when going to seize the hand of a wife, that fire he should keep.

21. That becomes his (sacred) domestic fire.

22. Thereby his morning oblation has been offered.

way indicated by the Grihya-samgraha I, 77; and by Sâńkhâyana (I, 1, 5): prete vâ grhâpatau svâyam gyâyân. I think the parameshthi is the same person as the gyâyân. The commentary gives a different explanation: parameshthi agnir ity ââakshate, tasya parameshthi hino gnekh karanam yathoktena vidhinâ svîkaranam.

24. Before the time has come for setting the fire in a blaze, he should fetch in the evening and in the morning from a hidden place the water with which the different acts (such as sipping water) are performed.

25. Or (he should fetch water only) in the evening.

26. Or he should draw it out of a water-pot or of a barrel.

27. Before sunset he should set the fire in a blaze, and sacrifice the evening oblation after sunset.

28. In the morning he should set the fire in a blaze before sunrise, and should sacrifice the morning oblation before sunrise or after it.

putting of fuel on the fire, and in the second case, the oblations of fried grain, &c., prescribed for the wedding, are considered as the sacrificer's morning oblation in his newly-established Grihyā fire, so that the regular oblations have to begin with the sāyamāhuti.

2, 1-4. Rules regarding the Upavīta. Khādīra-Grihyā I, 1, 4-6. Compare the detailed description of the nine threads of which the Upavīta-string should consist, in the Grihyā-samgraha II, 48 seqq. A string was evidently considered as the regular and preferable form of the Upavīta; with regard to the second kind of Upavīta mentioned in Sūtra 1, the commentary says, 'A garment (is used),
2. Raising his right arm, putting the head into (the upavita), he suspends (the cord) over his left shoulder, so that it hangs down on his right side: thus he becomes yagñoupavitin.

3. Raising his left arm, putting the head into (the upavita), he suspends it over his right shoulder, so that it hangs down on his left side: thus he becomes prākśināvitin.

4. Prākśināvitin, however, he is only at sacrifices offered to the Manes.

5. Having gone in a northern direction from the fire, having washed his hands and feet, and having seated himself, he should sip water three times and wipe off (the water) twice.

6. Having besprinkled his feet (with water) let him besprinkle his head.

7. Let him touch the organs of his senses with water:

8. The two eyes, the nose, the two ears.

9. Whatever (limb of his body) requires his consideration (whether it is pure or not), that he should touch with water (i.e. with a wet hand).

10. Here they say:

11. Let him not touch (himself with water, or sip water) while walking,

12. Nor standing,

13. Nor laughing,

14. Nor looking about,

15. Nor without bending down, if the Upavīta has been lost, for instance, in a forest, and if it is impossible to get a string.' A similar remark is given with reference to the third kind of Upavīta, the rope of Kusa grass.

16. Nor (throwing up the water) with his fingers,
17. Nor except with the (proper) Tirtha,
18. Nor uttering a sound,
19. Nor without looking (at the water),

17. As to the Tirthas (or parts of the hand) sacred to the different deities or beings, comp. Vasishtha III, 64 seqq., &c. See also Manu II, 58.
20. According to the commentary he has to hold his hands between his knees. Comp. Sāṅkh.-Grhya I, 10, 8. Thus the shoulders are brought forward.
21–27. These Sūtras form three regular Sloka hemistichs. Only at the end of the second hemistich there is a metrical irregularity (sopānātkaḥ kvaṭīt standing at the end of the verse).
25. Kāsaktīkah, which the commentary explains as a compound of ka, 'the head,' and āsaktīkā = āveshīkā.
29. In other texts (for instance, Manu II, 62; Vasishtha III, 31 seqq.) it is stated that a Brāhmaṇa should sip water that reaches his heart, a Kshatriya water reaching his throat, a Vaiśya water that wets his palate; a Śūdra should only touch water with his lips.
32. Having slept, or eaten, or sneezed, or taken a bath, or drunk something, or changed (his garments), or walked on the high road, or gone to a cemetery, he should sip water and then sip water again.

KÂNDIKÂ 3.

1. Having put wood on the (sacred) fire, having swept (the ground) round it, he should, bending his right knee, pour out to the south of the fire his joined hands full of water with (the words), ‘Aditi! Give thy consent!’

2. To the west with (the words), ‘Anumati! Give thy consent!’

3. To the north with (the words), ‘Sarasvati! Give thy consent!’

4. With (the words), ‘God Savitri! Give thy impulse!’ (Mantra-Brâhmana I, 1, 1) he should sprinkle (water) round the fire once or thrice so as to keep his right side turned towards it—

5. Interchanging the points at which he begins and ends the (sprinkling of water), and sprinkling so as to encompass what he is going to offer (with the streams of water).

6. Let him then make oblations of the sacrificial food, be it prepared or raw, over the fire.

32. This Sûtra again forms a Sloka, though a slightly irregular Sloka.

3. Rules regarding the daily morning and evening sacrifice.

6. The sacrificial food is either krita (prepared) or akrita (unprepared). A mess of boiled rice, for instance, is krita, rice grains are akrita.
7. If it is raw, he should sacrifice after having washed it and having let the water drop off.

8. If it consists in curds or milk or rice gruel, (he should sacrifice it) with a brazen bowl, or with the pot in which the oblations of boiled rice are prepared, or also with the (sacrificial spoon called) Sruva;

9. In the evening the first (oblation) with (the formula), 'To Agni Svāhā!' the second silently, in the middle and in the north-eastern part (of the fire);

10. In the morning the first (oblation) with (the formula), 'To Sūrya Svāhā!' the second again silently, again in the middle and in the north-eastern part (of the fire).

11. Having put a piece of wood (on the fire), and having again sprinkled (water) round it, he should pour out again his joined hands full of water in the same way (as prescribed in the Sūtras 1–3); in the Mantras he says, 'Thou hast given thy consent' (instead of 'Give thy consent').

12. Having circumambulated the fire so as to turn his right side towards it, having poured out the remains of water, and filled the vessel again, and put it (in its proper place), (he may do) whatever his business is.

9. The first oblation is made in the middle, the second, sacred to Pragāpati (Śāṅkhāyana I, 3, 15, &c.), in the north-eastern part of the sacred fire. The tenth Sūtra of course is to be understood in the same way.

12. The water is that mentioned chap. 1, 24. With regard to
13. In that way, from that time (in which he has begun to offer the two daily sacrifices) he should sacrifice, or should have sacrificed, over the (sacred) domestic fire, till the end of his life.

14. Here now they say:

15. 'If they like, his wife may offer the morning and evening oblations over the domestic fire. For his wife is (as it were) his house, and that fire is the domestic fire.'

16. When the morning meal or the evening meal is ready, he should make (his wife) say, 'It is ready!'

17. In an unbroken voice (?), having made himself pure,

18. He replies in a loud voice, 'Om!' Then in yathārtham the commentary says, 'yathārtham karmāpavargavihitam Vāmadevyagyānādikām prātarāhitapāśkādvāhitam brahmâyāgnām vā kuryād iti vákyasēshah.' Similarly in the note on II, 4, 11 it is said, 'yathārtham iti karma iti parisamāptir ukyate;' II, 8, 17: 'yathārtham tantrasamāpanam kuryāt,' &c. In my translation I have adopted the opinion of Professor Weber (Indische Studien, V, 375), according to whom yathārtham simply means, '(he should behave) as required by circumstances;' 'he should do what happens to be his business.'

13. The last words are ā gī vitāvabrīthāt, which literally means 'till the Avabhṛthā bath of his life.' The Avabhṛthā bath is the bath taken at the end of certain sacrifices, so that the Avabhṛthā of life signifies death.

16-18. Khādira-Gṛhyya, l. l. 18, 19. In my translation of Sūtra 17 I have adopted, though not quite without doubt, the conjecture of Professor Roth given in Professor Knauer's note, p. 137. Professor Roth writes rāebhāṅgayā vākā or rāebhagayā vākā: he says simply 'om,' and not 'ō-o-ō-ō-ō-om.' According to the commentary Sūtra 17 would refer to the wife, not to the husband.

18. The MSS. give mā khyāyā and mā kshā. We ought to read, tan mā kshāyīt yuḥma. Comp. Āpastamba II 2, 3, 11 a low voice: 'To that (food) I bring adoration. May it not fail!'

KĀNDIKĀ 4.

1. He then should silently offer the Balis.
2. Let him speak only what refers to the due preparation of the food. With guests he may converse, if he likes.
3. He then should take some portion of food which is fit for sacrifice, should pour over it some liquid fit for sacrifice (such as ghee, milk, or curds), and should sacrifice it silently in the fire with his hand.
4. The first oblation is sacred to Pragāpati, the second to (Agni) Svishṭakrit.
5. He then should offer the Balis, inside or outside (the Agnyagāra), having well cleansed the ground.
6. Let him pour out water once, and put down Balis in four places, and finally sprinkle once (water on the four Balis).
7. Or let him for each Bali which he puts down, sprinkle (water) before and afterwards.
8. What he puts down first, that is the Bali belonging to the Earth. What in the second place, to Vāyu. What in the third place, to the Visve devās. What in the fourth place, to Pragāpati.
9. Then he should offer other Balis (near) the water-pot, the middle (post, and) the door: the first Bali is sacred to the Waters, the second to the Herbs and Trees, the third to the Ether.

9. According to the commentary the first of these three Balis has
10. Then he should offer another Bali in the bed or in the privy. That Bali belongs either to Kâma or to Manyu.

11. Then (another Bali) on the heap of sweepings; that (belongs) to the hosts of Rakshas.

12. The remnants of the Balis he should besprinkle with water, and should pour them out towards the south from right to left; they belong to the Fathers.

13. Let him sacrifice in the fire sitting.

14. Let him make the oblation to the Fathers sitting; the other (Balis he may offer) as it happens.

15. He should, however, offer those Balis himself as long as he stays at home.

16. Or another person who must be a Brâhmaṇa (should offer them for him).

17. Both the husband and his wife (should offer them):

18. This is the rule for householders.

19. The wife in the evening, the man in the morning: thus (it is stated).

20. He should offer such Balis of all food whatever, be it prepared for the Fathers, or for auspicious to be offered near the water-pot, the second near the middle door of the house, the third (comp. Gautama V, 16) in the air. With the genitives the word samīpe is supplied. It is difficult to understand why the author, if his intention had been to state three places in which the Balis had to be offered, should have mentioned only two. Thus I believe that the right explanation is that of Professor Knauer, who takes madhyama in the sense of the middle post of the house (comp. III, 3, 31).

11. The commentary explains avasalavi here, as is frequently the case, by pitṛitirthena. I agree with the opinion pronounced in the Petersburg Dictionary, in rejecting this explanation.

purposes (for instance, for being offered to Brāhmaṇas), or for (ordinary) purposes.

21. Only in the case of a sacrifice (this rule) ceases.

22. If rice and barley are prepared for one and the same meal, he should, having offered (Balis) of the one or the other (kind of food), consider his duty as fulfilled.

23. If the food is cooked at different times for one meal, he should perform this Bali ceremony only once.

24. If food is prepared at different places for one family, he should perform this Bali ceremony only from (the food which is prepared in) the kitchen belonging to the householder.

25. However (of the persons belonging to the family) he whose food becomes ready before (that of the householder), (that person) should offer the prescribed portion in the fire, and give to a Brāhmaṇa his share (of the food), and then should eat himself.

26. He whose (food becomes ready) after (that of the householder), should only eat.

27. Here they say also:

28. 'At the end of that offering of Balis let him pronounce a wish. Then it will be fulfilled to him.'

29. He himself, however, should offer the Āsasya Bali, from the barley(-harvest) till the rice(-harvest), and from the rice(-harvest) till the barley(-harvest). This is called the Āsasya Bali.

22. Kāla I take, as the commentator does, for bhoganaṅkalā.

23. Here again kāla occurs in the same sense. Comp. Khādīra-Grhyā I, 5, 34.

29. Khādīra-Grhyā I, 5, 37. The barley-harvest is in the hot season, the rice-harvest in autumn (see Zimmer, Altindisches Leben, 243). The sacrificer offers barley from the barley-harvest till the rice-harvest; and rice from the rice-harvest till the barley-harvest.
30. Thus he obtains long life.
31. When a donation has been made, he should offer a Bali of chaff, of the scum of boiled rice, and of water. This is sacred to Rudra. This is sacred to Rudra.

KÂNDIKĀ 5.

1. Now at the times of the new moon and of the full moon (the following ceremonies are performed).
2. Let him fast on that full-moon day (when the full moon rises) at the meeting (of day and night).
3. The following day, according to some (teachers).
4. And on that day on which the moon is not seen, (he should fast, considering it) as the new-moon day.
5. The ends of the half-months are the time for fasting, the beginnings for sacrifice.
6. With the sacrificial food of the new-moon

This Bali is called á-sasya, because it is offered until (á) the next crop (sasya) is ripe. As to the regulation that the sacrificer has to offer it himself, compare above, Sūtras 15–19.

31. Khâdira-Grhîya I, 5. 30. The repetition of the last words makes it probable that this Sūtra was at one time considered the end of the first book. Comp. Introduction, p. 11.

5. Description of the sacrifices of the full and new moon. Paradigm of the regular Sthâlipâka offering. The first twelve Sūtras of this chapter have been translated by Professor Weber, Ueber den Vedakalender namens Jyotisham, pp. 50 seq.

2. See the note below at Sūtra 10.

3. With these two Sūtras, ‘sandhyām paurnamāsim upavaset; uttarām ity eke,’ a passage should be compared which is identically found in the Aitareya (VII, 11), and in the Kaushitaka Brāhmaṇa (III, 1): pûrvām paurnamāsim upavased iti Pâṅgyam, uttarām iti Kaushitakam.

6. The month is reckoned here, as is usually done, as beginning with the fortnight of the increasing moon.
sacrifice he celebrates the first half (of the month), with that of the full-moon sacrifice the second.

7. Full-moon is the greatest distance of sun and moon; new-moon is their nearest approach.

8. That day on which the moon is not seen, that he should take as the day of new-moon.

9. Sometimes he may also while (the moon) is (still) visible (accept it as the day of new-moon); for (already then the moon) has made its way.

10. The time of full-moon is reckoned in three ways: (when the full moon rises at) the meeting (of day and night), or when it rises after sunset, or when it stands high (in the sky at sunset).

11. Now on what day it becomes full—

12. The doctrine on this point has to be studied

7. Here begins a new exposition of the question of full and new moon which stands independently by the side of the former sections, and which Gobhila has not taken much care to weld together with them. Comp. Sûtra 10 with Sûtras 2 and 3, and Sûtra 8 with Sûtra 4.

10. The first of the three times is that mentioned in Sûtra 2. It seems to me not very safe to interpret sandhyâ in that modern sense, in which sandhî is used, for instance, in the verse quoted by Mâdhava, Weber, Jyotisha 51, so that it designates the meeting-point of the bright and of the dark fortnight (‘avartane yadâ sandhiḥ paramvratipadador bhavet,’ &c.). If sandhyâ were that, we should expect that the same word would occupy a similar position in the definition of amâvâsyâ. I prefer, therefore, with the commentary, to understand sandhyâ in its ancient sense, as the time which divides day from night. Thus sandhyâ paurnamâsî, the full-moon day, on which the moon rises at the meeting of day and night, stands in opposition to uttarâ paurnamâsî (Sûtra 2), or to astamitoditâ (scil. paurnamâsî, Sûtra 10), exactly in the same way as in the Brâhmana passages quoted above (note on § 3) pûrvâ paurnamâsî is opposed to uttarâ paurnamâsî. The second and third cases are those of the full moon rising (shortly) after sunset, and of the moon becoming full when standing high in the sky.
separately. One should study it, or should ascertain (the exact time of) the Parvan from those who know it.

13. Now on the day which is the fast-day, on that day, in the forenoon, having offered his morning oblation, he besmears that surface on which the fire is placed, on all sides with cow-dung.

14. He then gets the pieces of wood ready (which are to be put on the fire)—of Khadira or of Palâsa wood.

15. If Khadira or Palâsa wood cannot be obtained, it may be wood—as far as it serves the purpose—of any tree, with the exception of Vibhidaka, Tilvaka, Bâdhaka, Niva, Nimba, Râgavriksha, Salmali, Aralu, Dadhittha, Kovidâra, Sleshmâtaka wood.

16. The Barhis consists of Kusa grass cut off at the points at which the blades diverge from the main stalk.

17. (The blades should be) cut off near the roots at (the ceremonies directed to) the Fathers.

18. If that (i.e. Kusa grass) cannot be obtained, (he may take) any kind of grass, with the exception of Sûka grass, of Saccharum reed, of such grass as is apt to break, of Balbagâ grass, of Mutava, of Amphidonax reed, of Sunittha.

19. (He should get ready the following things, viz.) Âgya, rice or barley to be cooked for the sacrifice, the pot in which the oblation of cooked rice (or barley) is prepared, the pot-ladle, the Sruva, the water fetched from a hidden place—

20. And the other things which we shall mention in the course of (our exposition of) the ritual.

19. As to anuguptâ âpa, see above, chap. 1, 9.
21. On that day he should not go away (from his house on a journey, &c.);
22. Even from a distant place he should return to his house.
23. (On that day) he may buy goods from others, but not sell (such goods).
24. Let him not speak much.
25. Let him strive to speak the truth.
26. In the afternoon husband and wife, after having bathed, should eat fast-day food which is pleasant to them. It should contain butter (and should be prepared) in the due way.

KĀNDIKĀ 6.

1. Thus has spoken MānātantaVyā: 'Unoffered indeed becomes the offering of a man who does not eat fast-day food.
2. 'He becomes powerless. Hunger will attack him. He does not gain favour among people. His offspring will be perverse.
3. 'But he who eats fast-day food, becomes powerful. Hunger will not attack him. He gains

6, 1. The teacher’s name is spelt elsewhere MānāntantaVyā, which seems to be the more correct spelling. The Khādīra-Grīhya (II, 1, 5) has MānadvantaVyā. Dr. Knauer has called attention to several other blunders of the MSS., which are unusually frequent just in this passage. For I have no doubt that in spite of the unanimous agreement of the MSS., we are to change mānushyaṁ-hūṭīr into mānushasyaṁ-hūṭīr, and I think it very probable, to say the least, that in Sūtra 4 kāmayetau-paṁ-saṁthikam should be corrected into kāmayeyātām aupavasathikam, though here the singular could possibly be defended by very faithful believers in the authority of the MSS. favour among people. His offspring will be still more blessed.

4. 'Therefore (husband and wife) should eat fast-day food which is pleasant to them.'

5. Let them sleep that night on the ground.

6. They should spend that night so as to alternate their sleep with waking, entertaining themselves with tales or with other discourse.

7. But they should avoid doing anything unholy
(such as cohabiting together).

8. It is said, that when on a journey, he should not fast.

9. For (say they, in that case) the observance has to be kept by his wife.

10. Let him do (herein) what he likes.

11. In the same way also one who has set up the (Srauta) fires should fast—

12. And (he should observe) what is enjoined by the sacred tradition.

13. Now in the forenoon, after (the sacrificer) has offered his morning oblation, and has walked round the fire on its front side, and strewn to the south of the fire eastward-pointed Darbha grass—

14. (The Brahman) stations himself to the east of that (grass), facing the west, and with the thumb and the fourth finger of his left hand he takes one grass blade from the Brahman’s seat and throws it away to the south-west, in the intermediate direction (between south and west), with (the words), ‘Away has been thrown the dispeller of wealth.’

4. Or, which is pleasant to him? See the note on § 1.

14. The ceremonies stated in this Sûtra have to be performed by the Brahman. This is stated in the commentary, and the com-
15. Having touched water, he then sits down on the Brahman’s seat, with (the words), ‘I sit down on the seat of wealth.’

16. Facing the fire he sits silently, raising his joined hands, till the end of the ceremony.

17. Let him speak (only) what refers to the due performance of the sacrifice.

18. Let him not speak what is unworthy of the sacrifice.

19. If he has spoken what is unworthy of the sacrifice, let him murmur a verse, or a Yaṅus, sacred to Vishnu.

20. Or let him only say, ‘Adoration to Vishnu!’

21. If one wishes, however, to do himself the work both of the Hotṛi and of the Brahman, he should in the same way place on the Brahman’s seat a parasol, or an outer garment, or a water-pot, or a parison of parallel texts leaves no doubt as to the correctness of this view. Thus Hiravyakeśin says (I, 1): etasmin kāle brahmā yaṅnopavītam krītvāpa ākāmyāpareṇāgniṃ dakshinātikramya brahmaṇasadānāṃ trīnaṃ nirasya, &c. Comp. also the corresponding passages of the Srauta ritual given by Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsofper, p. 17. I do not think it probable, however, that we should read brahmāsanāt, so that it would be distinctly expressed by the text that the Brahman is the subject (comp. Dr. Knauer’s Introduction, p. viii). For we read in this same Sūtra brahmāsanāt trīnaṃ abhisamgrīhya; in Sūtra 15, brahmāsana upavisati; in Sūtra 21, brahmāsane nidhāya: of these passages it is in the second made probable by the sense, and it is certain in the third, that brahmāsana is to be understood as a compound equal to brahmamsadana. Thus it would, in my opinion, be unnatural not to explain it in the same way also in the first passage. Parāvasu is opposed to Vasu (Sūtra 15) in the same way as some texts, for instance Āpastamba, oppose Parāgyasu to Arvāgyasu.

16 seqq. Khādira-Gṛihya I, 1, 19 seqq.

21. ‘In the same way’ refers to the ceremonies stated in Sūtras bolster of Darbha grass, and should return in the same way (in which he has gone to the Brahman's seat), and then should perform the other (duties).

Kândikâ 7.

1. He then washes the mortar, the pestle, and the winnowing basket, strews to the west of the fire eastward-pointed Darbha grass, and puts (the mortar, &c.) on (that grass).

2. He then pours out, with a brazen vessel or with the pot in which the oblations of cooked rice are prepared, the grain destined for sacrifice, rice or barley—

3. Once pronouncing the name of the deity (to whom the offering will be made): 'Agreeable to such and such (a deity) I pour thee out;' twice (it is done) silently.

4. Then to the west, with his face turned eastward, he begins to husk the grain, with his right hand lying over the left.

5. After the grain has three times been winnowed, he should wash it thrice (if it is destined) for the gods, they say, twice, if for men, once, if for the Fathers.

6. Having put a (Darbha) purifier (into the pot in which the oblation is to be prepared), he should pour the grain (into it).

7. He should cook the mess of sacrificial food so that it is well cooked, stirring it up (with the pot-ladle) from left to right.

8. When it has been cooked, he should sprinkle (Āgya) on it, should take it from the fire towards the north, and should again sprinkle (Āgya) on it.

9. Having put wood on the fire, he should strew Kusa grass round it on all sides, to the east, to the south, to the north, to the west—

10. On all sides in three layers or in five layers—

11. Thick, so that always an uneven number (of blades) are put together.

12. (He should strew) eastward-pointed grass, covering the roots with the points.

13. Or he should strew it to the west (of the fire), and should draw (some of the grass which he has strewn) from the south end and (some) from the north end, in an easterly direction.

14. He should (arrange the grass so as to) lay the points of the southern blades uppermost.

15. This rule for strewing (grass) round (the fire is valid) for all (ceremonies) at which oblations are made.

16. Some lay also branches of Sami wood or of Parna wood round (the fire).

11. This seems to me the most probable translation of ayugmasamhatam, on which expression Dr. Knauer’s note on pp. viii seq. of his Introduction should be compared. Comp. Hillebrandt, pp. 64 seq.

13-14. This is the same way of strewing the grass which is described in the Mânava-Grîhya I, 10, 4, 5; Khâdira-Grîhya I, 2, 9.

17. To the north (of the fire) a Sruva full of water (is placed): this is the Prauita water.

18. If there is (such water). Or it may be dispensed with, say some (teachers).

19. Having put the mess of cooked food on the Barhis, and put wood (on the fire), he prepares the Âgya.

20. (He may take) ghee, or oil made from Tila seeds, or curds, or milk, or rice gruel.

21. From that same Barhis (he takes two Darbha blades and) makes purifiers (of them), of the length of one span.

22. Putting an herb between (them and the instrument with which he cuts them), he cuts them off, not with his nail, with (the words), 'Purifiers are ye, sacred to Vishnu.'

23. He then wipes them with water, with (the words), 'By Vishnu's mind ye are purified.'

24. Having purified (the Âgya by pouring it into the Âgya pot, over which he has laid a Darbha purifier), he purifies it (in the pot) with the two northward-pointed purifiers (in the following way):

25. Holding them with his two thumbs and fourth fingers, he purifies (the Âgya) three times, from west to east, once with the Ya^us: 'May the god Savitri purify thee with this uninjured purifier, with the rays of the good sun;' twice silently.

— All the substances which are stated in this Sutra can be considered as Âgya. Grîhya-samgraha I, 106. 107.

26. He then should sprinkle them with water and should throw them into the fire.

27. Then, having put that Âgya on the fire, he should take it from (the fire) towards the north.

28. This is the way to prepare the Âgya.

KÂNDIKA 8.

1. To the east (is placed) the Âgya, to the west the mess of cooked food.

2. Having sprinkled (water) round (the fire) and poured Âgya on the mess of cooked food, he begins to sacrifice simply with the pot-ladle, picking out portions of the sacrificial food (without ‘underspreading’ and pouring Âgya over the Havis).

3. If he intends, however, to sacrifice so as to ‘underspread’ (the Havis with Âgya) and to pour (Âgya) over it, let him sacrifice first the two Âgya portions (in the following way):

4. He should take four portions of Âgya—five portions (are taken) by the Bhrigus—and should sacrifice from west to east, on the northern side with (the formula), ‘To Agni Svâhâ!’ on the southern side with (the words), ‘To Soma Svâhâ!’

5. He then cuts off (two or three Avadânas) from the Havis, having ‘spread under’ (Âgya).

8. He anoints the places from which he has cut them off (with Āgya) in order that the strength (of the Havis) may not be lost.

9. He should sacrifice over the middle of the fire with (the words), 'To Agni Svāhā!' —

10. Once or thrice, in that same way.

11. Now for the Svishṭakrīt (oblation), after having 'spread under' (Āgya), he cuts off once a very big (Avadāna) from the eastern part of the northern part (of the Havis). Twice he should sprinkle (Āgya) on it.

12. But if he (belongs to the families who) make five Avadānas, he should 'spread under' twice, and cut off (the Avadāna), and sprinkle (Āgya) on it twice.

13. He does not anoint the place from which he has cut off, in order that the strength (of the Havis) may be lost.

14. With the words, 'To Agni Svishṭakrīt

18. Having cut off (the Avadānas) for all (the single sacrifices), he sacrifices the Svishṭakrīt oblation only once.

19. After he has sacrificed, he should throw that pot-ladle (which he has used in the preceding ceremonies) into the fire.

20. Or having washed it, he should take with it (the rest of the sacrificial food), and should eat that.

given by Hillebrandt, l.l. 119, note 3. The Khādira-Grīhya has prāgudiḥkṣyām.

According to the commentary, etad would belong to sauvishṭakrītām (Sūtra 18): ‘After he has sacrificed that, he should throw the pot-ladle into the fire.’ The comparison of Baudhāyana I, 17, 23, atraitan mekshavam āhavanīye nuprahārati (Hillebrandt, p. 119, note 3), shows that the commentary is wrong, and that etad belongs to mekshavam.
21. The Sruva he should not throw into the fire, say some (teachers).

22. By one who has not set up the sacred fires, the mess of cooked food should be offered to Agni at the festivals both of the full and of the new moon.

23. To Agni, or to Agni and Soma, by one who has set them up, at the full-moon (sacrifice);

24. To Indra, or to Indra and Agni, or to Mahendra, at the new-moon (sacrifice).

25. Or also one who has set up the sacred fires, should offer it to Agni at the festivals both of the full and of the new moon.

26. Having put a piece of wood (on the fire), and having afterwards sprinkled (water) round (the fire), he performs the Yagñavâstu ceremony (in the following way):

27. From that same Barhis he should take a handful of Kusa grass, and should dip it thrice into the Âgya or into the Havis, the points, the middle, and the roots, with (the words), 'May the birds come, licking what has been anointed.'

28. He then should besprinkle that (handful of grass) with water, and should throw it into the fire with (the verse), 'Thou who art the lord of cattle, Rudra, who walkest with the lines (of cattle), the manly one: do no harm to our cattle; let this be offered to thee! Svâhâ!'

29. This (ceremony) they call Yagñavâstu.

KĀNDIKĀ 9.

1. He then should take away the remnants of the Havis in a northern direction, should take them out (of the vessel in which they are), and should give them to the Brahman.

2. He should try to satiate him.

3. They say indeed with regard to sacrifice: ‘Through the Brāhmaṇa’s being satiated (with sacrificial food) I become satiated myself.’

4. Then (he should give to the Brahman) what other food has just become ready.

5. Then he should try to gain the favour of Brāhmaṇas by (gifts of) food.

6. A full vessel constitutes the fee for the sacrifice; that he should give to the Brahman.

7. A brazen vessel or a wooden cup which has been filled with food, with prepared food or with raw food, or even only with fruits: this they call a full vessel.

8. The Brahman is the only officiating priest at the Pākayagūṇas.

9. (The sacrificer) himself is Hotra.

10. A full vessel (see Sūtra 7) is the lowest sacrificial fee at a Pākayagūṇa.

11. The highest is unlimited.

Agni, gave one hundred thousand (cows as the sacrificial fee).

13. Now if he should not be able to get for the morning or for the evening oblation, or for the sacrifices of the full or of the new moon at his (sacred) domestic fire, any substance fit for sacrifice or a person who could sacrifice (instead of himself, if he is prevented): what ought he to do?

14. Until the evening oblation the (time for the) morning oblation is not elapsed, nor the (time for the) evening oblation until the morning oblation. Until the new moon the (time for the) sacrifice of the full moon is not elapsed, nor the (time for the) sacrifice of the new moon until the full moon.

15. During that interval he should try to obtain sacrificial food or to find a sacrificer.

16. Or (if he does not succeed in this) he should cook fruits or leaves of trees or herbs which are sacrificially pure, and should sacrifice them.

17. Or he should at least sacrifice water; thus has said Pakayagaṇa, the son of Idā. For (even if he offers only water) the sacrifice has been performed.

18. And there is an expiation for one who has not sacrificed.

16 seqq. Khādira-Grhya II, 2, 10 seqq. In this teacher Pākayagaṇa, son of Idā, whose opinion on the performance of certain Pākayagaṇas is here stated, we have of course to see a fictitious sage of the same kind with the well-known Rishi Pragātha, to whom the authorship of a number of Sūktas in the Pragātha book (Rigveda, Mandala VIII) is ascribed.

18, 19. By the repetition of īti these Sūtras seem to be characterised as continuing the statement of Pākayagaṇa's opinion; comp. Dr. Knauer's Introduction, p. xviii. As to Sūtra 18, comp. Sānkhyāyana-Grhya I, 3, 9.
19. And, (says Pākayagūna,) a Brāhmāṇa should not omit to keep his vow.

20. Here they say also:

21. He should keep (his vow) during that time in which he does not sacrifice, by abstaining from food.

22. When he then has obtained (the necessary substances for sacrificing), he should make up for the (omitted) oblations.

23. For thus also his vow has been duly kept.

24. These rules (which have been given with regard to the sacrifices of the full and new moon) are valid for the Havis oblations which will be stated hereafter.

25. After the end of the Mantra follows the word Svāhā.

26. At Āgya oblations he should only prepare that Āgya (chap. 7, 28) and should sacrifice it, picking out portions of it. (He should) not (sacrifice) the two Āgya portions nor the Svishtakrīt.

27. At Āgya oblations he should, if no special rule is given, sacrifice with the Mahāvyāhrītīs before and after (the chief ceremonies).

22. 'He should count the omitted (oblations), should pour the corresponding number of oblations into his vessel, and should sacrifice them in the due way all at once with one Mantra. In the same way also the other oblations (belonging to other gods).'

the word āgyāhutishu in the beginning of Sūtra 26, and it would have been superfluous if he had repeated it in connection with the words nāgyabhāgau na svish/akrīt. In the corresponding Sūtras of the Khādirā the case was different, and there the words nāgyabhāgau na svish/akrīt inevitably required the addition of a word like āgyāhutishu, by which to show which class of sacrifices it was which required no Āgyabhaṅgas and no Svish/akrīt. The following word in the Khādirā text, however, anādēsa, should be referred, against tradition, to Sūtra 13, as is shown by the comparison of Sāṅkhāyana-Grūhya I, 12, 13.

19. Leading forward (from the house to the sacred fire, the bride) who is wrapped in her robe and wears the sacrificial cord over her left shoulder, he should murmur (the verse), ‘Soma gave her to the Gandharva’ (MB. I, 1, 7).

20. While she, to the west of the fire, pushes forward with her foot a rush-mat or something else of that kind, veiled (with clothes), he should make her say: ‘May the way which my husband goes, be open to me.’

21. If she does not murmur (these words out of shame, &c.), he should murmur (them, saying), ‘To her’ (instead of ‘To me’).

22. She should make the end of the rush-mat (Sūtra 20) reach the end of the Barhis.

23. On the east end of the rush-mat she sits down to the right of the bridegroom.

17–19. Khâdira-Grihya I, 3, 6. Yâgapavî tinîm in Sûtra 19 means, according to the commentary, that she wears her outer garment arranged like the sacrificial cord, over her left shoulder; for women are not allowed to wear the sacrificial cord itself.

4. Having sung the Vāmadevya, he should mount (again).

5. When they have arrived, the Vāmadevya (is sung).

6. When (the bride) has reached the house, Brāhmaṇa women of good character, whose husbands and sons are living, make her descend (from the chariot), and make her sit down on a bull’s hide with (the verse which the husband recites), ‘Here, ye cows, bring forth calves’ (MB. I, 3, 13).

7. They should place a boy in her lap.

8. Into the joined hands of that (boy) they should throw lotus-roots (?),

9. Or fruits.

10. After she has made that boy rise, she sacrifices the eight ‘firm’ Ḡṛya oblations with (the formula), ‘Here is steadiness’ (MB. I, 3, 14).

11. When she has finished, she puts a piece of wood (on the fire) and respectfully salutes the Gurus, according to seniority, with their Gotra names. Then they may do what they like.

Kāndikā 5.

1. Now (follow) the ceremonies of the fourth day.
2. Having put wood on the fire, he four times sacrifices expiatory Āgya oblations with (the formula), 'Agni! Thou art expiation' (MB. I, 4, 1)—
3. (And with the same formula), putting instead of Agni, Vāyu, Kāndra, and Sūrya;
4. A fifth oblation (with the names of the four gods) together, changing (in the Mantra the singular) into the plural.
5. The remnants of each oblation he should pour into a water-pot.
6. With that (Āgya) they besmear her body, including her hair and nails, remove (that water and Āgya by rubbing her), and wash her.
7. After three nights have passed, they should cohabit, according to some (teachers).
8. When she has had her monthly illness and the blood has ceased to flow, that is the time for cohabiting.

KÂNDIKÂ 6.

1. The beginning of the third month of pregnancy is the time for the Pumsavana (i. e. the ceremony to secure the birth of a son).

2. In the morning, after she has been washed, sitting on northward-pointed Darbha grass, (all over her body) including her head, she sits down to the west of the fire on northward-pointed Darbha grass, facing the east.

3. Her husband, standing behind her, should grasp down with his right hand over her right shoulder, and should touch the uncovered place of her navel with the verse, ‘The two men, Mitra and Varuna’ (MB. I, 4, 8).

4. Then they may do what they like.

5. Then afterwards (the following ceremony should be performed).

6. In a north-easterly direction, having bought for three times seven barley corns or beans a Nyagrodha shoot which has fruits on both sides, which is not dry and not touched by worms, he should set that up.

7. (He buys it with the Mantras):

7. The first Mantra consists of seven sections; with each of
‘If thou belongest to Soma, I buy thee for the king Soma.
‘If thou belongest to Varuṇa, I buy thee for the king Varuṇa.
‘If thou belongest to the Vasus, I buy thee for the Vasus.
‘If thou belongest to the Rudras, I buy thee for the Rudras.
‘If thou belongest to the Ādityas, I buy thee for the Ādityas.
‘If thou belongest to the Maruts, I buy thee for the Maruts.
‘If thou belongest to the Visve devās, I buy thee for the Visve devās.’

8. He should set it up with (the Mantra), ‘Ye herbs, being well-minded, bestow strength on this (shoot); for it will do its work.’ Then he should put grass around it, should take it, and place it in the open air.

9. Having washed a nether mill-stone, a student or a (wife) addicted (to her husband), a person who is a Brāhmaṇa by birth (only and not by learning), or a girl, pounds (that Nyagrodha shoot) without moving backward (the stone with which she pounds it).

10. In the morning, after she has been washed, sitting on northward-pointed Darbha grass, (all over her body), including her head, she lies down to the west of the fire on northward-pointed Darbha grass, with her head to the east.

11. Her husband, standing behind her, should seize (the pounded Nyagrodha shoot) with the these sections he should, according to the commentary, give three barley corns or beans to the owner of the Nyagrodha tree, or put them down at the root of the tree.
thumb and the fourth finger of his right hand, and should insert it into her right nostril with the verse, ‘A man is Agni, a man is Indra’ (MB. I, 4, 9).

12. Then they should do what they like.

KANDIKĀ 7.

1. Now (follows) the Simantakarana (or parting of the hair), in her first pregnancy,—

2. In the fourth, or sixth, or eighth month (of her pregnancy).

3. In the morning, after she has been washed, sitting on northward-pointed Darbha grass, (all over her body), including her head, she sits down to the west of the fire on northward-pointed Darbha grass, facing the east.

4. Her husband, standing behind her, ties (to her neck) an Udumbara branch with an even number of unripe fruits on it, with (the verse), ‘Rich in sap is this tree’ (MB. I, 5, 1).

5. He then parts her hair upwards (i.e. beginning from the front), the first time with Darbha blades, with (the word), ‘Bhūḥ!’ the second time with (the word), ‘Bhuvaḥ!’ the third time with (the word), ‘Svayaḥ!’—

6. Then with (a splint of) Viratara (wood) with this verse, ‘With which Aditi’s’ (ibid. 2);

8. And with a porcupine's quill that has three white spots, with (the verse), 'Which are thy blessings, O Râkâ' (ibid. 5).
9. (There should be prepared) a mess of boiled rice with sesame seeds, covered with ghee; at that he should make her look.
10. Let him say to her, 'What dost thou see?' and make her answer, 'Offspring!'
11. That (food) she should eat herself.
12. Brâhmaṇa women should sit by her side, pronouncing auspicious words (such as), 'A mother of valiant sons! A mother of living sons! A living husband's wife!'
13. Now (follows) the sacrifice for the woman in labour.
14. When the child is appearing, he strews (Darbha grass) round the fire and sacrifices two Āgya oblations with this verse, 'She who athwart' (MB. I, 5, 6), and with (the verse), 'Vipaskāt has taken away' (ibid. 7).
15. 'A male he will be born, N. N. by name'—(in this passage of the last verse) he pronounces a name.
16. What that (name is), is kept secret.
17. When they announce to him that a son has been born, he should say, 'Delay still cutting off the navel-string and giving him the breast.'
18. Let him have rice and barley-grains pounded in the same way as the (Nyagrodha) shoot.

19. Seizing (that pounded substance) with the thumb and the fourth finger of his right hand, he smears it on the tongue of the boy, with the formula, 'This order' (MB. I, 5, 8).

20. In the same way the production of intelligence (is performed). He should give to eat (to the child) clarified butter.

21. Or he takes it with gold (i.e. with a golden spoon) and sacrifices it on the face of the boy with this verse, 'May Mitra and Varuṇa bestow intelligence on thee' (MB. I, 5, 9), and with (the verse), 'The lord of the seat, the wonderful' (Sāma-veda I, 171).

22. Let him say, 'Cut off the navel-string,' and, 'Give the breast (to the child).'

23. From that time let him not touch (his wife) until ten nights have passed.

KĀNDIKĀ 8.

1. On the third (Tithi) of the third bright fortnight after his birth, in the morning the father has the child washed, including his head, and after sunset, when the evening-red has disappeared, he worships (the moon), holding up his joined hands.

2. Then the mother, having dressed the son in a clean garment, hands him, from south to north, with his face turned to the north, to the father.

19. Comp. above, chap. 6, 11.

23. The impurity (asauka) of the mother lasts through ten days after her confinement; comp. the note on Sāukhāyana-Gṛihya I, 25, 1 (vol. xxix, p. 51).

8, 1 seq. Khâdira-Gṛihya II, 3, 1 seq.
3. She then passes behind his back and stations herself to the north (of her husband).

4. He then murmurs (the three verses), ‘Thy heart, O thou whose hair is well parted’ (MB. I, 5, 10-12), and after he has, with the words (standing at the end of verse 12), ‘That this son may not come to harm (and thus be torn) from his mother’—

5. Handed him, from south to north, to his mother, they may do what they like.

6. Then in the following bright fortnights (at the time) stated above (Sūtra 1), the father, filling his joined hands with water and turning his face towards the moon, worships it—

7. Letting (the water) flow (out of his joined hands) once with the Yāgus, ‘What in the moon’ (MB. I, 5, 13), and twice silently. Then they may do what they like.

8. When ten nights have elapsed after (the child’s) birth, or a hundred nights, or one year, the Nāmadheyakarana (or giving a name to the child, is performed).

9. He who is going to perform (that ceremony—the father or a representative of the father), sits down to the west of the fire on northward-pointed Darbha grass, facing the east.

10. Then the mother, having dressed the son in a clean garment, hands him, from south to north, with his face turned to the north, to the performer
(of the ceremony).

11. She then passes behind his back and sits down to the north (of him), on northward-pointed Darbha grass.

12. He then sacrifices to Prāgāpati, to the Tithi (of the child's birth), to the Nakshatra (of the child's birth), and to the (presiding) deity (of that Tithi and of that Nakshatra).

13. He then murmurs the Mantra, 'Who art thou? What person art thou?' (MB. I, 5, 14. 15), touching the sense-organs at (the boy's) head.

14. In (the passage of the Mantra), 'Enter upon the month, that belongs to Ahaspati (i. e. the lord of days), N. N.!' and at the end of the Mantra he should give him a name beginning with a sonant, with a semivowel in it, with a long vowel or the Visarga at the end, (and formed with) a Krīt (suffix).

15. It should not contain a Taddhita (suffix).

16. (He should give a name with) an odd (number of syllables), ending in -dâ, to girls.

17. And after he has told the name to the mother first, they may do what they like.

18. A cow constitutes the sacrificial fee.

19. Every month (after the birth) of the boy, (or) after one year, or on the Parvan days of the year (i.e. on the last Tithi of each of the three seasons) he should sacrifice to Agni and Indra, to Heaven and Earth, and to the Visve devâs.

20. Having sacrificed to the deity (of the Tithi and of the Nakshatra respectively), he should sacrifice to the Tithi and to the Nakshatra.

21. When (the father) returns from a journey, or when (the son) begins to know, 'This is my father,' or when (the son) has been initiated, (the father) should grasp with his two hands his son round the head, and should murmur, 'From limb by limb thou art produced' (MB. I, 5, 16–18).

22. With (the formula), 'With the cattle's him-kâra I kiss thee' (I. I. 19) he should kiss him. Then he may do what he likes.

23. In the same way (he should do) to his younger sons—

24. According to their age or in the order in which he meets them.

25. Girls he should silently kiss on their head; he should silently kiss them on their head.

21 seq. The father's returning from a journey. Khâdîra-Grîhya II, 3, 13 seq. As to upeta, comp. Sâñkhâyana-Grîhya II, 1, 1 note. The position of the words in Sûtra 21 is irregular, so as to raise the suspicion that the words yadâ vâ... upetasya vâ ('or when the son begins to know... has been initiated') are an insertion into the text of Gobhila, made by a later compiler, or into a more ancient text, made by Gobhila himself. Comp. Pâraskara I, 18.

25. As to the repetition of the last words of this Sûtra, see the notes on I, 4, 31; II, 10, 50; III, 6, 15.
1. Now follows the tonsure of the child's head, in the third year.

2. To the east of the house on a surface besmeared (with cow-dung) wood has been put on the fire.

3. There the following things have been placed:

4. To the south (of the fire) twenty-one Darbha blades, a brass vessel with hot water, a razor of Udumbara wood or a mirror, and a barber with a razor in his hand;

5. To the north, bull's dung and a mess of boiled rice with sesame seeds which may be more or less cooked.

6. Let them fill vessels separately with rice and barley, with sesame seeds and beans, and let them place (those vessels) to the east (of the fire).

7. The boiled rice with sesame seeds (Sûtra 5) and all seeds (mentioned in Sûtra 6) are given to the barber.

8. Then the mother, having dressed the son in a clean garment, sits down to the west of the fire on northward-pointed Darbha grass, facing the east.

2. Comp. above, II, 1, 13.

5. Comp. above, chap. 7, 9; Grihyâ-samgraha II, 39.

6. I believe that four vessels were filled, one with rice, one with barley, one with sesame seeds, and one with beans. The Dvandva compounds vrihiyavais and tilamâshais cannot justify the conclusion that one vessel was filled with rice and barley mixed, and another with sesame seeds and beans, for the plural pâtrânî shows that there were more than two vessels. Āsvalâyana I, 17, 2, says, vrihiyavamâshatilânām prîthak pûrnasaratvâni.
9. To the west (of her), facing the east, the person stations himself who is going to perform that (ceremony).

10. He then murmurs, fixing his thoughts on Savitri, looking at the barber, (the Mantra), 'Hither has come Savitri with his razor' (MB. I, 6, 1).

11. And fixing his thoughts on Vāyu, looking at the brass vessel with warm water, (he murmurs the Mantra), 'With warm water, O Vāyu, come hither' (ibid. 2).

12. Drawing water (out of that vessel) with his right hand he moistens the patch of hair on the right side (of the boy's head) with (the Mantra), 'May the waters moisten thee for life' (ibid. 3).

13. With (the Mantra), 'Vishnu's tusk art thou' (ibid. 4) he looks at the razor of Udumbara wood or at the mirror.

14. With (the Mantra), 'Herb! Protect him!' (ibid. 5) he puts seven Darbha blades, with their points turned towards (the boy's) head, into the patch of hair on the right side of his head.

15. Pressing them down with his left hand, and seizing with his right hand the razor of Udumbara wood or the mirror, he touches with it (the Darbha blades), with the (Mantra), 'Axe! Do no harm to him!' (ibid. 6).

16. With (the Mantra), 'With which Pūshan has shaven Brīhaspati's head' (ibid. 7), he moves forward (that razor or the mirror) three times towards the east without cutting (the hair); once with the Yagus, twice silently.

11. I have translated the Mantra according to the reading of Āsvalāyana (Grhya I, 17, 6) and Pāraskara (II, 1, 6): ushwena Vāya udakenethi. Gobhila has udakenaidhi.
17. Then (the barber) with the razor of metal cuts the hair and throws (the cut off hair ends) on the bull’s dung.

18. In the same way (after the same rites have been performed), he cuts the patch of hair on the back-side;

19. And that on the left side.

20. He should repeat (when going to cut the hair on the back-side, and then again on the left side, the rites stated above), beginning from the moistening of the hair (Sūtra 12).

21. Grasping with his two hands (the boy) round his head he should murmur (the verse), 'The three-fold age of Gamadagni' (MB. I, 6, 8).

22. In the same way (the rites are performed) for a girl,

23. (But) silently.

24. The sacrifice, however, (is performed) with the Mantra.

25. Walking away from the fire in a northerly direction they have the arrangement of (the boy’s) hair made according to the custom of his Gotra and of his family.

26. They throw the hair on the bull’s dung (mentioned above), take it to the forest, and bury it.

27. Some throw them on a bunch (of grass or the like).

28. Thus on the back-side seven Darbha blades are put into the hair, and on the left side seven. This makes, together with the seven blades put into the hair on the right side (Sūtra 14), twenty-one, the number stated in Sūtra 4.

29. In the description of the Kūṭākaraṇa given in this chapter no sacrifice is mentioned. See, however, I, 9, 28.

28. Then they may do what they like.
29. A cow constitutes the sacrificial fee.

Kândikâ 10.

1. In the eighth year after the conception let him initiate a Brâhmaṇa,
2. In the eleventh year after the conception a Kshatriya,
3. In the twelfth year after the conception a Vaisya.

5. After that (time has passed), they become patitasâvitrîka (i.e. they have lost their right of being taught the Sâvitrî).
6. Let them not initiate such men, nor teach them, nor perform sacrifices for them, nor form matrimonial alliances with them.
7. On the day on which the youth is going to receive the initiation, on that day, early in the morning, they give him to eat, and have his hair arranged, and wash him, and deck him with ornaments, and put on him a (new) garment which has not yet been washed.

8. There are four kinds of garments indicated, though only persons of three castes are concerned. The explanation of this apparent incongruence follows from Sūtra 12.

10. Tambala is stated to be a synonym for sana (hemp).

13. As the garments indicated in Sūtra 8 belong, in the order in which they are stated, to persons of the three castes respectively, thus also of the skins (Sūtra 9), of the girdles (Sūtra 10), and of the staffs (Sūtra 11): the first is that belonging to a Brāhmaṇa, the second, to a Kṣatriya, and the third, to a Vaiśya.

22, 23. It is evident that the words tasyākāryaḥ belong to Sūtra 23, and not to Sūtra 22, to which the traditional division of the Sūtras assigns them. The corresponding section of the Mantra-Brāhmaṇa runs thus: ‘What is thy name?’—‘My name is N. N.!’ It is not clear whether the student, being questioned by the teacher, had to indicate his ordinary name, and then to receive from the teacher his ‘abhivādaniya nāmadheya,’ or whether he had to pronounce, on the teacher’s question, directly the abhivādaniya name chosen for him by the teacher. The commentary and the corresponding passage of the Khādira-Grīhya (II, 4, 12) are in favour of the second alternative.
hands (over the student's hands), the teacher with his right hand seizes (the student's) right hand together with the thumb, with (the formula), 'By the impulse of the god Savitrî, with the arms of the two Āswins, with Pûshan's hands I seize thy hand, N. N.!' (ibid. 18).

27. He then makes him turn round from left to right with (the formula), 'Move in the sun's course after him, N. N.!' (ibid. 19).

28. Grasping down with his right hand over his right shoulder he should touch his uncovered navel with (the formula), 'Thou art the knot of all breath' (ibid. 20).

29. Raising himself (from the position implied in Sûtra 28, he should touch) the place near the navel with (the formula), 'Ahura' (ibid. 21).

30. Raising himself (still more, he should touch) the place of the heart with (the formula), 'Krîsana' (ibid. 22).

37. (The teacher) then ties round (the student) thrice from left to right the girdle made of Muṅga grass and causes him to repeat (the verse), 'Protecting us from evil word' (ibid. 27), and (the verse), 'The protectress of right' (ibid. 28).

38. Then (the student) respectfully sits down near (the teacher) with (the words), 'Recite, sir! May the reverend one recite the Sāvitrī to me.'

39. He then recites (the Sāvitrī, ibid. 29) to him, Pāda by Pāda, hemistich by hemistich, and the whole verse,

40. And the Mahāvyāhṛitis one by one, with the word Om at the end (ibid. 30).

41. And handing over to him the staff, which should be made of (the wood of) a tree, he causes him to repeat (the formula), 'O glorious one, make me glorious' (ibid. 31).

42. Then (the student) goes to beg food,

43. First of his mother, and of two other women friends, or of as many as there are in the neighbourhood.

44. He announces the alms (received) to his teacher.

45. The rest of the day he stands silently.

46. After sunset he puts a piece of wood on the fire with (the Mantra), 'To Agni I have brought a piece of wood' (ibid. 32).

49, 50. Dr. Knauer very pertinently calls attention to the fact that these Sūtras are not repeated, as is the rule with regard to the concluding words of an Adhyāya or Prapāthaka. Comp. chap. 8, 25 note.
Prapâthaka III, Kândikâ 1.

1. Now (follows) the Godâna ceremony (or cutting of the beard), in the sixteenth year.

2. The cutting of the hair (and the beard) has been explained by the (description of the) Kûdâkarana (II, 9).

1, 1. After the description of the regular Upanayana here follow, in chaps. 1 and 2, statements regarding the special Vratas which the Vedic student has to undergo, or rather which he may undergo, in the time of his studentship. Comp. the corresponding statements on the Vratas of the Rigvedins, Sâñkhâyana-Grîhya II, 11 and 12. By the followers of the Sâma-veda the ceremony of the Godâna, or cutting of the beard (comp. Sâñkhâyana I, 28, 19; Pâraskara II, 1, 7 seq.; Àsvalâyana I, 18), was put into connection with their system of Vratas; the undergoing of the Godâna-vrata enabled the student to study the Pûrvârâka of the Sâma-veda. In the commentary on Gobhila III, 1, 28 we find the following statements with regard to this Vrata as well as to the other Vratas mentioned in Sûtra 28: 'The Upanayana-vrata has been declared to refer to the study of the Sâvitri (comp. Bloomfield's notes on Grîhya-samgraha II, 42, 43); the Godâna-vrata, to the study of the collections of verses sacred to the gods Agni, Indra, and Soma Pavamâna (this is the Pûrvârâka of the Sâma-veda); the Yrâtika-vrata, to the study of the Âranyaka, with the exclusion of the Sukriya sections; the Âditya-vrata, to the study of the Sukriya sections; the Apanishada-vrata, to the study of the Upanishad-Brâhma; the Gyaishâsâmika-vrata, to the study of the Âgyadohas.' The Vratas were connected with a repetition of the Upanayana ceremony (Sûtras 10 seq.) in the way stated in my note on Sâñkhâyana II, 12, 1.—Khâdîra-Grîhya II, 5, 1 seq.

2. Comp. Sâñkhâyana I, 28, 19, 'The Godânakarman is identical with the Kûdâkarman.' Pâraskara II, 1, 7, 'At the Kesânta ceremony he says, "Hair and beard" (instead of "hair," as at the Kûdâkarana)."
3. The student has his hair (and beard) cut himself.
4. He has all the hair of his body shaven.
5. The sacrificial fee given by a Brâhmaṇa consists of an ox and a cow,
6. That given by a Kshatriya, of a pair of horses,
7. That given by a Vaisya, of a pair of sheep.
8. Or a cow (is given by persons) of all (castes).
9. A goat (is given) to the person who catches up the hair.
10. The Upanayana (connected with the Godânavrata and the other Vratas) has been declared by the Upanayana (treated of above, II, 10).
11. (The use of) a garment, however, which has not yet been washed, is not required (here),
12. Nor the adornment.
13. (One should) not initiate one who does not intend to keep the vow through one year.
14. Handing over to him (i.e. to the student) a staff, which should be made of (the wood of) a tree, he directs him (to observe the duties connected with his vow, in the following words):
15. 'Obey thy teacher, except in sinful conduct.
16. 'Avoid anger and falsehood,
17. 'Sexual intercourse,
18. 'Sleeping on high (bedsteads),
19. 'Performances of singing, dancing, &c., the use of perfumes and of collyrium,

3. At the Kūḍākarana the child sits in the mother's lap and others perform the rites for him.
10. See the note on Sūtra 1.
11. Comp. above, II, 10, 7.
20. 'Bathing,
21. 'Combing the head, cleansing the teeth, washing the feet,
22. 'Shaving,
23. 'Eating honey and flesh,
24. 'Mounting a chariot yoked with cattle,
25. 'Wearing shoes in the village,
26. 'Svayam-indriya-moahanam.'
27. Wearing the girdle, going the rounds for alms, carrying a staff, putting fuel (on the fire), touching water, reverentially saluting (the teacher) in the morning: these are his standing duties.
28. The Godâna-vrata, the Vrâtika-vrata, the Áditya-vrata, the Aupanishada-vrata, the Gyaish-thasâmika-vrata (last) one year (each).
29. Touching water in the evening and in the morning (is prescribed) for these (Vratas).
30. The Áditya-vrata, however, some do not undergo.
31. They who undergo it, wear one garment.
32. They allow nothing to be between (themselves and) the sun, except trees and (the roofs of) houses.
33. They do not descend into water deeper than knee-deep, except on the injunction of their teacher.

28. The meaning of these expressions has been explained in the note on Sûtra 1.
30. According to the commentary some study the Sukriyas as a part of the Áranyaka; these do not undergo the Áditya-vrata. Others, for instance the Kauthumas, separate the Sukriyas from the Áranyaka and keep a special vow, the Áditya-vrata, by which they are enabled to study those texts.
KĀNDIKĀ 2.

1. For the Mahānāmni verses (the Vrata is to be kept) twelve years,
2. (Or) nine, six, three (years).
3. These are the various possibilities.
4. Or also one year, according to some (teachers).
5. (In this case), however, the observances are enhanced.
6. (Keeping the Vrata through one year is allowed only) if (the student's) ancestors have learnt the Mahānāmni verses.
7. There is also a Brāhmaṇa of the Rauruki (Sākhā, in which it is said):
8. 'The mothers forsooth say to their sons, when they suckle them:
9. "Become men, my little sons, who endeavour to accomplish the Sākvari-vrata!"
10. During (the Vrata preparatory to the study of) these (i.e. the Mahānāmni verses), touching water at the time of each Savana (is prescribed).
11. Let him not eat in the morning before he has touched water.
12. In the evening, after he has touched water, he should not eat, before he has put the piece of wood on the fire.

2, 1. Regarding the Mahānāmni or Sākvari verses and the observances connected with their study, comp. Sānkhayana II, 12 (see especially the note on II, 12, 13) and the sixth Adhyāya of that text. Khādira-Grihya II, 5, 22 seq.
10. The rules as to 'touching water' have been given above, I, 2, 5 seq. The three Savanas or Soma-pressings of which the Soma sacrifice consists, are the prātaḥ-savana, the mādhyandina-savana, and the triiya-savana, i.e. the morning Savana, the midday Savana, and the third or evening Savana.
12. Comp. above, II, 10, 46; III, 1, 27.
13. He should wear dark clothes.
14. He should eat dark food.
15. Let him be devoted to his teacher.
16. Let him make way for nobody.
17. He should be addicted to austerities.
18. He should stand in day-time.
19. He should sit at night.
20. And when it is raining, he should not retire to a covered place.
21. He should say to (the god) when he sends rain, 'The Sakvaris are water.'
22. When (the god) sends lightning, he should say to him, 'Such forsooth is the nature of the Sakvaris.'
23. When (the god) thunders, he should say to him, 'The great voice of the great (cow)!
24. Let him not cross a river without touching water.
25. Let him not ascend a ship.
26. If his life is in danger, however, he may ascend (a ship), after having touched water.
27. In the same way (he should touch water) having disembarked.
28. For in water the virtue of the Mahânapâmûs is contained.
29. If he practises these duties, (the god) Par-ganya will send rain according to his wish.
30. The rules about dark (clothes), standing, sitting, (making) way, and (dark) food may be considered as optional.
31. After he has kept his vow through one third (of the prescribed time, the teacher) should sing to him the (first) Stotriya verse (of the Mahānāmni).

32. In the same way the two other Stotriya verses (after two-thirds of the time and at the end of the whole time).

33. Or all (the three verses) at the end of the whole (time).

34. He should sing them to (the student) who has fasted and shuts his eyes.

35. Having filled a brass vessel with water, having thrown into it all sorts of herbs, and dipped (the student’s) hands into it, the teacher should veil (the student’s eyes) from left to right with a (new) garment that has not yet been washed.

36. Or he should sing (the Mahānāmni to him) immediately after he has veiled (his eyes).

37. With veiled eyes, keeping silence, he should abstain from food through a period of three nights, or through one day and one night.

38. Or he should stand in the forest till sunset (and spend the night in the village).

39. On the next morning he should put wood on the fire in the forest, should sacrifice with the Mahāvyāhṛitis, and should cause the student to look at (the following objects, viz.)

40. Fire, Âgya, the sun, a Brahman, a bull, food, water, curds,

41. With (the words), ‘The sky have I beheld! Light have I beheld!’

35. Comp. Sāñkhāyana-Grīhya VI, 3, 7.

36. I. e. the fasting prescribed in Sūtras 34 and 37 may, if they like, follow after the teaching of the sacred song, instead of preceeding it.

37. Sāñkhāyana-Grīhya II, 12, 6 seq.
42. In that way all (the objects stated in Sūtra 40) three times.

43. After the ceremony for averting evil has been performed, the student respectfully salutes the teacher.

44. Thus he has to break the silence (enjoined upon him).

45. A bull, a brass vessel, a garment, an optional gift (of a cow): this is the sacrificial fee.

46. The first time he may choose (either a bull or a brass vessel).

47. Let him provide his teacher with clothes, according to some (teachers).

48. A mess of cooked food, sacred to Indra, (is prepared). Let him sacrifice of that (food) with this verse, ‘To the Ṛīk, to the Sāman we sacrifice’ (Sāma-veda I, 369), or (with the verse), ‘The lord of the seat, the wonderful’ (ibid. I, 171), or with both (verses).

49. This (he should do) at (all) the Anupravaṇāniya ceremonies.

43. Comp. above, I, 9, 29; Sāṅkhāyana VI, 3, 11 seq.
45, 46. The student is to give a fee to his teacher three times, after he has been taught each of the three Stotriya verses (Sūtras 31, 32). To these three occasions the four objects stated in Sūtra 45 correspond, so that the first time either the first or the second of those objects, the bull or the brass vessel, may be chosen; the second time he gives a garment, the third time a vara (or optional gift). Comp. the similar correspondence of four objects and three cases to which these objects refer, II, 10, 8, 12.
48. This is the Anupravaṇāniya ceremony (or ceremony to be performed after the study of a Vedic text has been finished) belonging to the Mahānāmīs; comp. Khādira-Grīhya II, 5, 34; Âsvalāyana-Grīhya I, 22, 12; Sāṅkhāyana II, 8, 1 note.
49. Perhaps sarvatra ('everywhere') belongs to Sūtra 49, so that we should have to translate: This (should be done) everywhere at
50. The Mantra has to be altered everywhere (so that he has to say), 'I have kept (the vow),' 'I have been able,' 'Thereby I have prospered,' 'I have undergone.'

51. The fee to be given after the study of the Parvans is, a goat for the Agni-Parvan, a ram for the Indra-Parvan, a cow for the Pavamâna-Parvan.

52. After (the student) has returned (from the forest), he should entertain his teacher and his retinue with food,

53. And his fellow-students who have come together.

54. The way to sing the Gyesthâsâmâmans has been explained by (the statements given with regard to) the Mahânâmnî-(vrata).

55. Here the following standing duties are to be observed:

56. He should not have intercourse with a Sûdrâ woman.

57. He should not eat bird's flesh.

58. He should avoid (constantly living on) the same grain, and in the same place, and wearing one garment.

59. He should perform the rite of 'touching water' with water drawn out (of a pond, &c.).

the Anupravâkâniya ceremonies, i.e. also at those Anupravâkâniya ceremonies which are connected with the study of the other texts.

50. Instead of 'I will keep the vow,' he says, 'I have kept the vow,' &c.; II, 10, 16.

51. The Parvans are the three great sections, sacred to Agni, Indra, and Soma Pavâmana, into which the first Sâmavedârâkîka is divided.

55. According to the commentary he has to keep these observances through his whole life.

58. Or, wearing always the same garment?
60. From (the time of) his being directed (to observe the duties of his Vrata) he should not eat from an earthen vessel,

61. Nor drink (from such a vessel),

62. (Or rather) from (the time of) his being taught (the Gyesh/hasāmans, after the whole preparatory time, or after one third of that time), according to some (teachers).

KĀNDIKĀ 3.

1. On the full-moon day of Praush/Aapada (or) under (the Nakshatra) Hasta the Upākaraṇa (or opening ceremony of the annual term of Veda-study, is performed).

2. After (the teacher) has sacrificed with the Vyāhritis, he recites the Sāvitrī to the students as at the Upanayana;

3. And (he chants) the Sāvitrī with its Sāman melody,

60. Regarding the directions given to the student by the teacher, see chap. 1, 14.

62. See above, Sūtras 31. 33.

3, 1 seq. The Upākaraṇa ceremony; Khādira-Gṛihya III, 2, 16 seq. Regarding the different terms for this ceremony, comp. Śāṅkhāyana IV, 5, 2; Āśvalāyana III, 5.3; Pāraskara II, 10, 2. Hiranyakesin says: śravāpaksha oshadhishu gātāsa hastena paur-namāsyām vādhyāyopākarma.—It seems impossible to me to adopt an explanation of this Sūtra, which gives to prauṣh/apadī another meaning than that based on the constant use of these feminines derived from the names of Nakshatras, i.e. the day of the full moon which falls under such or such a Nakshatra. Hastena, therefore, necessarily refers to another day besides the Praush/apadī, on which the Upākaraṇa may be celebrated. Perhaps we may conjecture, prauṣh/apadīm hastena vopā-karaṇam.

2. Comp. above, II, 10, 39.
4. And (the Bārhaspatya Sāman, with the text), 'Soma, the king, Varuṇa' (Sāma-veda I, 91).

5. After they have recited (the first verses) of the Khandas book, from its beginning, they may do what they like.

6. They eat fried barley-grains with (the verse), 'That which is accompanied by grains and by a karambha (i.e. curds with flour)' (Sāma-veda I, 210).

7. They partake of curds with (the verse), 'I have praised Dadhikrāvan' (Sāma-veda I, 358).

8. After they have sipped water, (the teacher) should cause them to repeat the first (?) verses, and to sing the first (?) Sāmans, of the different sections(?).

9. On the day sacred to Savitri they wait.

10. And at (the beginning of) the northerly

5. The Khandas book is the first Sāmavedārākika in which the verses are arranged according to their metre.

6. It is not quite clear from the text, in what connection the rites described in Sutras 6–8 stand with those treated of in the preceding Sutras. The expression yathārtham used in Sutra 5 ('yathārtham iti karmavāh parisamāptir uṣyate,' Comm.; comp. above, I, 3, 12 note) clearly indicates the close of the ceremony; on the other hand the comparison of Pāraskara II, 10, 15 seq., Sānkhyāyana IV, 5, 10 seq., Āsvalāyana III, 5, 10, seems to show that the acts stated in Sutras 6–8 form part of the ceremony described before.

8. I do not try to translate this very obscure Sūtra according to the commentary, in which khāṇḍikā is explained as 'the number (of pupils).' Perhaps the word is a misspelling for kandikā or the like, and means sections of the texts. Comp. Khādira-Grīhya III, 2, 23. The construction (ākāṁṭodakāḥ...kārayet) is quite irregular.

9. I.e. they do not continue their study. The day sacred to Savitri is the day under the constellation of Hasta, mentioned in Sūtra 1, for Savitri is the presiding deity over that Nakshatra (comp. Sānkhyāyana I, 26, 11).

10. Comp. the note on Sūtra 16.
course of the sun (they wait) one night with one day before and one day after it,

11. (Or they interrupt their study for) a period of three nights before and afterwards, according to some (teachers).

12. And both times water libations are offered to the Âkâryas.

13. Some perform the Upâkarana on the full-moon day of Srâvana and wait (with studying) the time (from that day) till the day sacred to Savitri (Sûtra 9).

14. On the full-moon day of Taisha they leave off (studying the Veda).

15. They should go out of the village in an easterly or northerly direction, should go to water which reaches higher than to their secret parts, should touch water (in the way prescribed above, I, 2), and should satiate the metres, the Rîshis, and teachers (by libations of water).

16. After this second Upâkarana, until the (chief) Upâkarana (has been performed) again for the Vedic texts, an interruption of the study (of the Veda takes place), if clouds rise.

12. Regarding the Tarpâna ceremony comp. Saîkhâyana IV, 9, 1 note. From the word 'and' the commentator concludes that the libations are offered not only to the Âkâryas, but also to the Rîshis, &c. (Sûtra 15).

13. Comp. Gautama XVI, 1 ; Vasishtha XIII, 1 ; Âpastamba I, 9, 1, &c.

15. This is a description of the Utsarga ceremony; comp. Saîkhâyana IV, 6, 6 ; Âsavâlayana III, 5, 21-23 ; Pâraskara II, 12.

16. The most natural way of interpreting the text would be, in my opinion, to assume that the 'second Upâkarana' (pratyupâkarana) is identical with the Utsarga. The second Upâkarana thus would in the same time conclude the first term for studying the

19. And if a whirlwind occurs.

20. Let them not study on the Ashâkâ days, and on the days of the new moon,

The distinction of two such periods, which may be called two terms, is frequently met with in other texts, for instance, in Vasishtha XIII, 5-7 (S. B. E. XIV, 63); Manu IV, 98. According to the commentary, on the other hand, the second Upâkarana is performed at the beginning of the northerly course of the sun (comp. Sûtras 10-12); it is stated that after that ceremony the Úttara (i.e. the Uttarakârika?) and the Rahasya texts are studied. It deserves to be noticed that Manu (IV, 96) prescribes the performing of the Útsarga either under the Nakshatra Pushya (i.e. Tishya), or on the first day of the bright fortnight of Mâgha, which is considered as coinciding, at least approximately, with the beginning of the northerly course of the sun.

31. If a spar of the roof or the middle (post of the house) breaks, or if the water-barrel bursts, let him sacrifice (Âgya oblations) with the Vyâhritis.

32. If he has seen bad dreams, let him murmur this verse, 'To-day, O god Savitri' (Sâma-veda I, 141).

33. Now (follows) another (expiation).

34. If he has touched a piled-up (fire-altar) or a sacrificial post, or if he has humming in his ears, or if his eye palpitates, or if the sun rises or sets while he is sleeping, or if his organs of sense have been defiled by something bad, let him sacrifice two Âgya oblations with the two verses, 'May my strength return to me' (Mantra-Brâhmaṇa I, 6, 33. 34).

35. Or (let him sacrifice) two pieces of wood anointed with Âgya.

36. Or let him murmur (those two verses) at light offences.

29. The definition of a Sishä, or instructed person, is given in Baudhâyanâ I, 1, 6 (S. B. E. XIV, 143).

34. Kitya means Kitya agni, the piled-up fire-altar, the construction of which is treated of, for instance, in the Satapatha Brâhmaṇa VI–X. Prof. Weber has devoted to the rites connected with the kitya agni a very detailed paper, Indische Studien, XIII, 217 seq. That kitya does not mean here anything different from kitya agni is shown by the Mâna-yâya-Grîhya I, 3: yadi . . . akshi và spandet karno và krośed agnim và kityam ârohet smânam và gakkhed yûpam vopasprîsêt, &c.

KÀNDIKÀ 4.

1. A student, after he has studied the Veda,
2. And has offered a present to his Guru (i.e. to his) teacher,
3. Should, with the permission (of his parents), take a wife,
4. One who does not belong to the same Gotra,
5. And who is not a Sapiṇda relation of his mother.
6. The best, however, is a ‘naked’ girl.
7. Now the bath (which is taken at the end of studentship, will be described).
8. To the north or the east of the teacher’s house there is an enclosure.
9. There the teacher sits down, facing the north, on eastward-pointed Darbha grass;

4, 1 seq. The description given in this chapter of the Samāvartana, or of the ceremony performed at the end of studentship, is opened with a few sentences referring to another section of the Grihya ritual, namely, to marriage. It seems to me that these first Sūtras of this chapter once formed, in a text from which Gobhila has taken them, the introduction to an exposition of the wedding ceremonies, and that Gobhila was induced to transfer them to the description of the Samāvartana, by their opening words, ‘A student, after he has studied the Veda, &c.’ With Sūtras 1–3, comp. Khâdîra-Grihya I. 3, 1.

the Mantra separately (in the morning, at noon, and in the evening) as indicated in the text.

22. He should add (the formula), 'The eye art thou' (ibid. 9) after (each of the three sections of the Mantra, 6–8).

23. With the verse, 'Loosen the highest fetter, O Varuna' (ibid. 10), he takes off the girdle.

24. After he has entertained the Brāhmaṇas with food and has eaten himself, he should have his hair, his beard, the hair of his body, and his nails cut, so as to leave the lock of hair (as required by the custom of his family).

25. Having bathed and adorned himself, and having put on two garments (an under-garment and an upper-garment) which have not yet been washed, he should put a garland (on his head) with (the formula), 'Luck art thou; take delight in me' (ibid. 11).

26. The two shoes (he puts on) with (the formula), 'Leaders are you; lead me' (ibid. 12).

27. With (the formula), 'The Gandharva art thou' (ibid. 13), he takes a bamboo staff.

28. He approaches the teacher together with the assembly (of his pupils) and looks at the assembly of his teacher's (pupils) with (the words), 'Like an eye-ball may I be dear to you' (ibid. 14).

29. Sitting down near (the teacher) he touches the sense-organs at his head with (the verse), 'The she-ichneumon, covered by the lips' (ibid. 15).

30. Here the teacher should honour him with the Argha ceremony.

31. (The student then) should approach a chariot yoked with oxen, and should touch its two side-pieces or the two arms of the chariot-pole with
(the verse), 'O tree, may thy limbs be strong' (ibid. 16).

32. With (the last words of that verse), 'May he who stands on thee, win what can be won'—he mounts it.

33. Having driven (some distance) in an easterly or northerly direction, he turns round from left to right and comes back (to his teacher).

34. When he has come back, the Ārgha ceremony should be performed (for him by his teacher), say the Kauhaliyas.

KĀNDIKĀ 5.

1. From that time he shall assume a dignified demeanour: this is in short the rule (for his behaviour).

2. Here the teachers enumerate the following (regulations).

3. Nāgātalomnyopahāsam ikkhet.

4. Nor (should he wish for sport) with a girl who is the only child of her mother,

5. Nor with a woman during her courses,

6. Nor with one who descends from the same Rishis.

7. Let him not eat food which has been brought by another door (than the usual),

8. Or which has been cooked twice,

9. Or which has stood over night—

10. Except such as is prepared of vegetables, flesh, barley, or flour.

34. Instead of its being performed at the time stated in Sūtra 30. 5, 1 seq. Rules of conduct for the Snātaka; comp. Khādira-Gṛhya III, 1, 33 seq.
11. Let him not run while it is raining.
12. Let him not take himself his shoes in his hands (when putting them on or pulling them off).
13. Let him not look into a well.
15. He should not wear a scentless wreath,
16. If it is not a wreath of gold.
17. (He should not wear a wreath) of which the expression mālā (garland) has been used.
18. He should cause the people to call it srag (wreath). (Then he may wear it.)
19. He should avoid using the word bhadra ('blessed') without a reason.
20. He should say (instead of it), mandra ('lovely').
21. There are three (kinds of) Snātakas:
22. A Vidyāsnātaka (or a Snātaka by knowledge), a Vratasnātaka (or a Snātaka by the completion of his vow), and a Vidyāvratasnātaka (i.e. Snātaka by both).
23. Of these the last ranks foremost; the two others are equal (to each other).
24. (A Snātaka) should not put on a wet garment.
25. He should not wear one garment.
26. He should not praise any person (excessively).
27. He should not speak of what he has not seen, as if he had seen it, 21, 22. These Sūtras are identical with Pāraskara II, 5, 32. Comp. the definitions of these three kinds of Snātakas, Pāraskara. l. l. 33–35.

25. Comp. above, chap. 2, 58.
28. Nor of what he has not heard, as if he had heard it.
29. He should give up everything that forms an impediment for his Veda-recitation.
30. He should endeavour to keep himself (pure from every defilement) like a pot of oil.
31. He should not climb a tree.
32. He should not go toward evening to another village,
33. Nor alone,
34. Nor together with Vrishalas (or Sudras).
35. He should not enter the village by a by-path.
36. And he should not walk without a companion.
37. These are the observances for those who have performed the Samâvartana,
38. And what (besides) is prescribed by Sishtas.

KÂNDIKÂ 6.

1. When his cows are driven out, he should repeat (the verse), 'May (Bhava), the all-valiant one, (and Indra protect) these (cows) for me' (MB. I, 8, 1).
2. When they have come back, (he should repeat the verse), 'These which are rich in sweet' (ibid. 2).

33. That the Snâtaka is not allowed to go alone to another village, follows from Sûtra 36; thus Sûtra 33 is superfluous. The commentator of course tries to defend Gobhila, but I think he has not succeeded. Probably Gobhila has taken the two Sûtras from different texts on which his own composition seems to be based.

38. Baudhâyana I, 1, 6 (S. B. E. XIV, 144): 'Those are called Sishâs who, in accordance with the sacred law, have studied the Veda together with its appendages, know how to draw inferences from that, and are able to adduce proofs perceptible by the senses from the revealed texts.'

6, 1 seq. Different ceremonies connected with cattle-keeping. Comp. Khâdira-Gryhya III, 1, 45 seq.
3. If he is desirous of thriving (in his cattle), he should lick with his tongue the forehead of the first-born calf, before it is licked by its mother, and should gulp with (the formula), 'Thou art the phlegm of the cows' (ibid. 3).

4. If he is desirous of thriving (in his cattle), he should, when the cows have calved, at night put wood on the fire in the cow-stable and should sacrifice churned curds with drops of ghee, with (the verse), 'Seizer, seize' (ibid. 4).

5. If he is desirous of thriving (in his cattle), he makes, when the cows have calved, with a sword of Udumbara wood, marks on a male and on a female calf, first on the male, then on the female, with (the Mantra), 'The world art thou, thousandfold' (ibid. 5. 6).

6. And after he has done so, he should recite (over the two calves the Mantra), 'With metal, with the butcher's knife' (ibid. 7).

7. When the rope (to which the calves are bound) is spread out, and (again) when the calves have been bound to it, he should recite over it (the verse), 'This rope, the mother of the cows' (ibid. 8).

8. Here now the following (rites) have to be performed day by day, (viz.)

9. (The rites at) the driving out (of the cows), at the coming back (of the cows), and at the setting into motion of the rope (with the calves).

10. At the cow-sacrifice (i.e. the sacrifice by which a thriving condition for the cows is obtained), boiled rice-grains with milk (are offered).

9. See Sûtras 1. 2. 7.
11. Let him sacrifice to Agni, Pūshan, Indra, and Īsvara.

12. To the bull honour is done (by adorning it, by lavish food, &c.).

13. By the cow-sacrifice also the horse-sacrifice (i.e. the sacrifice by which thriving horses are obtained) has been explained.

14. Of deities Yama and Varuna are added here (to the deities stated above) (Sûtra 11).

15. (After the cow-sacrifice) the cows are besprinkled with scented water; the cows are besprinkled with scented water.

Kândikâ 7.

1. Now (follows) the Sravanâ ceremony.

2. It has to be performed on the full-moon day (of the month Srâvana).

3. Having besmeared (a surface) to the east of the house (with cow-dung), they carry forward (to that place) fire taken from the (sacred) domestic fire.

4. He besmears four spots to the four sides (of the fire),

5. Towards the (four) directions,

6. (To the extent) of more than one prakrama (i.e. step).

7. He puts a dish on the fire and fries (in that dish) one handful of barley-grains, without burning them.

8. To the west of the fire he places a mortar so that it stands firmly, and husks (the grains), separating (the husked and the unhusked grains?).

9. After he has carefully ground them to flour, and has thrown (that) into a wooden cup (kamasa), and covered it with a winnowing-basket, he puts it up (in the house).

10. Between (the besmeared surface) towards the south, and that towards the east (there should be) a passage.

11. After sunset he takes the wooden cup, (the spoon called) Darvi, and the winnowing-basket, and goes to (the fire) which has been carried forward (Sûtra 3).

12. He throws the flour into the winnowing-basket and fills the wooden cup with water.

13. He takes once a quantity of flour with the Darvi spoon, pours out water on the besmeared place to the east (of the fire), and offers (there) a Bali with (the words), 'O king of Serpents, dwelling towards the east, this is thy Bali!' (MB. II, 1, 1).

14. He pours the rest of the water over (that Bali, taking care) that it does not carry away the Bali.

8. As to avahanti, comp. above, I, 7, 4; Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmonsdalefer, p. 30.

11. According to the commentary atipravîta means the fire which has been carried forward (Sûtra 3). Another explanation is then added, which is based on a quotation from a 'tantrantara': 'After he has established a fire, he should carry forward one fire-brand taken from that fire, in a south-eastern direction, with the Mantra ye rûpāṇi pratimuṣkamānāḥ &c.; that fire is the atipravîta fire.'
15. Turning round from right to left, he besprinkles the wooden cup and the Darvi spoon, warms them, and (repeats the offering of a Bali) in the same way towards the south, towards the west, and towards the north, as the Mantra (MB. II, 1, 1. 2) runs, without turning away (between the single Bali-offerings).

16. After he has thrown the remnants (of flour) out of the basket into the fire, he goes to that fire which has not been carried forward.

17. To the west of that fire he touches the earth with his two hands turned downwards, and murmurs the Mantra, 'Adoration to the Earth's'—(MB. II, 1, 3).

18. In the evening boiled rice-grains with milk (are prepared).

19. Of that (milk-rice) he should make oblations with (the formulas), 'To Śravāna, to Vishnu, to Agni, to Pragāpati, to the Visve devās Svāhā!'

20. The rest (should be performed) according to the Sthālipāka rite.

21. To the north of the fire he places a bunch of Darbha grass with roots, and murmurs the Mantra, 'Soma the king' (ibid. 4), and, 'The agreement which you have made' (ibid. 5).

15. Literally, 'turning round, following his left arm.' Comp. Sānkhyāyana II, 3, 2. The Mantra runs thus, 'O king of Serpents, dwelling towards the south (the west, the north), this is thy Bali!'

16. Comp. Śūtra 11 and the note.

17. Comp. below, IV, 5, 3.

20. Grīhya-samgraha I, 114: 'Where the technical expression is used, "The rest according to the rite of the Sthālipākas," he should, after he has sacrificed the two Âyabhāgas, pour (Âgya) into the Sruk and cut off (the Avadānas with the Sruk).' Comp. Gobhila I, 8, 3 seq.
22. On the following day he has flour of fried barley-grains prepared, and in a new pot, covering (it with another pot), he puts it up (in his house).

23. (Of that flour) he should silently offer Balis day by day in the evening, before the sacrifice, until the Āgrahāyānī day.

KĀNDIKĀ 8.

1. On the full-moon day of (the month) Āsvayuṇa, at the Prīṣhātaka ceremony, a mess of boiled rice-grains with milk, sacred to Rudra, (is prepared).

2. Of that (milk-rice) let him sacrifice, the first oblation with (the verse), 'To us, O Mitra and Varuna' (Sāma-veda I, 220), the second with (the verse), 'Not in our offspring' (Rīg-veda I, 114, 8),

3. And (eight Āgya oblations) with the 'cow's names' (i.e. with the formulas), 'The lovely one art thou,' &c., with each (name) separately.

4. The rest (should be performed) according to the Sthālipāka rite.

5. Having carried the Prīṣhātaka around the fire, turning his right side towards (the fire), and having caused the Brāhmaṇas to look at it (i.e. at the Prīṣhātaka), he should look at it himself with (the verse

6. After he has entertained the Brāhmaṇas with food and has eaten himself, (the sacrificer and his family) should tie (to their arms, necks, &c.) amulets made of lac together with all sorts of herbs, for the sake of prosperity.

7. In the evening he should feed the cows with the Prishātaka, and should let the calves join them.

8. Thus (the cows) will thrive.

9. At the sacrifice of the first fruits a mess of boiled rice-grains with milk, sacred to Indra and Agni, (is prepared).

10. Having sacrificed first a Havis offering of that (milk-rice), he sacrifices over that (oblation) four Âgya oblations with (the verses), 'To him who bears a hundred weapons,' &c. (MB. II, 1, 9–12).

11. The rest (should be performed) according to the Sthalipāka rite.

12. The rest of the remnants of the sacrificial food he should give to eat to all (persons present) who have received the initiation (Upanayana).

13. Having 'spread under' water once, he should cut off two portions of the boiled rice-grains.

of Bhrigū.

18. Silently a fourth time.

19. After he has cut off a greater portion,

20. They may, if they like, chew that.

21. Having sipped water, they should touch their mouths, their heads, and their limbs from above downwards, with (the verse), 'This art thou' (ibid. 14).

22. In the same way (sacrifices of the first fruits are performed) of Śyāmāka (panicum frumentaceum) and of barley.

23. (At the sacrifice) of Śyāmāka (the Mantra with which the food is partaken of [comp. Sūtra 16], is), 'May Agni eat as the first' (ibid. 15).

24. (At the sacrifice) of barley, 'This barley, mixed with honey' (ibid. 16).

KĀNDIKĀ 9.

1. On the Āgrahāyani day (or the full-moon day of the month Mārgasirsha) Bali-offerings (are made).

2. They have been explained by the Srāvana sacrifice.

3. He does not murmur (here) the Mantra, 'Adoration to the Earth's.'
4. In the morning, after he has sacrificed the (regular) morning oblation, he should have the following (plants and branches of trees) fetched, viz. Darbha grass, a Sami (branch), Virīna grass, a (Badari branch) with fruits, Apāmārga, and Sirisha. He then should silently throw (a portion) of flour of fried barley into the fire, should cause the Brāhmaṇas to pronounce auspicious wishes, and should circumambulate the house, turning his right side towards it, starting from the room for the (sacred) fire, striking the smoke (of the sacred fire) with those objects (i.e. with the plants and branches mentioned above).

5. He should throw away those objects, after he has made use of them.

6. On solid stones he places a water-barrel with the two (Sāmans belonging to the verse), ‘Vāstoshpati’ (Sāma-veda I, 275) and with (that) Rīk (itself).

8. In the evening boiled rice-grains with milk (are prepared).

9. Of that (milk-rice) he should make an oblation with (the Mantra), ‘She shone forth as the first’ (MB. II, 2, 1).

10. The rest (should be performed) according to the Sthālipāka rite.

earth with his two hands turned downwards, and murmurs the Mantra, ‘Adoration to the Earth’s.’

6. He sings the two Kavasha Sāmans of which the verse Sāma-veda I, 275 is considered as the Yoni, and then repeats that verse itself.

8. This Sūtra is identical with chap. 7, 18.

11. To the west of the fire he touches the Barhis with his two hands turned downwards, and murmurs the Vyāhṛitīs (i.e. the solemn utterances), 'In the Kshatra I establish myself' (ibid. 2. 3).

12. To the west of the fire he should have a layer spread out,

13. Of northward-pointed grass,

14. Inclined towards the north.

15. After they have spread out on that (grass) new rugs, the householder sits down (thereon) on the southern side.

16. Then without an interval the others according to their age,

17. And without an interval their wives, each with her children.

18. When they are seated, the householder touches the layer (of grass) with his two hands turned downwards, and murmurs the verse, 'Be soft to us, O Earth' (ibid. 4).

19. When he has finished that (verse), they lie down on their right sides.

20. In the same way (they lie down on their right sides) three times, turning themselves towards themselves (i.e. turning round forwards, not backwards, and thus returning to their former position?)

21. They repeat the auspicious hymns as far as they know them;

22. The complex of Sāmans called Arishṭa, according to some (teachers).

20. The explanation which the commentary gives of this difficult Sūtra can hardly be accepted: trīr āvṛtīyā triśūklivavibhyasya... abhyātmanātmano grīhapater abhimukhyena, ātmana ārabhyety arthaḥ. kathām naṁ? yenaiva kramenopavishṭāḥ tenaiva kramena samvrasanam trīr āvartayeyuḥ.

22. The commentary gives a second name for this Sāman
23. Having touched water, they may do whatever they like.

Kândikā 10.

1. The Ashṭakā (is a festival) sacred to the night.
2. It procures prosperity.
3. It is sacred to Agni, or to the Manes, or to Pragāpati, or to the Seasons, or to the Visve devās—thus the deity (to which the Ashṭakā is sacred), is investigated (by different teachers).
4. There are four Ashṭakās in (the four months of) the winter;
5. These all he should endeavour to celebrate with (offerings of) meat;
6. Thus says Kautsa.
7. (There are only) three Ashṭakās (in the winter), says Audgāhamāni,
8. And so say (also) Gautama and Vârkakhaṇḍī.

Gobhila himself follows the opinion of Audgāhamāni, for he mentions only three Ashṭakās in the winter season, the first following after the Āgrahāyaṇī full moon (chap. 10, 9), the second after the Taishi (10, 18), and the third after the Māghī (IV, 4, 17).

10. See above, I, 7, 2 seq.

15. After he has baked them, he should pour (Āgya) on them, should take them from the fire towards the north, and should pour (Āgya) on them again.
16. In the way prescribed for Sthālipākas he cuts off (the prescribed portions) from the mess of boiled grains and from the cakes, and sacrifices with (the words), 'To the Ash/akā Svāhā!'
17. The rest (should be performed) according to the Sthālipāka rite.
18. (At the second Ash/akā, on) the eighth day after the full-moon day of Taisha, a cow (is sacrificed).

20. And after having sacrificed, he should recite over (the cow the verse), 'May thy mother give leave to thee' (ibid. 6).

21. Let him sprinkle (the cow) with water in which barley is, with (the words), 'Agreeable to the Asẖākā I sprinkle thee.'

22. Let him carry a fire-brand round it with (the verse), 'The lord of goods, the sage (goes) round' (Sāma-veda I, 30).

23. Let him give it water to drink.

24. The remainder of what it has drunk he should pour out under (the feet of) the beast with (the formula), 'Away from the gods the Havis has been taken' (MB. II, 2, 7).

25. They then walk in a northerly direction (from the fire) and kill (the cow),

26. The head of which is turned to the east, the feet to the north, if the rite is sacred to the gods,

27. The head to the south, the feet to the west, if the rite is sacred to the Manes.

28. After it has been killed, he should sacrifice (Âgya) with (the verse), 'If the beast has lowed' (ibid. 8).

29. And (the sacrificer's) wife should get water and should wash all the apertures of the cow's body.

30. They lay two purifiers (i. e. grass-blades) on (the cow's body) near its navel, cut it up in the direction of its hairs, and draw the omentum out.

31. He should spit it on two pieces of wood, on one (simple) branch and on another forked branch, should besprinkle it (with water), and should roast it.
32. When it has ceased to drop, he should say, ‘Hew the (cow) to pieces—
33. ‘So that the blood does not stain the ground to the east of the fire.’
34. After he has roasted (the omentum), he should pour (Āgya) on it, should take it from the fire towards the north, and should pour (Āgya) on it again.
35. After he has cut off (the prescribed portions from) the omentum in the way prescribed for Sthālipākas, or in the way prescribed for the Svish/akṛit (oblation), he sacrifices with (the words), ‘To the Ash/akā Svāhā!’
36. The rest (should be performed) according to the Sthālipāka rite. The rest according to the Sthālipāka rite.

End of the Third Prapāṭhaka.

32. In the text we ought to read viṣasata, as Dr. Knauer has observed.

1. On the following day the Anvash/akya (ceremony is performed).

2. Or on the day which follows after that.

3. To the south-east (of the house), in the intermediate direction (between south and east), they partition off (a place with mats or the like).

4. The long-side (of that place should lie) in the same (direction).

5. They should perform (the ceremonies) turning their faces towards the same (direction).

6. (It should measure) at least four prakramas (i.e. steps).

7. (It should have) its entrance from the west.

8. In the northern part of that enclosure they make the Lakshana and carry the fire (to that place).

9. To the west of the fire he places a mortar so that it stands firmly, and husks, holding his left hand uppermost, one handful of rice-grains which he has seized with one grasp.

21. I believe that we ought to correct upadhāya into upadhāya. Śāṅkhāyana III, 14, 5: api vāraye kaksham apādahet. Āsvālayana II, 4, 9: agnimā vā kaksham uposhet.

8. ‘They make the Lakshana’ means, they prepare the ground on which the fire shall be established, by drawing the five lines. See above, I, 1, 9, 10; Grīhya-samgraha I, 47 seq.
10. When (the rice) has been husked,
11. He should once carefully remove the husks.
12. And then he should cut off a lump of flesh from that thigh and should cut it in small pieces on a new slaughtering-bench,
13. (With the intention) that the Pindas (or lumps of food offered to the Manes) should be thoroughly mixed up with flesh.
14. On the same fire he cooks one mess of rice-grains and one of meat, stirring up the one and the other separately, from right to left, with the two pot-ladles.
15. After he has cooked them, he should pour (Âgya) on them, should take them from the fire towards the south, and should not pour (Âgya) on them again.
16. In the southern part of the enclosure (Sûtras 3 seq.) he should have three pits dug, so that the eastern (pit is dug) first,
17. One span in length, four inches in breadth and in depth.
18. Having made the Lakshâna to the east of the eastern pit, they carry the fire (to that place).
19. Having carried the fire round the pits on their west side, he should put it down on the Lakshâna.
20. He strews (round the fire) one handful of Darbha grass which he has cut off in one portion.

12. As to the words 'from that thigh,' comp. above, chap. 1, 5.
14. Comp. chap. 1, 6. The sacrificial food is stirred up here from right to left, not from left to right, because it is sacred to the Manes. The mess of meat consists of the meat treated of in Sûtra 11.

24. Of southward-pointed Kusa grass,
25. Inclined towards the south.
26. And he should put a mat on it.
27. To that (layer of grass) they fetch for him (the following sacrificial implements), one by one, from right to left:
28. The two pots in which sacrificial food has been cooked (Sûtra 14), the two pot-ladles (Sûtra 14), one brazen vessel, one Darvi (spoon), and water.
29. (The sacrificer’s) wife places a stone on the Barhis and pounds (on that stone the fragrant substance called) Sthagara.
30. And on the same (stone) she grinds some collyrium, and anoints therewith three Darbha blades, including the interstices (between the single blades?).
31. He should also get some oil made from sesame seeds,
32. And a piece of linen tape.
33. After he has invited an odd number of blameless Brâhmañas, whose faces should be turned towards the north, to sit down on a pure spot,
34. And has given them Darbha grass (in order that they may sit down thereon),
35. He gives them (pure) water and afterwards sesamum-water, pronouncing his father's name, 'N. N.! To thee this sesamum-water, and to those who follow thee here, and to those whom thou followest. To thee Svadhā!'
36. After he has touched water, (he does) the same for the other two.
37. In the same way (he gives them) perfumes.
38. The words in which he addresses (the Brāhmaṇas) when going to sacrifice, are, 'I shall offer it into the fire.'
39. After they have replied, 'Offer it,' he should cut off (the prescribed portions) from the two messes of cooked food (Sūtra 14), (and should put those portions) into the brazen vessel. He then should sacrifice, picking out (portions of the Havis) with the pot-ladle, the first (oblation) with (the words), 'Svāhā to Soma Pitṛimat,' the second with (the words), 'Svāhā to Agni Kavyavāhana' (MB. II, 3, 1. 2).

KÂNDIKÂ 3.

1. From now onwards he has to perform (the rites) wearing his sacrificial cord over his right shoulder and keeping silence.

2. With his left hand he should seize a Darbha blade and should (therewith) draw (in the middle of the three pits) a line from north to south, with (the formula), 'The Asuras have been driven away' (MB. II, 3, 3.

3. Seizing, again with his left hand, a fire-brand, he should place it on the south side of the pits with (the verse), 'They who assuming (manifold) shapes' (ibid. 4).

4. He then calls the Fathers (to his sacrifice) with (the verse), 'Come hither, ye Fathers, who have drunk Soma' (ibid. 5).

5. He then should place pátra vessels of water near the pits.

6. Seizing, again with his left hand, (the first) vessel, he should pour it out from right to left on the Darbha grass in the eastern pit, pronouncing his father's name, 'N. N.! Wash thyself, and (may) those who follow thee here, and those whom thou followest, (wash themselves). To thee Svadhâ!'

12. He should turn away, (should hold his breath,) and turning back before he emits his breath, he should murmur, 'The Fathers have enjoyed themselves; they have shown their manly vigour each for his part' (ibid. 7).

13. Seizing, again with his left hand, a Darbha blade (anointed with collyrium; chap. 2, 30), he should put it down, from right to left, on the Pinda in the eastern pit, pronouncing his father's name, 'N. 14. After he has touched water, (he does) the same for the other two.

15. In the same way (he offers) the oil (to the fathers);

16. In the same way the perfume.
17. Then he performs the deprecation (in the following way):
18. On the eastern pit he lays his hands, turning the inside of the right hand upwards, with (the formula), 'Adoration to you, O Fathers, for the sake of life! Adoration to you, O Fathers, for the sake of vital breath!' (MB. II, 3, 8);
19. On the middle (pit), turning the inside of the left hand upwards, with (the formula), 'Adoration to you, O Fathers, for the sake of terror! Adoration to you, O Fathers, for the sake of sap!' (MB., loc. cit.);
20. On the last (pit), turning the inside of the right hand upwards, with (the formula), 'Adoration to you, O Fathers, for the sake of comfort! Adoration to you, O Fathers, for the sake of wrath!' (MB. II, 3, 9).
21. Then joining his hands he murmurs, 'Adoration to you, O Fathers! O Fathers! Adoration to you!' (MB., loc. cit.).
22. He looks at his house with (the words), 'Give us a house, O Fathers!' (MB. II, 3, 10).
23. He looks at the Pindas with (the words), 'May we give you an abode, O Fathers!' (MB. II, 3, 11).

26. Seizing, again with his left hand, the vessel of water (Sûtra 5), he should sprinkle (water) round the Pindas from right to left, with (the verse), 'Bringing sap' (MB. II, 3, 13).

27. The middle Pinda (offered to the grandfather) the wife (of the sacrificer) should eat, if she is desirous of a son, with (the verse), 'Give fruit to the womb, O Fathers' (MB. II, 3, 14).

28. Or of those Brâhmaṇas (that person) who receives the remnants (of the sacrificial food, should eat that Pinda).

29. Having besprinkled (and thus extinguished) the fire-brand (Sûtra 3) with water, with (the verse), 'Gâtavedas has been our messenger for what we have offered' (MB. II, 3, 15)—

30. (The sacrificer) should besprinkle the sacrificial vessels, and should have them taken back, two by two.

31. The Pindas he should throw into water,

3. Anvāhārya literally means, what is offered (or given) after something else, supplementary. In the commentary on Gobhila, p. 666, a verse is quoted:

amāvāsyām dvitiyam yad anvāhāryam tad uktaye,
'The second (Srāddha) which is performed on the day of the new moon, that is called anvāhārya.' First comes the Pinda-pitriyāgaṇa, and then follows the Anvāhārya Srāddha; the last is identical with the Pārvana Srāddha, which is described as the chief form of Srāddha ceremonies, for instance in Sāṅkhāyana-Gṛhya IV, 1. KÂNDIKÂ 5.

1. At (the sacrifices) for the obtainment of special wishes, which will be henceforth described,

3. He should touch the earth, to the west of the fire, with his two hands turned downwards, with (the verse), ‘We partake of the earth’s’ (MB. II, 4, 1).

32–34. Khâdira-Grihyâ III, 5, 40. I understand that this sacrifice stands in connection with the rural festivals which are treated of in the preceding Sûtras. In the commentary, from the Mantra the conclusion is drawn that the ceremony in question belongs to the day of the Ekâshâkâ. But the Ekâshâkâ is the Ashâkâ of the dark fortnight of Mâgha (see S. B. E. XXIX, 102), and the description of the rites belonging to that day has already been given above, Sûtras 17–21. It very frequently occurs in the Grihyâ ritual that Mantras are used at sacrifices standing in no connection with those for which they have originally been composed.

4. In the night-time (he pronounces that Mantra so that it ends with the word) 'goods' (vasu), in the day-time (so that it ends) with 'wealth' (dhanam).

5. With the three verses, 'This praise' (MB. II, 4, 2–4) he should wipe along (with his hands) around (the fire).

6. Before sacrifices the Virûpâksha formula (MB. II, 4, 6) (should be recited).

7. And at (ceremonies) which are connected with special wishes, the Prapada formula (MB. II, 4, 5)—(in the following way):

8. He should murmur (the Prapada formula), 'Austerities and splendour,' should perform one suppression of breath, and should, fixing his thoughts on the object (of his wish), emit his breath, when beginning the Virûpâksha formula.

9. When undertaking ceremonies for the obtainment of special wishes, let him fast during three (days and) nights,

10. Or (let him omit) three meals.

6–8. Khâdîra-Grihyâ I, 2, 23; Grihyâ-samgraha I, 96. It is stated that the recitation of the Virûpâksha and Prapada formulas and also the parisamûhana (Sûtra 5) should be omitted at the so-called Kshiprahomas, i.e. at sacrifices performed without the assistance of a yajñavid. See Bloomfield's notes on Grihyasamgraha I, 92, 96. Regarding the way in which a prânâyâma ('suppression of breath') is performed, comp. Vasishtâha XXV, 13 (S. B. E. XIV, p. 126).

10. There are two meals a day. The words of this Sûtra, 'Or three meals,' are explained in the commentary in the following way. He should, if he does not entirely abstain from food through three days, take only three meals during that time, i.e. he should take one meal a day. The commentator adds that some read abhaktâni instead of bhaktâni ('or he should omit three meals'), in which case the result would be the same. I prefer the reading
11. At such ceremonies, however, as are repeated regularly, (let him do so only) before their first performance.

12. He should (simply) fast, however, before such ceremonies as are performed on sacrificial days (i.e. on the first day of the fortnight).

13. (At a ceremony) which ought to be performed immediately (after the occurrence by which it has been caused), the consecration follows after (the ceremony itself).

15. Of which the panicles are turned towards the east, if he is desirous of holy lustre,

16. To the north, if desirous of sons and of cattle,

17. To both directions, if desirous of both.

18. One who desires that his stock of cattle may increase, should offer a sacrifice of rice and barley bhaktāni, and propose to supply, not, 'he should eat,' but 'he should omit' ('abhoganam,' Sūtra 9). Possibly the meaning is that three successive meals should be omitted; thus also the compiler of the Khādira-Gṛhya seems to have understood this Sūtra.

Such sānnipāṭika ceremonies are uparishādaiksha. The dikshā is the preparatory consecration (of the sacrificer), for instance by three days of fasting. A ceremony which has its dikshā after itself is called uparishādaiksha.' Similarly the commentary on Khādira-Gṛhya IV, 1, 3 says, 'uparishāt sānnipāṭike naimittike karma krītvābhoganan.'

16. During the time between those dark fort-nights he should observe chastity till the end (of the rite), till the end (of the rite).

KĀNDIKĀ 7.

1. Let him select the site for building his house—
2. On even ground, which is covered with grass, which cannot be destroyed (by inundations, &c.),
3. On which the waters flow off to the east or to the north,
4. On which plants grow which have no milky juice or thorns, and which are not acrid.
5. The earth should be white, if he is a Brāhmaṇa,
6. Red, if he is a Kshatriya,
7. Black, if he is a Vaisya.
8. (The soil should be) compact, one-coloured, not dry, not salinous, not surrounded by sandy desert, not swampy.
9. (Soil) on which Darbha grass grows, (should be chosen) by one who is desirous of holy lustre, 10. (Soil covered) with big sorts of grass, by one who is desirous of strength,
11. (Soil covered) with tender grass, by one who is desirous of cattle.

7, 1 seq. Comp. Khâdira-Gṛhya IV, 2, 6 seq.
12. (The site of the house) should have the form of a brick.
13. Or it should have the form of a round island.
14. Or there should be natural holes (in the ground) in all directions.
15. On such (ground) one who is desirous of fame or strength, should build his house with its door to the east:
16. One who is desirous of children or of cattle, (should build it) with its door to the north;
17. One who is desirous of all (those things), (should build it) with its door to the south.
18. Let him not build it with its door to the west.
19. And a back-door.
20. The house-door.
21. So that (he?) may not be exposed to looks (?).

19-21. I have translated the words of these Sūtras without trying to express any meaning. According to the commentary the meaning is the following: 19. He should not build a house which has its door on the back-side, or which has one front-door and one back-door. 20. The house-door should not face the door of another house. 21. The house-door should be so constructed that the householder cannot be seen by Kāndālas, &c., when he is performing religious acts or when dining in his house. Or, if instead of saṃloki the reading saṃloki is accepted, the Sūtra means: the house-door should be so constructed, that valuable objects, &c., which are in the house, cannot be seen by passers-by.—The commentary on Khādīra-Gṛhya IV. 2. 15 contains the remark: dvāradvāyaṁ (var. lectio, dvāraṁ dvāraṁ) parasparam nīga na syād iti keśit. This seems to me to lead to the right understanding of these Sūtras. I think we ought to read and to divide in this way: (19) anudvāraṁ ka. (20. 21) grīhadvāraṁ yathā na saṃloki syāt. 'And (let him construct) a back-door, so that it does not face the (chief) house-door.' The Khādīra MSS. have the readings, asalloki, asandraloke, saṃloka.
22. ‘Let him avoid an Asvattha tree on the east-side (of his house), and a Plaksha on the south-side, a Nyagrodha on the west-side, and on the north-side an Udumbara.

23. ‘One should say that an Asvattha brings (to the house) danger from fire; one should say that a Plaksha tree brings early death (to the inhabitants of the house), that a Nyagrodha brings oppression through (hostile) arms, that an Udumbara brings diseases of the eye.

24. ‘The Asvattha is sacred to the sun, the Plaksha to Yama, the Nyagrodha is the tree that belongs to Varuna, the Udumbara, to Pragâpati.’

25. He should place those (trees) in another place than their proper one,

26. And should sacrifice to those same deities.

27. Let him put wood on the fire in the middle of the house, and sacrifice a black cow,

28. Or a white goat,

22–24. These are Skolas to which the commentary very appropriately, though not exactly in the sense in which it was originally set down, applies the dictum so frequently found in the Brâhmaṇa texts: na hy ekasmâd aksharâd virâdhayanti. Dr. Knauer’s attempts to restore correct Skolas are perhaps a little hazardous; he inserts in the third verse ka after plakshas, and in the second he changes the first brūyat into ka, whereby the second foot of the hemistich loses its regular shape and receives instead of it the form.

25. He should remove an Asvattha tree from the east-side, &c.

26. He should sacrifice to the deities to whom the transplanted trees are sacred.

27 seq. Here begins the description of the vâstu samana, which extends to Sūtra 43. As to the animal sacrifice prescribed in this Sūtra, comp. Dr. Winternitz’s essay, Einige Bemerkungen über das Bauopfer bei den Indern (Sitzungsbericht der Anthrop. Gesellschaft in Wien, 19 April, 1887), p. 8.
29. (The one or the other) together with milk-rice.
30. Or (only) milk-rice.
31. Having mingled together the fat (of the animal), Âgya, its flesh, and the milk-rice,
32. He should take eight portions (of that mixture) and should sacrifice (the following eight oblations):
33. The first (verse, accompanying the first oblation), is, ‘Vâstoshpati!’ (MB. II, 6, 1).
34. (Then follow) the (three) verses of the Vâmadevya,
35. (And the three) Mahâvyâhrîtis.
36. The last (oblation is offered with the formula), ‘To Pragâpati (svâhâ).’
37. After he has sacrificed, he should offer ten Balis,
38. In the different directions (of the horizon), from left to right,
39. And in the intermediate points,
40. In due order, without a transposition.
41. (He should offer a Bali) in the east with (the formula), ‘(Adoration) to Indra!’ in the intermediate direction—‘To Vâyu!’ in the south—‘To Yama!’ in the intermediate direction—‘(Svadhâ) to the Fathers!’ in the west—‘(Adoration) to Varuṇa!’ in the intermediate direction—‘To Mahârâga!’ in the north—‘To Soma!’ in the intermediate direction—‘To Mahendra!’ down-

34. Comp. above, chap. 6, 7 note.
36. The commentary says: ‘The last oblation should be offered with the formula, “To Pragâpati svâhâ!”’ Probably we ought to correct the text, Pragâpati ity uttama, ‘the last (verse) is, “Pragâpati!”’ (MB. II, 5, 8); see above, IV, 6, 9; Khâdira-Gṛihya IV, 2, 20.
wards—'To Vāsuki!' upwards, in the sky (i.e. throwing the Bali into the air), with (the formula), 'Adoration to Brahman!'

42. To the east, upwards, and downwards this should be done constantly, day by day.

43. (The whole ceremony is repeated) every year or at the two sacrifices of the first fruits.

KĀNDIKĀ 8.

1. At the Sravanā and Āgrahāyani sacrifices he should leave a remainder of fried grains.

2. Having gone out of the village in an easterly or in a northerly direction, and having put wood on the fire at a place where four roads meet, he should sacrifice (those fried grains) with his joined hands, with the single (verses of the text), 'Hearken, Rākā!' (MB. II, 6, 2–5).

3. Walking eastward (he should), looking upwards, (offer a Bali) to the hosts of divine beings, with (the formula), 'Be a giver of wealth' (ibid. 6);

4. (Walking ?) towards the side, (he should offer a Bali) to the hosts of other beings, looking downwards.

5. Returning (to the fire) without looking back, he should, together with the persons belonging to his family, as far as they have been initiated (by the Upanayana), eat the fried grains.

6. (This ceremony) procures happiness.

7. (With the two formulas), 'Obeying the will' and 'Saṅkha' (MB. II, 6, 7. 8), he should sacrifice two oblations of rice and of barley separately,

8. With reference to a person whose favour he wishes to gain.

9. This is done daily.

10. With the Ekāksharyā verse (MB. II, 6, 9) two rites (are performed) which are connected with the observance (of fasting) for a fortnight.

11. One who is desirous of long life, should sacrifice (with that verse), in the night of the full moon, one hundred pegs of Khadira wood;

12. Of iron, if he desires that (his enemies) may be killed.

13. Now another ceremony (performed with the same verse).

14. Having gone out of the village in an easterly or in a northerly direction, he should at a place where four roads meet, or on a mountain, set an elevated surface, consisting of the dung of beasts of the forest, on fire, should sweep the coals away, and should make an oblation of butter (on that surface) with his mouth, repeating that Mantra in his mind.

7 seq. Khādira-Gṛhyā IV, 2, 24 seq.

7. I.e. he should sacrifice one oblation of rice, and one of barley.

8. Literally, to a person, &c. The meaning is, he should pronounce the name of that person. The Sūtra is repeated from IV, 5, 20; thus its expressions do not exactly fit the connection in which it stands here.

10 seq. Khādira-Gṛhyā IV, 3, 1 seq.
15. If (that oblation of butter) catches fire, twelve villages (will be his).
16. If smoke rises, at least three.
17. They call this ceremony one which is not in vain.
18. One who desires that his means of livelihood may not be exhausted, should sacrifice green cow-dung in the evening and in the morning.
19. Of articles which he has bought, he should, after having fasted three (days and) nights, make an oblation with the formula, ‘Here this Visvakarman’ (MB. II, 6, 10).
20. Of a garment he should offer some threads (with that formula),
21. Of a cow some hairs (of its tail);
22. In the same way (he should offer some part) of other articles which he has bought.
23. The sacrifice of a full oblation (with the verse, ‘A full oblation I sacrifice,’ MB. II, 6, 11) should be performed on the sacrificial day (i.e. on the first day of the fortnight),
24. And (on such a day let him sacrifice) with (the formula), ‘Indramavadat (?)’ (MB. II, 6, 12).
25. One who is desirous of glory, (should offer) the first (oblation); one who is desirous of companions, the second.

18. Khâdîra-Grihyâ IV, 3, 18. On haritagomayân the commentary has the following note: yaih khalu gomayaîh samkule pradesse haritâni trîmâni prâsastâny utpadyante tân kila gomayân haritagomayân ātâkshate. te khalîv ârdrâ ihâbbhipreyante, katham gûâyate. teshv eva tatprasiddheh.
23 seq. Khâdîra-Grihyâ IV, 3, 8 seq. The Pratîka quoted in Sûtra 24 is corrupt.
Kân dikâ 9.

1. One who desires to become a ruler among men should fast through a period of eight nights.

2. Then he should provide a Sruva spoon, a cup (for water), and fuel, of Udumbara wood,

3. Should go out of the village in an easterly or in a northerly direction, should put wood on the fire at a place where four roads meet,

4. And should sacrifice Âgya, turning his face towards the sun, with (the formulas), ‘Food indeed is the only thing that is pervaded by the metres,’ and, ‘Bliss indeed’ (MB. II, 6, 13. 14);

5. A third (oblation) in the village with (the formula), ‘The food’s essence is ghee’ (ibid. 15).

6. One who is desirous of cattle, (should offer this oblation) in a cow-stable.

7. If (the cow-stable) is damaged by fire (?), (he should offer) a monk’s robe.

8. On a dangerous road let him make knots in the skirts of the garments (of himself and of his companions),

9. Approaching those (of the travellers) who wear garments (with skirts).

9, 1 seq. Khâdîra-Grîhya IV, 3, 10 seq.

7. Perhaps we ought to follow the commentary and to translate, ‘When (the cow-stable) becomes heated (by the fire on which he is going to sacrifice),’ &c. (‘gosh/agnim upasamâdhyâiva homo na kartavyah, kin tv agnim upasamâdhyâyápi távat pratikshâniyam yávad gosh/ham upatapâyamánam bhavati’). I have translated â dvaram according to the ordinary meaning of the word; in the commentary it is taken as equivalent to lauhakûrnâm (copper filings).
10. (Let him do so with the three formulas, MB. II, 6, 13-15) with the word Svāhā at the end of each.

11. This will bring a prosperous journey (to himself) and to his companions. [Or: (He should do the same with the garments) of his companions. This will bring a prosperous journey.]

12. One who desires to gain a thousand cart-loads (of gold), should sacrifice one thousand oblations of flour of fried grains.

13. One who is desirous of cattle, should sacrifice one thousand oblations of the excrements of a male and a female calf;

14. Of a male and a female sheep, if he is desirous of flocks.

15. One who desires that his means of livelihood may not be exhausted, should sacrifice in the evening and in the morning the fallings-off of rice-grains, with (the formulas), 'To Hunger Svāhā!' 'To Hunger and Thirst Svāhā!' (MB. II, 6, 16. 17).

16. If somebody has been bitten by a venomous animal, he should murmur (the verse), 'Do not fear, thou wilt not die' (MB. II, 6, 18), and should besprinkle him with water.

17. With (the formula), 'Strong one! Protect' (MB. II, 6, 19), a Snātaka, when lying down (to sleep), should lay down his bamboo staff near (his bed).

18. This will bring him luck.

19. (The verses), 'Thy worm is killed by Atri' (MB. II, 7, 1-4), he should murmur, besprinkling a place where he has a worm with water.

16 seq. Khādira-Grhya IV, 4, 1 seq.
If he intends to do this for cattle, he should fetch in the afternoon an earth-clod taken out of a furrow, and should put it down in the open air.

In the morning he should strew the dust of it round (the place attacked by worms), and should murmur (the same texts).

KÂNDIKÂ 10.

1. To the north of the place (in which the Arghya reception will be offered to a guest), they should bind a cow (to a post or the like), and should (reverentially) approach it with (the verse), 'Arhanâ putra vâsa' (MB. II, 8, 1).

2. (The guest to whom the Arghya reception is going to be offered) should come forward murmuring, 'Here I tread on this Padyâ Virâg for the sake of the enjoyment of food' (ibid. 2).

3. (He should do so) where they are going to perform the Arghya ceremony for him,

4. Or when they perform it.

5. Let them announce three times (to the guest) separately (each of the following things which are 10, 1 seq. The Arghya reception; Khâdira-Grhâya IV, 4, 5 seq.; Grhâya-samgraha II, 62–65. The first words of the Mantra quoted in Sûtra 1 are corrupt. The Mantra is evidently an adaptation of the well-known verse addressed to the Āgrahâyanî (Gobhila III, 9, 9; Mantra-Brâhma II, 2, 1), or to the Ashâkâ (Pâraskara III, 3, 5, 8): prathamâ ha vyuvâsa, &c. The first word arhanâ ('duly'), containing an allusion to the occasion of the Arghya ceremony, to which this Mantra is adapted, seems to be quite right; the third word may be, as Dr. Knauer conjectures, uvâsa ('she has dwelt,' or perhaps rather 'she has shone'). For the second word I am not able to suggest a correction.

GIHYA-SUTRA OF HIRAYAKESIN.
INTRODUCTORY NOTE

TO THE

GRIHYA-SŪTRA OF HIRANYAKESIN.

After the excellent remarks of Professor Bühler on the position of Hiranyakesin among the Sūtra authors of the Black Yagur-veda (Sacred Books, vol. ii, p. xxiii seq.), I can here content myself with shortly indicating the materials on which my translation of this Grīhya-sūtra, which was unpublished when I began to translate it, is based. For the first half of the work I could avail myself, in the first place, of the text, together with the commentary of Mátridatta, which the late Dr. Schoenberg of Vienna had prepared for publication, and which was based on a number of MSS. collated by him. It is my melancholy duty gratefully to acknowledge here the kindness with which that prematurely deceased young scholar has placed at my disposal the materials he had collected, and the results of his labour which he continued till the last days of his life. For the second half of the Sūtra his death deprived me of this important assistance; here then Professors Kielhorn of Göttingen and Bühler of Vienna have been kind enough to enable me to finish the task of this translation, by lending me two MSS. of the text and two MSS. of Mátridatta's commentary which they possess.

Finally, Dr. J. Kirste of Vienna very kindly sent me the proof-sheets of his valuable edition before it was published. With the aid of these my translation has been revised.
GRIHYA-SŪTRA OF HIRANYAKESIN.

PRASNA I, PATALA 1, SECTION 1.

1. We shall explain the Upanayana (i.e. the initiation of the student).

2. Let him initiate a Brāhmaṇa at the age of seven years,

3. A Rāganya, of eleven, a Vaisya, of twelve.

4. A Brāhmaṇa in the spring; a Rāganya in the summer, a Vaisya in the autumn.

5. In the time of the increasing moon, under an auspicious constellation, preferably (under a constellation) the name of which is masculine,

6. He should serve food to an even number of Brāhmaṇas and should cause them to say, ‘An auspicious day! Hail! Good luck!’ —

7. (Then he) should have the boy satiated, should have his hair shaven, and after (the boy) has bathed and has been decked with ornaments—

1, 2. The statement commonly given in the Grihya-sūtras and Dharma-sūtras is, that the initiation of a Brāhmaṇa shall take place in his eighth year, though there are differences of opinion whether in the eighth year after conception, or after birth (Āśvalāyana-Grihya 1, 19, 1. 2). Mātridatta states that the rule given here in the Grihya-sūtra refers to the seventh year after birth. In the Dharma-sūtra (comp. Āpastamba I, 1, 18) it is stated that the initiation of a Brāhmaṇa shall take place in the eighth year after his conception. Comp. the remarks of Professor Bühler, S. B. E., vol. ii, p. xxiii.

8. He should dress him in a (new) garment which has not yet been washed.

9. In a place inclined towards the east, (or) inclined towards the north, (or) inclined towards north-east, or in an even (place), he raises (the surface on which he intends to sacrifice), sprinkles it with water,

10. Kindles fire by attrition, or fetches common (worldly) fire, puts the fire down, and puts wood on the fire.

11. He strews eastward-pointed Darbha grass round the fire;

12. Or (the grass which is strewn) to the west and to the east (of the fire), may be northward-pointed.

13. He (arranges the Darbha blades so as to) lay the southern (blades) uppermost, the northern ones below, if their points are turned (partly) towards the east and (partly) towards the north.

14. Having strewn Darbha grass, to the south of the fire, in the place destined for the Brahman,

15. Having with the two (verses), 'I take (the fire) to myself,' and, 'The fire which (has entered)—taken possession of the fire,

16. And having, to the north of the fire, spread out Darbha grass, he prepares the (following) objects, according as they are required (for the ceremony which he is going to perform):

17. A stone, a (new) garment which has not yet been washed, a skin (of an antelope, or a spotted deer, &c.), a threefold-twisted girdle of Muṅga grass if he is a Brāhmaṇa (who shall be initiated), a bow-string for a Rāganya, a woollen thread for a Vaisya, a staff of Bilva or of Palāsa wood for a Brāhmaṇa, of Nyagrodha wood for a Rāganya, of Udumbara wood for a Vaisya.

18. He binds together the fuel, twenty-one pieces of wood, or as many as there are oblations to be made.

19. Together with that fuel he ties up the (three) branches of wood which are to be laid round the fire, (which should have the shape of) pegs.

20. (He gets ready, besides, the spoon called) Darvi, a bunch of grass, the Âhya pot, the pot for the Prauṣita water, and whatever (else) is required;

21. All (those objects) together, or (one after the other) as it happens.

22. At that time the Brahman suspends the sacrificial cord over his left shoulder, sips water, passes by the fire, on its west side, to the south side, throws away a grass blade from the Brahman's seat, touches water, and sits down with his face turned towards the fire.

17. Sāṅkhāyana II, 1, 15 seqq., &c. As to the stone, comp. below, I, 1, 4, 13.

20. Regarding the bunch of grass, see below, I, 2, 6, 9.

22. Gobhila I, 6, 14 seq. Comp. the passages quoted in the note.
23. He takes as ‘purifiers’ two straight Darbha blades with unbroken points of one span’s length, cuts them off with something else than his nail, wipes them with water, pours water into a vessel over which he has laid the purifiers, fills (that vessel) up to near the brim, purifies (the water) three times with the two Darbha strainers, holding their points to the north, places (the water) on Darbha grass on the north side of the fire, and covers it with Darbha grass.

24. Having consecrated the Prokshāṇi water by means of the purifiers as before, having placed the vessels upright, and having untied the fuel, he sprinkles (the sacrificial vessels) three times with the whole (Prokshāṇi water).

25. Having warmed the Darvī spoon (over the fire), having wiped it, and warmed it again, he puts it down.

26. Having besprinkled (with water) the Darbha grass with which the fuel was tied together, he throws it into the fire.

27. He melts the Āgya, pours the Āgya into the Āgya pot over which he has laid the purifiers, takes some coals (from the fire) towards the north, puts (the Āgya) on these (coals), throws light (on the

24. Regarding the Prokshāṇi water, see Śāṇkhāyana I, 8, 25 note. The word which I have translated by ‘vessels’ is bilavanti, which literally means ‘the things which have brims.’ Probably this expression here has some technical connotation unknown to me. Mātridatta simply says, bilavanti pātrānī.—‘As before’ means, ‘as stated with regard to the Prawita water.’

5. To the west of the fire (the teacher who is going to initiate the student), sits down with his face turned towards the east.
6. To the south (of the teacher) the boy, wearing the sacrificial cord over his left shoulder, having sipped water, sits down and touches (the teacher).
7. Then (the teacher) sprinkles water round the fire (in the following way):

10. On all sides, so as to keep his right side turned towards (the fire), with (the Mantra), 'God Savitri! Give thy impulse!' (Taitt. Samh. I, 7, 7, 1).

11. Having (thus) sprinkled (water) round (the fire), and having anointed the fuel (with Âgya), he puts it on (the fire) with (the Mantra), 'This fuel is thy self, Gâtavedas! Thereby thou shalt be inflamed and shalt grow. Inflame us and make us grow; through offspring, cattle, holy lustre, and through the enjoyment of food make us increase. Svâhâ!'

12. He then sacrifices with the (spoon called) Darvi (the following oblations):

13. Approaching the Darvi (to the fire) by the northerly junction of the pegs (laid round the fire), and fixing his mind on (the formula), 'To Pragâpati, to Manu svâhâ!' (without pronouncing that Mantra), he sacrifices a straight, long, uninterrupted (stream of Âgya), directed towards the south-east.

14. Approaching the Darvi (to the fire) by the southern junction of the pegs (laid round the fire),

11. As to the Mantra, compare Sānkhâyana II, 10, 4, &c.

13, 14. The two oblations described in these Sûtras are the so-called Âghâras; see Sûtra 15, and Pâraskara I, 5, 3; Âsvâlâyana I, 10, 13. Regarding the northern and the southern junction of the Paridhi woods, see above, Sûtras 3 and 4. According to Mâtridatta, the words 'long, uninterrupted' (Sûtra 13) are to be supplied also in Sûtra 14.
(he sacrifices) a straight (stream of Âgya), directed towards the north-east, with (the Mantra which he pronounces), 'To Indra svâhā!'

15. Having (thus) poured out the two Âghâra oblations, he sacrifices the two Âgyabhâgas,

16. With (the words), 'To Agni svâhâ!' over the easterly part of the northerly part (of the fire); with (the words), 'To Soma svâhâ!' over the easterly part of the southerly part (of the fire).

17. Between them he sacrifices the other (oblations).

18. (He makes four oblations with the following Mantras): 'Thou whom we have set to work, Gâta-vedas! carry forward (our offerings). Agni! Perceive this work (i.e. the sacrifice), as it is performed (by us). Thou art a healer, a creator of medicine. Through thee may we obtain cows, horses, and men. Svâhâ!

'Thou who liest down athwart, thinking, "It is I who keep (all things) asunder:" to thee who art propitious (to me), I sacrifice this stream of ghee in the fire. Svâhâ!

4. He sacrifices with the Vyaâhrîtis, 'Bhûz! Bhuvaâz! Suvaâz!'—with the single (three Vyaâhrîtis) and with (the three) together.

7. (With the verse), 'What I have done too much in this sacrifice, or what I have done here deficiently, all that may Agni Svish/akrīt, he who knows it, make well sacrificed and well offered for me. To Agni Svish/akrīt, the offerer of well-offered (sacrifices), the offerer of everything, to him who makes us succeed in our offerings and in our wishes, svāhā!'—he offers (the Svish/akrīt oblation) over the easterly part of the northerly part (of the fire), separated from the other oblations.

13. The Râshtrabhârit (oblations he sacrifices) with (the twelve Mantras), 'The champion of truth, he whose law is truth.' After having quickly repeated (each) section, he sacrifices the first oblation with (the words), 'To him svâhâ!' the second (oblation) with (the words), 'To them svâhâ!'

14. Having placed a stone near the northerly junction of the pegs (which are laid round the fire), (the teacher)—

Patala 1, Section 4.

1. Makes the boy tread on (that stone) with his right foot, with (the verse), 'Tread on this stone; like a stone be firm. Destroy those who seek to do thee harm; overcome thy enemies.'

12. 'He performs worship with that Mantra, wearing the sacrificial cord over his right shoulder, to the Manes. According to others, he worships Agni. But this would stand in contradiction to the words (of the Mantra).' Mátridatta.

13. Taiturîya Sawhitâ III, 4, 7. 'To him' (tasmai) is masculine, 'to them' (tâbhyaḥ) feminine. The purport of these words will be explained best by a translation of the first section of the Râshtrabhârit formulas: 'The champion of truth, he whose law is truth, Agni is the Gandharva. His Apsaras are the herbs; "sap" is their name. May he protect this power of holiness and this worldly power. May they protect this power of holiness and this worldly power. To him svâhâ! To them svâhâ!'

4, 1. Comp. Sânkhyâana I, 13, 12; Pâraskara I, 7, 1.
2. After (the boy) has taken off his old (garment), (the teacher) makes him put on a (new) garment that has not yet been washed, with (the verses),

‘The goddesses who spun, who wove, who spread out, and who drew out the skirts on both sides, may those goddesses clothe thee with long life. Blessed with life put on this garment.

‘Dress him; through (this) garment make him reach a hundred (years) of age; extend his life. Brîhaspati has given this garment to king Soma that he may put it on.

‘Mayst thou live to old age; put on the garment! Be a protector of the human tribes against imprecation. Live a hundred years, full of vigour; clothe thyself in the increase of wealth.’

3. Having (thus) made (the boy) put on (the new garment, the teacher) recites over him (the verse),

‘Thou hast put on this garment for the sake of welfare; thou hast become a protector of thy friends against imprecation. Live a hundred long years; a noble man, blessed with life, mayst thou distribute wealth.’

4. He then winds the girdle three times from left to right round (the boy, so that it covers) his navel. (He does so only) twice, according to some (teachers). (It is done) with (the verse),

2. PáRaskara I, 4, 13, 12; Atharva-veda II, 13, 2, 3 (XIX, 24). Instead of paridâtavâ u, we ought to read, as the Atharva-veda has, paridhâtavâ u.

3. Atharva-veda II, 13, 3; XIX, 24, 6.

4. Sânkhâyana II, 2, 1; PáRaskara II, 2, 8. The text of the Mantra as given by Hiranyakeshin is very corrupt, but the corruptions may be as old as the Hiranyakeshi-sûtra itself, or even older.
'Here she has come to us who drives away sin, purifying our guard and our protection, bringing us strength by (the power of) inhalation and exhalation, the sister of the gods, this blessed girdle.'

5. On the north side of the navel he makes a threefold knot (in the girdle) and draws that to the south side of the navel.

6. He then arranges for him the skin (of an antelope, &c., see Sûtra 7) as an outer garment, with (the Mantras),

' The firm, strong eye of Mitra, glorious splendour, powerful and flaming, a chaste, mobile vesture, this skin put on, a valiant (man), N. N. !

' May Aditi tuck up thy garment, that thou mayst study the Veda, for the sake of insight and belief and of not forgetting what thou hast learnt, for the sake of holiness and of holy lustre!'

7. The skin of a black antelope (is worn) by a Brâhmaṇa, the skin of a spotted deer by a Râganya, the skin of a he-goat by a Vaisya.

8. He then gives him in charge (to the gods), a Brâhmaṇa with (the verse), ' We give this (boy) in charge, O Indra, to Brahman, for the sake of great learning. May he (Brahman?) lead him to old age, and may he (the boy) long watch over learning.'

6. I propose to correct garishnu into karishnu. See Śânkhâyana II, 1, 30.

7. Śânkhâyana II, 1, 2. 4. 5, &c.

8. In the first hemistich I propose to correct pari dadhmasi into pari dadmasi. The verse seems to be an adaptation of a Mantra which contained a form of the verb pari-dhâ (comp. Atharva-veda XIX, 24, 2); thus the reading pari ... dadhmasi found in the MSS. may be easily accounted for. The second hemistich is very corrupt, but the Atharva-veda (loc. cit.: yathainau garase nayât) shows at least the general sense.
A Rāganya (he gives in charge to the gods) with (the verse), ‘We give this boy in charge, O Indra, to Brahman, for the sake of great royalty. May he lead him to old age, and may he long watch over royalty.’

A Vaisya (he gives in charge) with (the verse), ‘We give this boy in charge, O Indra, to Brahman, for the sake of great wealth. May he lead him to old age, and may he long watch over wealth.’

9. (The teacher) makes him sit down to the west of the fire, facing the north, and makes him eat the remnants of the sacrificial food, with these (Mantras), ‘On thee may wisdom, on thee may offspring’ (Taitt. Āraṇyaka, Andhra redaction, X, 44).—altering (the text of the Mantras).

10. Some make (the student) eat ‘sprinkled butter.’

11. (The teacher) looks at (the student) while he is eating, with the two verses, ‘At every pursuit we invoke strong (Indra)’ (Taitt. Samh. IV, 1, 2, 1), (and), ‘Him, Agni, lead to long life and splendour’ (Taitt. Samh. II, 3, 10, 3).

12. Some make (the boy) eat (that food with these two verses).

13. After (the boy) has sipped water, (the teacher) causes him to touch (water) and recites over him (the verse), ‘A hundred autumns are before us, O gods, before ye have made our bodies decay, before (our)

1. 'To him who comes (to us), we have come. Drive ye away death! May we walk with him safely; may he walk here in bliss; (may he) walk in bliss until (he returns) to his house'—this (verse the teacher repeats) while (the boy) walks round the fire so as to keep his right side turned towards it.

2. (The teacher) then causes him to say, 'I have come hither to be a student. Initiate me! I will be a student, impelled by the god Savitri.'

3. (The teacher then) asks him:

4. 'What is thy name?'

5. He says, 'N. N!'—what his name is.

6. (The teacher says), 'Happily, god Savitri, may I attain the goal with this N. N.'—here he pronounces (the student's) two names.

7. With (the verse), 'For bliss may the goddesses afford us their protection; may the waters afford drink to us. With bliss and happiness may they overflow us'—both wipe themselves off.

9. He then seizes with his right hand (the boy's) right hand together with the thumb, with (the words), 'Agni has seized thy hand; Soma has seized thy hand; Sāvitri has seized thy hand; Sarasvati has seized thy hand; Pūshan has seized thy hand; Bṛhaspati has seized thy hand; Mitra has seized thy hand; Varuna has seized thy hand; Tvashtri has seized thy hand; Dhātrī has seized thy hand; Vishnu has seized thy hand; Pragāpati has seized thy hand.'

10. 'May Sāvitri protect thee. Mitra art thou by rights; Agni is thy teacher.
   'By the impulse of the god Sāvitri become Bṛhaspati's pupil. Eat water. Put on fuel. Do the service. Do not sleep in the day-time'—thus (the teacher) instructs him.

11. Then (the teacher) gradually moves his right

8. The word which I have translated 'draws . . . towards himself' is the same which is also used in the sense of 'he initiates him' (upanayate). 12. With (the words), 'Thou art the knot of all breath; do not loosen thyself'—(he touches) the place of his navel.

13. After (the teacher) has recited over him (the formula), time; in the morning and in the evening he brings (to his teacher) the food which he has received as alms and a pot of water; every day (he fetches) a bundle of firewood; in the morning and in the evening, or daily in the evening he puts fuel on (the fire, in the following way):

4. (Then) he puts (four) pieces of wood (on the fire) with the single (Vyāhrītis) and with (the three Vyāhrītis) together, and (four other pieces) with (the following four verses),

'This fuel is thine, Agni; thereby thou shalt grow and gain vigour. And may we grow and gain vigour. Svāhā!

'May Indra give me insight; may Sarasvatī, the goddess, (give) insight; may both Āsvins, wreathed with lotus, bestow insight on me. Svāhā!

'The insight that dwells with the Apsaras, the mind that dwells with the Gandharvas, the divine insight and that which is born from men: may that insight, the fragrant one, rejoice in me! Svāhā!

'May insight, the fragrant one, that assumes all shapes, the gold-coloured, mobile one, come to me. Rich in sap, swelling with milk, may she, insight, the lovely-faced one, rejoice in me! Svāhā!'

5. Having wiped round (the fire) in the same way, he sprinkles (water) round (the fire) as above.

16. At the beginning and on the completion of the study of a Kânda (of the Black Yagur-veda he sacrifices) with (the verse), 'The lord of the seat, the wonderful one, the friend of Indra, the dear one, I have entreated for the gift of insight. Svâhâ!'

In the second place the Rîshi of the Kânda (receives an oblation).

(Then follow oblations with the verses), 'This, O Varuna;' 'For this I entreat thee;' 'Thou, Agni;' 'Thus thou, Agni;' 'Thou, Agni, art quick;' 'Pragâpati!' and, 'What I have done too much in this sacrifice.' Here some add as subordinate oblations the Gaya, Abhyâtâna, and Râshtrabhrit (oblations) as above.

4. He goes to a place near which water is, puts wood on the fire, performs the rites down to the oblations made with the Vyāhṛītis, and puts a piece of Palāsa wood on (the fire) with (the verse), 'Let us prepare this song like a chariot, for Gātavedas who deserves it, with our prayer. For his foresight in this assembly is a bliss to us. Āgni! Dwelling in thy friendship may we not suffer harm. Svāhā!'

5. Then he sacrifices with the Vyāhṛītis as above,

6. (And another oblation with the verse), 'The threefold age of Gāmadagni, Kasyapa's threefold age, the threefold age that belongs to the gods: may that threefold age be mine. Svāhā!'

7. (Then follow oblations with the verses), 'This, O Varuṇa,' &c. (see above, I, 2, 8, 16, down to the end of the Sūtra).

8. After he has served food to the Brāhmaṇas, and has caused them to say, 'An auspicious day! Hail! Good luck!' he discharges himself of his vow by (repeating) these (Mantras), 'Āgni, lord of the vow, I have kept the vow.'

With (the words), ‘(Loosen) the lowest (fetter),’ (he takes off) the under garment; with (the words), ‘(Take) away the middle (fetter),’ the girdle. With (the words), ‘And may we, O Āditya, under thy law (&c.),’ (he deposes) his staff. The girdle, the staff, and the black antelope’s skin he throws into water, sits down to the west of the fire, facing the east, and touches the razor (with which he is going to be shaven), with (the formula), ‘Razor is thy name; the axe is thy father. Adoration to thee! Do no harm to me!’

11. Having handed over (that razor) to the barber, he touches the water with which his hair is to be moistened, with (the formula), ‘Be blissful, (O waters), when we touch you.’ [(The barber) then pours together warm and cold water. Having poured warm (water) into cold (water)—]

12. (The barber) moistens the hair near the right ear with (the words), ‘May the waters moisten thee for life, for old age and splendour’ (Taitt. Samhitā I, 2, 1, 1).
13. With (the words), 'Herb! protect him' (Taitt. Samh., loc. cit.), he puts an herb with the point upwards into (the hair).

14. With (the words), 'Axe! do no harm to him!' (Taitt. Samh., loc. cit.), he touches (that herb) with the razor.

15. With (the words), 'Heard by the gods, I shave that (hair)' (Taitt. Samh., loc. cit.), he shaves him.

16. With (the formula), 'If thou shavest, O shaver, my hair and my beard with the razor, the wounding, the well-shaped, make our face resplendent, but do not take away our life'—(the student who is going to take the bath), looks at the barber.

17. He has the beard shaven first, then the hair in his arm-pits, then the hair (on his head), then the hair of his body, then (he has) his nails (cut).

18. A person who is kindly disposed (towards the student), gathers the hair, the beard, the hair of the body, and the nails (that have been cut off), in a lump of bull's dung, and buries (that lump of dung) in a cow-stable, or near an Udumbara tree, or in a clump of Darbha grass, with (the words), 'Thus I

1. With (the formula), 'Stand in your places for the sake of the enjoyment of food. Stand in your places for the sake of long life. Stand in your places for the sake of holy lustre. May I be blessed with long life, an enjoyer of food, adorned with holy lustre.'

2. Then (the teacher) makes him wash himself with lukewarm water, with the three verses, 'O waters, ye are wholesome' (Taitt. Samh. IV, 1, 5, 1), with the four verses, 'The gold-coloured, clean, purifying (waters)' (Taitt. Samh. V, 6, 1), and with the Anuvāka, 'The purifier, the heavenly one' (Taitt. Brāhmaṇa I, 4, 8).

3. Or (instead of performing these rites in the neighbourhood of water) they make an enclosure in a cow-stable and cover it (from all sides); that (the student) enters before sunrise, and in that (enclosure) the whole (ceremony) is performed. 'On that day the sun does not shine upon him,' some say. 'For he who shines (i. e. the sun), shines by the splendour of those who have taken the bath. Adoration to Sāka and Gaṅgabha! Adoration to those deities who are seizers!' (Then) he anoints himself with (that salve of sandal wood) with (the verse), 'The scent that dwells with the Apsaras, and the splendour that dwells with the Gandharvas, divine and human scent: may that here enter upon me!'

5. They bring him a pair of (new) garments that have not yet been washed. He besprinkles them (with water) and puts on the under garment with (the formula), 'Thou art Soma’s body; protect my body! Thou who art my own body, enter upon me; thou who art a blissful body, enter upon me.' Then he touches water, (puts on) the upper garment with the same (Mantra), and sits down to the west of the fire, facing the east.

6. They bring him two ear-rings and a perforated pellet of sandal wood or of Badari wood, overlaid with gold (at its aperture); these two things he ties to a Darbha blade, holds them over the fire, and pours over them (into the fire) oblations (of ghee) with (the Mantras),

'May this gold which brings long life and splendour and increase of wealth, and which gets through (all adversities), enter upon me for the sake of long life, of splendour, and of victory. Svāhā!

'I have obtained an auspicious name like (the name) of a father of gold. Thus may (the gold) make me shine with golden lustre; (may it make me) beloved among many people; may it make me full of holy lustre. Svâhâ!

'Make me beloved among the gods; make me beloved with Brahman (i.e. among the Brâhmaṇas), beloved among Vaisyas and Sûdras; make me beloved among the kings (i.e. among the Kshatriyas). Svâhâ!

'This herb is protecting, overcoming, and powerful. May it make me shine with golden lustre; (may it make me) beloved among many people; may it make me full of holy lustre. Svâhâ!'

7. Having thrice washed (the two ear-rings) in a vessel of water with the same five (Mantras), without the word Svâhâ, (moving them round in the water) from left to right—

Patala 3, Section 11.

1. He puts on the two ear-rings, the right one to his right ear, the left one to his left ear, with (the verse which he repeats for each of the two ear-rings), 'Virâg and Svarâg, and the aiding powers that dwell in our house, the prosperity that dwells in the face of royalty: therewith unite me.'

2. With (the Mantra), 'With the seasons and the combinations of seasons, for the sake of long life, of splendour, with the sap that dwells in the year: therewith we make them touch the jaws'—he clasps the two ear-rings.

3. With (the Mantra), 'This herb is protecting, overcoming, and powerful. May it make me shine with golden lustre; (may it make me) beloved among many people; may it make me full of holy lustre. Thou art not a bond'—he ties the pellet (of wood, mentioned above, Section 10, Sūtra 6) to his neck.

4. He puts on a wreath with the two (verses),

'Beautiful one, elevate thyself to beauty, beautifying my face. Beautify my face and make my fortune increase'—(and),

'(The wreath) which Gamadagni has brought to Sraddhā to please her, that I put on (my head) together with fortune and splendour.'

5. 'The salve coming from the Trikakud (mountain), born on the Himavat, therewith I anoint you (i.e. the eyes), and with fortune and splendour. (I put ?) into myself the demon of the mountain (?)'—with (this verse) he anoints himself with Traikakuda salve, (or) if he cannot get that, with some other (salve).

6. With (the verse), 'My mind that has fled away' (Taitt. Samhita VI, 6, 7, 2) he looks into a mirror.

2. ‘Thou art the (Sáman called) Rathantara; thou art the Vámadevya; thou art the Br̐iḥat;’ the (verse), ‘The two Añkas, the two Nyaṅkas’ (Taitt. Samhitā I, 7, 7, 2); (the verse), ‘May this your chariot, O Aśvins, not suffer damage, neither in pain nor in joy. May it make its way without damage, dispersing those who infest us;’ (and the formula), ‘Here is holding, here is keeping asunder; here is enjoyment, here may it enjoy itself:’ with (these texts) he ascends the chariot, if he enters (the village) on a chariot.

3. ‘A horse art thou, a steed art thou’—with these eleven ‘horses’ names’ (Taitt. Samh. VII, 1, 12) (he mounts) the horse, if (he intends to enter the village) on horseback.

4. With (the formula), ‘With Indra’s thunder-bolt I bestride thee; carry (me); carry the time; carry me forward to bliss. An elephant art thou. The elephant’s glory art thou. The elephant’s splendour art thou. May I become endowed with the elephant’s glory, with the elephant’s splendour’—(he mounts) the elephant, if (he intends to proceed to the village) on it.

3. In this Sūtra three ‘horses’ names’ are given as the Pratīka of the Yagus quoted, ‘Thou art asva, thou art haya, thou art maya.’ Mātridatta observes that the third of them is not found in the Taittirīya Samhitā, which gives only ten, and not eleven, horses’ names.

15. He replies, 'It is well prepared; it is the Virâg; it is food. May it not fail! May I obtain it! May it give me strength! It is well prepared!' —and adds, 'Give food to the Brâhmanas!'

16. After those (Brâhmanas) have eaten, (the host) orders blameless (?) food to be brought to him (i.e. to the guest).

17. He accepts that with (the formula), 'May the heaven give it to thee; may the earth accept it. May the earth give it to thee; may breath accept it. May breath eat thee; may breath drink thee.'

18. With (the verse), 'May Indra and Agni bestow vigour on me' (Taitt. Samh. III, 3, 3, 3) he eats as much as he likes, and gives the remainder to a person who is kindly disposed towards him.

19. If he desires that somebody may not be estranged from him, he should sip water with (the Mantra), 'Whereon the past and the future and all worlds rest, therewith I take hold of thee; I (take hold) of thee; through the Brahman I take hold of thee for myself, N. N.!' —

Patala 4, Section 14.

1. And should, after that person has eaten, seize his right hand.

2. If he wishes that one of his companions, or a pupil, or a servant should faithfully remain with him and not go away, he should bathe in the morning, should put on clean garments, should show patience (with that servant, &c.) during the day, should speak (only) with Brâhmanus, and by night he should go to the dwelling-place of that person, should make water into a horn of a living animal, and should three times walk round his dwelling-place, sprinkling (his urine) round it, with (the Mantra), 'From the mountain (I sever ?) thee, from thy brother, from thy sister, from all thy relations. parishidah kleshyati (i.e. kvaishyasi ?) sasvat parikupilena samkrâmenâvikkhidâ, ûlena parimidho, si parimidho, sy ûlena.

16. The meaning of anusamvriginam (comp. above, I, 4, 12, 15) is uncertain. See the commentary, p. 120 of Dr. Kirste's edition.

3. He puts down the horn of the living animal in a place which is generally accessible.

4. One whose companions, pupils, or servants use to run away, should rebuke them with (the Mantra), 'May he who calls hither (?), call you hither! He who brings back, has brought you back (?). May the rebuke of Indra always rebuke you. If you, who worship your own deceit, despise me (?), . . . . may Indra bind you with his bond, and may he drive you back again to me.'

Now some ceremonies connected with special wishes of the person who has performed the Samâvartana and has settled in a house, will be described.' In my opinion, it would be more correct to consider Sûtra 18 of the preceding section as the last of the aphorisms that regard the Samâvartana. With Sûtra 2 compare Pâraskara III, 7; Āpastamba VIII, 23, 6. It seems impossible to attempt to translate the hopelessly corrupt last lines of the Mantra.

4. A part of this Mantra also is most corrupt. In the first line I propose to write, nivarto vo nyavîvraṭat. With the last line comp. Pâraskara III, 7, 3. I think that the text of Pâraskara should be corrected in the following way: pari tvā hvalano hvalan nivartas tvā nyavîvraṭat, indrah pâsena sitvâ tvâ mahyam . . . (three syllables) ânayet. The Āpastambiya Mantrapâṭha, according to Dr. Winter-nitz's copy, gives the following text: anupohvad anuhvayo vivartto
5. Then he enters his house, puts a piece of Sidhraka wood on (the fire), and sacrifices with the 'on-drawing verse,' 'Back-bringer, bring them back' (Taitt. Samh. III, 3, 10, 1).

6. Now (we shall explain) how one should guard his wife.

7. One whose wife has a paramour, should grind big centipedes (?) to powder, and should insert (that powder), while his wife is sleeping, into her secret parts, with the Mantra, 'Indra . . . . from other men than me.'

8. Now (follows the sacrifice for procuring) prosperity in trade.

9. He cuts off (some portion) from (every) article of trade and sacrifices it——

Patala 4, Section 15.

1. With (the verse), 'If we trade, O gods, trying by our wealth to acquire (new) wealth, O gods, may

7. On sthūrā dṛidhāḥ[ḥ] Mātridatta says, sthūrā dṛidhāḥ sthūrāḥ satapadyah. A part of the Mantra is untranslatable on account of the very corrupt condition of the text. The reading given by most of the MSS. is, Indrāya yāṣya sepham alikam anyebhyaḥ purushebhyo nyatra mat. The Āpastambiya Mantra-pāṭha reads, indrāyāṣya phaligam anyebhyaḥ purushebhyon�atra mat. The meaning very probably is that Indra is invoked to keep away from the woman the sepha of all other men except her husband's.

2. Now (follows) the way for appeasing anger.

3. He addresses the angry person with (the verses), ‘The power of wrath that dwells here on thy forehead, destroying thy enemy (?), may the chaste, wise gods take that away.

‘If thou shootest, as it were, the thought dwelling in thy face, upwards to thy forehead, I loosen the anger of thy heart like the bow-string of an archer.

‘Day, heaven, and earth: we appease thy anger, as the womb of a she-mule (cannot conceive).’

4. Now (follows) the way for obtaining the victory in disputes.

5. He puts wood on the fire at night-time in an inner apartment, performs the rites down to the Vyâhârti oblations, and sacrifices small grains mixed with Âgya, with (the verse), ‘Tongueless one, thou who art without a tongue! I drive thee away through my sacrifice, so that I may gain the victory in the dispute, and that N. N. may be defeated by me. Svâhâ!’

6. Then in the presence (of his adversary), turned towards him, he murmurs (the verses), ‘I take away the speech from thy mouth, (the speech) that dwells in thy mind, (the speech) from thy heart. Out of every limb I take thy speech. Wheresoever thy speech dwells, thence I take it away.

3. Pâraskara III, 13, 5. Possibly we ought to correct mrîd-dhasya into mrîdhrasya. Avadyâm ought to be ava gyâm; see Atharva-veda VI, 42, 1.

5. The commentary explains karâs (small grains) as oleander (karavîra) seeds.

'Rudra with the dark hair-lock! Hero! At every contest strike down this my adversary, as a tree (is struck down) by a thunderbolt.

'Be defeated, be conquered, when thou speakest. Sink down under the earth, when thou speakest, struck down by me irresistibly (?) with the hammer of... (?) That is true what I speak. Fall down, inferior to me, N. N.!'

7. He touches the assembly-hall (in which the contest is going on), and murmurs, 'The golden-armed, blessed (goddess), whose eyes are not faint, who is decked with ornaments, seated in the midst of the gods, has spoken for my good. Svāhā!'

8. 'For me have the high ones and the low ones, for me has this wide earth, for me have Agni and Indra accomplished my divine aim'—with (this verse) he looks at the assembly, and murmurs (it) turned towards (the assembly).

End of the Fourth Pātala.

Prasna I, Pātala 5, Section 16.

1. When he has first seen the new moon, he sips water, and holding (a pot of) water (in his hands) he worships (the moon) with the four (verses), 'Increase' (Taitt. Samh. I, 4, 32), 'May thy milk' (ibid. IV, 2, 7, 4), 'New and new again (the moon) becomes, being born' (ibid. II, 4, 14, 1), 'That Soma which the Ādityas make swell' (ibid. II, 4, 14, 1).

7. Probably we should write agītākṣif.
8. Mātridatta says, pratīvādīnam abhīgapaty eva.
16. This chapter contains different Prāyasāttas.
2. When he has yawned, he murmurs, 'May will and insight (dwell) in me.'

3. If the skirt (of his garment) is blown upon him (by the wind), he murmurs, 'A skirt art thou. Thou art not a thunderbolt. Adoration be to thee. Do no harm to me.'

4. He should tear off a thread (from that skirt) and should blow it away with his mouth.

5. If a bird has befouled him with its excrements, he murmurs, 'The birds that timidly fly together with the destroyers, shall pour out on me happy, blissful splendour and vigour.'

Then let him wipe off that (dirt) with something else than his hand, and let him wash himself with water.

6. 'From the sky, from the wide air a drop of water has fallen down on me, bringing luck. With my senses, with my mind I have united myself, protected by the prayer that is brought forth by the righteous ones'—this (verse) he should murmur, if a drop of water unexpectedly falls down on him.

7. 'If a fruit has fallen down from the top of a tree, or from the air, it is Vāyu (who has made it fall). Where it has touched our bodies or the garment, (there) may the waters drive away destruction'—this (verse) he should murmur, if a fruit unexpectedly falls down on him.

8. 'Adoration to him who dwells at the cross-roads, whose arrow is the wind, to Rudra! Adoration to Rudra who dwells at the cross-roads!’—this (formula) he murmurs when he comes to a cross-road;

9. ‘Adoration to him who dwells among cattle, whose arrow is the wind, to Rudra! Adoration to Rudra who dwells among cattle!’—thus at a dung-heap;

10. ‘Adoration to him who dwells among the serpents, whose arrow is the wind, to Rudra! Adoration to Rudra who dwells among the serpents!’—thus at a place that is frequented by serpents.

11. ‘Adoration to him who dwells in the air, whose arrow is the wind, to Rudra! Adoration to Rudra who dwells in the air!’—this (formula) let him murmur, if overtaken by a tornado.

12. ‘Adoration to him who dwells in the waters, whose arrow is the wind, to Rudra! Adoration to Rudra who dwells in the waters!’—this (formula) he murmurs when plunging into a river which is full of water.

13. ‘Adoration to him who dwells there, whose arrow is the wind, to Rudra! Adoration to Rudra who dwells there!’—this (formula) he murmurs when approaching a beautiful place, a sacrificial site, or a big tree.

14. If the sun rises whilst he is sleeping, he shall fast that day and shall stand silent during that day;

15. The same during the night, if the sun sets whilst he sleeps.

16. Let him not touch a sacrificial post. By touching it, he would bring upon himself (the guilt of) whatever faults have been committed at that sacrifice. If he touches one (sacrificial post), he should say, ‘This is thy wind;’ if two (posts), ‘These are thy two winds;’ if many (posts), ‘These are thy winds.’

17. ‘The voices that are heard after us (?) and around us, the praise that is heard, and the voices of the birds, the deer’s running (?) athwart: that we fear (?) from our enemies’—this (verse) he murmurs when setting out on a road.

18. ‘Like an Udgâtri, O bird, thou singest the Sâman; like a Brahman’s son thou recitest thy hymn, when the Soma is pressed.

‘A blessing on us, O bird; bring us luck and be kind towards us!’—(This Mantra) he murmurs against an inauspicious bird;

19. ‘If thou raisest thy divine voice, entering upon living beings, drive away our enemies by thy voice. O death, lead them to death!’—(thus) against a solitary jackal.

20. Then he throws before the (jackal, as it were), a fire-brand that burns at both ends, towards that region (in which the jackal’s voice is heard), with (the words), ‘Fire! Speak to the fire! Death! Speak to the death!’ Then he touches water,

17. The Mantra is very corrupt. Perhaps anihûtam should be corrected into anuhûtam, which is the reading of the Āpastambîya Mantrapâṭha. In the last Pâda bhâyâmâsi is corrupt; the meaning seems to be, ‘that we (avert from ourselves and) turn it to our enemies.’ Probably Dr. Kirste is right in reading bhâgâmâsi.

21. And worships (the jackal) with the Anuvāka, 'Thou art mighty, thou carriest away' (Taitt. Samhítā I, 3, 3).

Patala 5, Section 17.

1. A she-wolf (he addresses) with (the verse), 'Whether incited by others or whether on its own accord the Bhayedāka (? Bhayodāka, var. lect.) utters this cry, may Indra and Agni, united with Brahman, render it blissful to us in our house.'

2. A bird (he addresses) with (the verse), 'Thou fliest, stretching out thy legs; the left eye . . .; may nothing here suffer harm (through thee);'

3. An owl (piṅgalā) with (the verse), 'The bird with the golden wings flies to the abode of the gods. Flying round the village from left to right portend us luck by thy cry, O owl!'

4. 'May my faculties return into me; may life return, prosperity return; may the divine power return into me; may my goods return to me.

And may these fires that are stationed on the (altars called) Dhishnvās, be in good order here, each in its right place. Svāhā!

'My self has returned, life has returned to me; breath has returned, design has returned to me. (Agni) Vaisvānara, grown strong with his rays, may he dwell in my mind, the standard of immortality. Svāhā!

'The food which is eaten in the evening, that does not satiate in the morning him whom hunger assails. May all that (which we have seen in our dreams), do no harm to us, for it has not been seen by day. To Day svâhâ!—with these (verses) he sacrifices sesamum seeds mixed with Âgya, if he has seen a bad dream.

5. Now the following expiations for portents are prescribed. A dove sits down on the hearth, or the bees make honey in his house, or a cow (that is not a calf) sucks another cow, or a post puts forth shoots, or an anthill has arisen (in his house): cases like these (require the following expiation):

6. He should bathe in the morning, should put on clean garments, should show patience (with everybody) during the day, and should speak (only) with Brâhmaṇas. Having put wood on the fire in an inner apartment, and having performed the rites down to the Vyâhrîti oblations, he sacrifices with (the verses), 'This, O Varuṇa,' &c. (see above I, 2, 8, 16, down to the end of the Sûtra). Then he serves food to the Brâhmaṇas and causes them to say, 'An auspicious day! Hail! Good luck!'

Patala 5, Section 18.

1. 'May Indra and Agni make you go. May the two Aśvins protect you. Brihâspati is your herdsman. May Pûshan drive you back again'—

5. Sânkhâyana V, 5. 8. 11; Âsvalâyana III, 7, &c. Kuptvâ is corrupt; we should expect a locative. We ought to correct kuptvâm, as Dr. Kirste has observed, comp. Āpastamba-Grihya VIII, 23, 9.

6. Comp. above, I, 4, 14, 2; 15, 5; I, 2, 8, 16; I, 3, 9, 7. 8.

this (verse) he recites over the cows when they go away (to their pasture-grounds), and (the verse), 'May Pûshan go after our cows' (Taitt. Samh. IV, 1, 11, 2).

2. With (the verse), 'These cows that have come hither, free from disease and prolific, may they swim (full of wealth) like rivers; may they pour out (wealth), as (rivers discharge their floods) into the ocean'—he looks at the cows, when they are coming back.

3. With (the formula), 'You are a stand at rest; may I (?) become your stand at rest. You are immovable. Do not move from me. May I not move from you, the blessed ones'—(he looks at them) when they are standing still.

4. With (the formula), 'I see you full of sap. Full of sap you shall see me'—(he looks at them) when they are gone into the stable, and with (the formula), 'May I be prosperous through your thousandfold prospering.'

5. Then having put wood on the fire amid the cows, and having performed the rites down to the Vyâhrz'ti (oblations), he makes oblations of milk with (the verses),

'Blaze brightly, O Gâtavedas, driving destruction away from me. Bring me cattle and maintenance from all quarters of the heaven. Svâhâ!

'May Gâtavedas do no harm to us, to cows and horses, to men and to all that moves. Come hither,

3. The Mantra is very corrupt. I think it ought to be corrected somehow in the following way: samsthâ stha samst'hâ vo bhûyâsam akyutâ stha mà mak kyodhvam mâham bhavatibhyas kyoshi. Comp. also Dr. Kirste's note.

5. In the second verse I propose to change abibhрад into Agni, fearlessly; make me attain to welfare! Svāhā!—

And with (the two verses), ‘This is the influx of the waters,’ and ‘Adoration to thee, the rapid one, the shining one’ (Taitt. S.mh. IV, 6, 1, 3).

6. (Then follow oblations with the verses), ‘This, O Varuṇa’ (&c.; see I, 2, 8, 16, down to the end of the Sūtra).

End of the Fifth Pāṭala.

Prasna I, Pāṭala 6, Section 19.

1. After he has returned from the teacher’s house, he should support his father and mother.

2. With their permission he should take a wife belonging to the same caste and country, a ‘naked’ girl, a virgin who should belong to a different Gotra (from her husband’s).

3. Whatever he intends to do (for instance, taking a wife), he should do on an auspicious day only, during one of the following five spaces of time, viz. in the morning, the forenoon, at midday, in the afternoon, or in the evening.

abībhya; comp. Atharva-veda XIX, 65, 1: ava tām gahi harasā Gātavedo · bibhyad ugro · rāṣṭrā divam ā roha sūrya. The last words of this verse should be śriyam mā pratipādaya, or something similar.

3. According to Mātridatta, ‘morning’ means one Nāḍākā before and one Nāḍākā after sunrise; ‘forenoon’ means one Nāḍākā before and one Nāḍākā after the moment at which the first quarter of the day has elapsed; and thus each of the other three day-times
4. Having put wood on the fire, and having performed (the preparatory rites) down to the laying of (three) branches round (the fire, the bridegroom) looks at the bride who is led to him, with (the verse), 'Auspicious ornaments does this woman wear. Come up to her and behold her. Having brought luck to her, go away back to your houses.'

5. To the south of the bridegroom the bride sits down.

6. After she has sipped water, she touches him, and he sprinkles (water) round (the fire) as above.

7. After he has performed the rites down to the oblations made with the Vyâhâritis, he sacrifices with (the following Mantras),

'May Agni come hither, the first of gods. May he release the offspring of this wife from the fetter of death. That may this king Varuṇa grant, that this wife may not weep over distress (falling to her lot) through her sons. Svâhâ!

'May Agni Gârhapatya protect this woman. May he lead her offspring to old age. With fertile womb may she be the mother of living children. May she experience delight in her sons. Svâhâ!

'May no noise that comes from thee, arise in the house by night. May the (she-goblins called) the weeping ones take their abode in another (woman)

‘Childlessness, the death of sons, evil, and distress, of) our foes. Svâhâ!

‘With this well-disposed prayer which the gods have created, I kill the Pisâlas that dwell in thy womb. The flesh-devouring death-bringers I cast down. May thy sons live to old age. Svâhâ!’

8. After he has sacrificed with (the verses), ‘This,
O Varuna,’ ‘For this I entreat thee,’ ‘Thou Agni,’ ‘Thou, Agni,’ ‘Thou, Agni, art quick,’ ‘Pragâ-verse), ‘Tread on this stone; like a stone be firm.

Destroy those who seek to do thee harm; overcome thy enemies.’

9. To the west of the fire he strews two layers of northward-pointed Darbha grass, the one more to the west, the other more to the east. On these both (the bridegroom and the bride) station themselves, the one more to the west, the other more to the east.

8. See above, I, 1, 3, 5; I, 1, 4, 1.
Prasna I, Patala 6, Section 20.

1. Facing the east, while she faces the west, or facing the west, while she faces the east, he should seize her hand. If he desires to generate male children, let him seize her thumb; if he desires (to generate) female children, her other fingers; if he desires (to generate) both (male and female children), let him seize the thumb together with the other fingers, (so as to seize the hand) up to the hairs (on the hair-side of the hand).

(He should do so with the two Mantras),

'Sarasvati! Promote this (our undertaking), O gracious one, rich in studs, thou whom we sing first of all that is.

'I seize thy hand that we may be blessed with offspring, that thou mayst live to old age with me, thy husband. Bhaga, Aryaman, Savitrī, Purandhi, the gods have given thee to me that we may rule our house.'

2. He makes her turn round, from left to right, so that she faces the west, and recites over her (the following texts),

'With no evil eye, not bringing death to thy husband, bring luck to the cattle, be full of joy and 20, 1. Sāṅkhāyana I, 13, 2; Āśvalāyana I, 7, 3 seq., &c. The text of the first Mantra ought to be corrected according to Pāraskara I, 7, 2; in the second Mantra we ought to read yathāsah instead of yathāsat; comp. Rig-veda X, 85, 36; Pāraskara I, 6, 3. The bridegroom and the bride, of course, are to face each other; thus, if the bridegroom stands on the eastern layer of grass (Sūtra 9 of the preceding section), he is to face the west; if on the western, he is to face the east.

2. The words, agreno dakshinam amsam ... abhyāvartya, evidently have the same meaning which is expressed elsewhere (Sāṅkhāyana

' Thus, Pûshan, lead her to us, the highly blessed one, into whom men pour forth their sperm, yâ na úrû usati visrayâtai (read, visrayâtai), yasyâm usantah praharema sepatam.

' Soma has acquired thee first (as his wife); after him the Gandharva has acquired thee. Thy third husband is Agni; the fourth am I, thy human husband.

' Soma has given her to the Gandharva; the Gandharva has given her to Agni. Agni gives me cattle and children, and thee besides.

' This am I, that art thou; the heaven I, the earth thou; the Sâman I, the Rik thou. Come! Let us join together. Let us unite our sperm that we may generate a male child, a son, for the sake of the increase of wealth, of blessed offspring, of strength.

' Bountiful Indra, bless this woman with sons and with a happy lot. Give her ten sons; let her husband be the eleventh.'

3. After he has made her sit down in her proper place (see Sûtra 5 of the preceding section), and has sprinkled Áyga into her joined hands, he twice pours fried grain into them, with (the verse), 'This grain I pour (into thy hands): may it bring prosperity to me, and may it unite thee (with me). May this Agni grant us that.'
4. After he has sprinkled (Ấgya) over (the grain in her hands), he sacrifices (the grain) with her joined hands (which he seizes), with (the verse), 'This woman, strewing grain into the fire, prays thus, "May my husband live long; may my relations be prosperous. Sváhà!'"

5. Having made her rise with (the verse which she recites), 'Up! with life' (Taitt. Samh. I, 2, 8, 1), and having circumambulated the fire (with her) so that their right sides are turned towards it, with (the verse), 'May we find our way with thee through all hostile powers, as through streams of water'—he pours fried grain (into her hands, and sacrifices them), as before.

6. Having circumambulated (the fire) a second time, he pours fried grain (into her hands, and sacrifices them), as before.

7. Having circumambulated (the fire) a third time, he sacrifices to (Agni) Svishākṛīt.

8. Here some add as subordinate oblations the Gaya, Abhyātāna, and Râshtrabhṛīt (oblations) as above.

9. To the west of the fire he makes her step forward in an easterly or a northerly direction the (seven) 'steps of Vishnu.'

10. He says to her, 'Step forward with the right (foot) and follow with the left. Do not put the left (foot) before the right.'

2. After the seventh step he makes her abide (in that position) and murmurs, 'With seven steps we have become friends. May I attain to friendship with thee. May I not be separated from thy friendship. Mayst thou not be separated from my friendship.'

3. He then puts his right foot on her right foot, moves his right hand down gradually over her right shoulder, and touches the place of her heart as above,

4. And the place of her navel with (the formula), 'Thou art the knot of all breath; do not loosen thyself.'

5. After he has made her sit down to the west of the fire, so that she faces the east, he stands to the east (of his bride), facing the west, and besprinkles her with water, with the three verses, 'O waters, ye are wholesome' (Taitt. Samh. IV, 1, 5, 1), with the four verses, 'The gold-coloured, clean, purifying waters' (V, 6, 1), and with the Anuváka, 'The purifier, the heavenly one' (Taitt. Bráhmaṇa I, 4, 8).

End of the Sixth Paṭala.

Praśña I, Paṭala 7, Section 22.

1. Then they let her depart (in a vehicle from her father's house), or they let her be taken away.

2. Having put (the fire into a vessel) they carry that (nuptial) fire behind (the newly-married couple).

3. It should be kept constantly.

4. If it goes out, (a new fire) should be kindled by attrition, or it should be fetched from the house of a Srotiриya.

5. Besides, if (the fire) goes out, the wife or the husband should fast.

6. When (the bridegroom with his bride) has come to his house, he says to her, 'Cross (the threshold) with thy right foot first; do not stand on the threshold.'

7. In the hall, in its easterly part, he puts down the fire and puts wood on it.

8. To the west of the fire he spreads out a red bull's skin with the neck to the east, with the hair outside.

6. Mātridatta explains adhisrayanti by vapanti gāyāpatyoh sīrasi kshipanti.

22, 4. 'If the fire on which they had put wood, was a fire produced by attrition, (the new fire) should (also) be kindled by attrition. If it was a common (laukika) fire that they had fetched, (the new fire) should be fetched from a Srotiриya's house. Thereby it is shown that the common fire at the Upanayana ceremony, &c., should be fetched only from a Srotiриya's house.' Mātridatta.
9. On that (skin) they both sit down facing the east or the north, so that the wife sits behind her husband, with (the verse), 'Here may the cows sit down, here the horses, here the men. Here may also Pūshan with a thousand (sacrificial) gifts sit down.'

10. They sit silently until the stars appear.

11. When the stars have appeared, he goes forth from the house (with his wife) in an easterly or northerly direction, and worships the quarters (of the horizon) with (the hemistich), 'Ye goddesses, ye six wide ones' (Taitt. Samh. IV, 7, 14, 2).

12. (He worships) the stars with (the Pāda), 'May we not be deprived of our offspring;'

13. The moon with (the Pāda), 'May we not get into the power of him who hates us, O king Soma!'

14. He worships the seven Ṛishis (ursa major) with (the verse), 'The seven Ṛishis who have led to firmness she, Arundhati, who stands first among the six Krīttikās (pleiads):—may she, the eighth one, who leads the conjunction of the (moon with the) six Krīttikās, the first (among conjunctions) shine upon us!' Then he worships the polar star with (the formula), 'Firm dwelling, firm origin. The firm one art thou, standing on the side of firmness. Thou art the pillar of the stars; thus protect me against my adversary.

'Adoration be to the Brahman, to the firm, immovable one! Adoration be to the Brahman's son, Pragāpati! Adoration to the Brahman's children, to the thirty-three gods! Adoration to the Brahman's children and grandchildren, to the Aṅgiras!

'He who knows thee (the polar star) as the firm, immovable Brahman with its children and with its grandchildren, with such a man children and grandchildren will firmly dwell, servants and pupils, garments and woollen blankets, bronze and gold, wives and kings, food, safety, long life, glory, renown, splendour, strength, holy lustre, and the enjoyment of food. May all these things firmly and immovably dwell with me!'

Patala 7, Section 23.

1. (Then follow the Mantras), 'I know thee as the firm Brahman. May I become firm in this world and in this country.

'I know thee as the immovable Brahman. May I not be moved away from this world and from this country. May he who hates me, my rival, be moved away from this world and from this country.

'I know thee as the unshaken Brahman. May I not be shaken off from this world and from this country. May he who hates me, my rival, be shaken off from this world and from this country.

'I know thee as the unfalling Brahman. May I not fall from this world and from this country. May he who hates me, my rival, fall from this world and from this country.

'I know thee as the nave of the universe. May I become the nave of this country. I know thee as the centre of the universe. May I become the centre of this country. I know thee as the string that holds the universe. May I become the string that holds this country. I know thee as the pillar of the universe. May I become the pillar of this country. I know thee as the navel of the universe. May I become the navel of this country.

‘As the navel is the centre of the Prânas, thus I am the navel. May hundred-and-onefold evil befall him who hates us and whom we hate; may more than hundred-and-onefold merit fall to my lot!’

2. Having spoken there with a person that he likes, and having returned to the house, he causes her to sacrifice a mess of cooked food.

3. The wife husks (the rice grains of which that Sthalipâka is prepared).

4. She cooks (that Sthalipâka), sprinkles (Âgya) on it, takes it from the fire, sacrifices to Agni, and then sacrifices to Agni Svishtakrît.

5. With (the remains of) that (Sthalipâka) he entertains a learned Brâhmâna whom he reveres.

6. To that (Brâhmâna) he makes a present of a bull.

7. From that time he constantly sacrifices (yâgâte) on the days of the full and of the new moon a mess of cooked food sacred to Agni.

8. In the evening and in the morning he constantly sacrifices (guhoti) with his hand (and not with the Darvi) the two following oblations of rice or of barley: ‘To Agni Svâhâ! To Prâgapati Svâhâ!’

9. Some (teachers) state that in the morning the

5. 6. In the commentary these Sûtras are divided thus: 5. tena brâhmavanam vidyâvantam parivevēṣṭi; 6. yo syâpañcito bhavati tasmâ rishabhãm dadâti. (5. Therewith he entertains a learned Brâhmâna. 6. To one whom he reveres, he presents a bull.) The commentator observes that some authorities make one Sûtra of the two, so that the Brâhmâna who receives the food and the one to whom the bull is given, would be the same person.
former (of these oblations) should be directed to Śūrya.

10. Through a period of three nights they should eat no saline food, should sleep on the ground, wear ornaments, and should be chaste.

11. In the fourth night, towards morning, he puts wood on the fire, performs the (regular) ceremonies down to the (regular) expiatory oblations, and sacrifices nine expiatory oblations (with the following Mantras):

Pātala 7, Section 24.

1. 'Agni! Expiation! Thou art expiation. I, the Brāhmaṇa, entreat thee, desirous of protection. What is terrible in her, drive that away from here. Svāhā!

   'Vāyu! Expiation! Thou art expiation. I, the Brāhmaṇa, entreat thee, desirous of protection. What is blameful in her, drive that away from here. Svāhā!

   'Sun! Expiation! Thou art expiation. I, the Brāhmaṇa, entreat thee, desirous of protection. What dwells in her that is death-bringing to her husband, drive that away from here. Svāhā!

   'Sun! Expiation! &c.

   'Vāyu! Expiation! &c.

   'Agni! Expiation! &c.

   'Agni! Expiation! &c.

   'Vāyu! Expiation! &c.

   'Sun! Expiation! &c.'

11. According to the commentary he performs the regular ceremonies down to the oblation offered with the Mantra, 'Thus thou, Agni' (see above, I, 3, 5, and compare Pāraskara I, 2, 8). Mātri-datta says, prāyaskītītiparyantāṃ kṛtvā sa tvam no Agna ity etadantāṃ kṛtvā nava prāyaskītīr guhotī . . . vyāhrītiparyantāṃ kṛtvā imam me Varunetī katasro (I, 3, 5) hutvātā guhotī.
2. Having sacrificed (these oblations), he then pours the remainder as an oblation on her head, with (the formulas), 'Blûh! I sacrifice fortune over thee. Svâhâ! Bhuvaḥ! I sacrifice glory over thee. Svâhâ! Suvaḥ! I sacrifice beauty over thee. Svâhâ! Bhûr bhuvaḥ suvaḥ! I sacrifice brightness over thee. Svâhâ!'

3. There (near the sacrificial fire) he places a water-pot, walks round the fire (and that water-pot) keeping his right side turned towards it, makes (the wife) lie down to the west of the fire, facing east or north, and touches her secret parts, with (the formula), 'We touch thee with the five-forked, auspicious, unhospitable (?), thousandfoldly blessed, glorious hand that thou mayst be rich in offspring!'

4. He then cohabits with her with (the formula), 'United is our soul, united our hearts, united our navel, united our skin. I will bind thee with the bond of love; that shall be insoluble.'

5. He then embraces her with (the formula), 'Be devoted to me; be my companion. What dwells in thee that is death-bringing to thy husband, that I make death-bringing to thy paramours. Bring luck to me; be a sharp-cutting (destroyer) to thy paramours.'

6. He then seeks her mouth with his mouth, with (the two verses), 'Honey! Lo! Honey! This is honey! my tongue's speech is honey; in my mouth dwells the honey of the bee; on my teeth dwells concord.

'The (magic charm of) concord that belongs to the ākṛavāka birds, that is brought out of the rivers, of which the divine Gandharva is possessed, thereby we are concordant.

7. A woman that has her monthly courses, keeps through a period of three nights the observances prescribed in the Brâhmana.

8. In the fourth night (the husband) having sipped water, calls (the wife) who has taken a bath, who wears a clean dress and ornaments, and has spoken with a Brâhmana, to himself (with the following verses):

Patala 7, Section 25.

1. (a) 'May Vishnu make thy womb ready; may Tvashtri frame the shape (of the child); may Pragāpati pour forth (the sperm); may Dhātri give thee conception!

(b) 'Give conception, Sinivāli; give conception, Sarasvati! May the two A śvins, wreathed with lotus, give conception to thee!

(c) 'The embryo which the two Aśvins produce with their golden kindling-sticks: that embryo we call into thy womb, that thou mayst give birth to it after ten months.

(d) 'As the earth is pregnant with Agni, as the heaven is with Indra pregnant, as Vāyu dwells in the womb of the regions (of the earth), thus I place an embryo into thy womb.

7. Taitt. Samhitā II, 5, 1, 5.6: Therefore one should not speak with a woman that has her monthly courses, nor sit together with her, nor eat food that she has given him, &c.

(d–f). Śāṅkhāyana-Grhītha I, 19. It should be observed that the text of Hiranyakeshin has in the beginning of (e) quite the same blunder which is found also in the Śāṅkhāyana MSS., yasya instead of vyasya.
(e) 'Open thy womb; take in the sperm; may a male child, an embryo be begotten in the womb. The mother bears him ten months; may he be born, the most valiant of his kin.

(f) 'May a male embryo enter thy womb, as an arrow the quiver; may a man be born here, thy son, after ten months.

(g) 'I do with thee (the work) that is sacred to Prāgāpati; may an embryo enter thy womb. May a child be born without deficiency, with all its limbs, not blind, not lame, not sucked out by Pīsākas.

(h) 'By the superior powers which the bulls shall produce for us, thereby become thou pregnant; may he be born, the most valiant of his kin.

(i) 'Indra has laid down in the tree the embryo of the sterile cow and of the cow that prematurely produces; thereby become thou pregnant; be a well-breeding cow'—

And (besides with the two Mantras), 'United are our names' (above, 24, 4), and, 'The concord of the kākravāka birds' (24, 6).

2. (He should cohabit with her with the formulas), 'Bhūḥ! Through Prāgāpati, the highest bull, I pour forth (the sperm); conceive a valiant son, N. N.!—Bhuvāḥ! Through Prāgāpati, &c.—Suvaḥ! Through Prāgāpati, &c.' Thus he will gain a valiant son.

3. The Mantras ought to be repeated whenever they cohabit, according to Ātreya,

4. Only the first time and after her monthly courses, according to Bādarāyana.

(g) Comp. Atharva-veda III, 23, 5. The Āpastambiya Mantra-pāṭha reads (a)pīsākādhītah.

I PRASNA, 7 PATALA, 26 SECTION, 6.

PATALA 7, SECTION 26¹.

1. The fire which (the sacrificer keeps) from the time of his marriage, is called the Aupāsana (or sacred domestic fire).

2. With this fire the sacred domestic ceremonies are performed.

3. On account of his worship devoted to this (fire the sacrificer) is considered as an Âhitâgni (i.e. as one who has set up the Srauta fires), and on account of his fortnightly Karu sacrifices (on the days of the new and full moon) as one who offers the sacrifices of the new and full moon (as prescribed in the Srauta ritual); so (is it taught).

4. If (the service at the domestic fire) has been interrupted for twelve days, the sacrificer ought to set the fire up again.

5. Or he should count all the sacrifices (that have been left out), and should offer them.

6. (The punarâdhâna or repeated setting up of the fire is performed in the following way) in an enclosed space, having raised (the surface), sprinkled it (with water), strewn it with sand, and covered it with Udumbara or Plaksha branches, he silently brings together the things belonging to (the sacrifice) according as he is able to get them, produces fire by attrition out of a sacrificially pure piece of wood, or gets a common fire, places it in a big vessel, sets it in a blaze, and puts (fuel) on it with the words, ‘Bhûk! Bhuvah! Suva(h) ! Om! Fixity!’

¹ This chapter is left out in Mâtrâdatta’s commentary; it seems to be a later addition. The division of the Sûtras is my own.

26, 3. For tasyaupâsanena I think we should read tasyopâsanena.
7. He then puts wood on the fire, performs (the rites) down to the Vyāhṛiti oblations, and offers two ‘mindā oblations’ (i.e. oblations for making up for defects) with (the two Mantras), ‘If a defect (mindā) has arisen in me’ (and), ‘Agni has given me back my eye’ (Taitt. Samh. III, 2, 5, 4).

9. He offers four ‘abhyāvartin oblations’ with (the Mantras), ‘Agni who turns to us (abhyāvartin)! ’ ‘Agni Āṅgiras!’ ‘Again with sap,’ ‘With wealth’ (Taitt. Samh. IV, 2, 1, 2. 3).

10. Having made oblations with the single Vyāhṛitis and with (the three Vyāhṛitis together), and having made an oblation with the verse, ‘Thou art quick, Agni, and free from imprecation. Verily (satyam) thou art quick. Held by us in our quick mind (manas), with thy quick (mind) thou carriest the offering (to the gods). Being quick bestow medicine on us! Svāhā!’—this (last) oblation contains an allusion to the mind (manas), it refers to Pragāpati, and alludes to the number seven (?),—he quickly repeats in his mind the dasa-hotṛi formula (Taitt. Ārany. III, 1, 1). Then he makes the sagrahā oblation (?); (then follow the

10. As to the Mantra, ‘Thou art quick, &c.,’ comp. above, I, 1, 3, 5, and the note on Sāṅkhāyana I, 9, 12. I cannot see why the oblation made with this Mantra is called saptavatī (alluding to the number seven); possibly we ought to read satyavatī (containing the word satyam, ‘verily’). Can the words sagrahām huvā mean, ‘having performed the worship of the planets (graha) at his sacrifice’?
oblations), 'This, O Varuṇa' (&c.; see I, 2, 8, 16, down to the end of the Sūtra). Then he serves food to the Brāhmaṇas and causes them to say, 'An auspicious day! Hail! Good luck!' he then performs in the known way the sacrifice of a mess of cooked food to Agni.

11. Here he gives an optional gift to his Guru: a pair of clothes, a milch cow, or a bull.

12. If he sets out on a journey, he makes the fire enter himself or the two kindling-sticks in the way that has been described (in the Śrauta-sūtra).

13. Or let him make it enter a piece of wood, in the same way as into the kindling-sticks.

14. A piece of Khadira wood, or of Palāsa, or of Udumbara, or of Asvattha wood—

15. With one of these kinds of wood he fetches, where he turns in (on his journey), fire from the house of a Śrotriya, and puts the (piece of wood) into which his fire has entered, on (that fire), with the two verses, 'He who has received the oblations' (Taitt. Samh. IV, 6, 5, 3), and 'Awake!' (IV, 7, 13, 5).

16. The way in which he sacrifices has been explained (in the Śrauta-sūtra).

17. If one half-monthly sacrifice has been omitted, he should have a sacrifice to (Agni) Pathikrīt performed over this (fire). If two (half-monthly sacrifices), to (Agni) Vaisvānara and Pathikrīt. If more than two, (the fire) has to be set up again.

18. If the fire is destroyed or lost, or if it is mixed with other fires, it has to be set up again.

Prasna I, Patala 8, Section 27.

1. If he will have a house built, he should during the northerly course of the sun, in the time of the increasing moon, under the constellation Rohini and under the three constellations designated as Uttara (Uttara-Phalguni, Uttara-Ashâdhâ, Uttara-Proshtha-padâ) put wood on the fire, perform the rites down to the Vyâhriti oblations, and should sacrifice with (the verses), 'This, O Varuna' (&c.; see I, 2, 8, 16, down to the end of the Sûtra). Then he serves food to the Brâhmañas and causes them to say, 'An auspicious day! Hail! Good luck!' he puts on a garment that has not yet been washed, touches water, takes a shovel with (the formula), 'On the impulse of the god Savitri' (Taitt. Samh. I, 3, 1, 1), draws lines thrice from the left to the right round (the places where the pits for the posts shall be dug) with (the formula), 'A line has been drawn' (Taitt. Samh. I, 3, 1, 1), digs the pits (in which the posts shall be erected) as it is fit, and casts the earth (dug out of those pits) towards the inside (of the building-ground).

2. He erects the southern door-post with (the verse), 'Here I erect a firm house; it stands in peace, streaming ghee. Thus may we walk in thee, O house, blessed with heroes, with all heroes, with unharmed heroes;'

3. The northern (door-post) with (the verse), 'Stand here firmly, O house, rich in horses and cows, rich in delight; rich in sap, overflowing with milk be set up, for the sake of great happiness.'
4. With (the verse), 'To thee (may) the young child (go), to thee the calf with its companion, to thee the golden cup; to thee may they go with pots of curds'—he touches the two posts, after they have been erected.

5. In the same way (Sūtras 2. 3) he erects the two chief posts,

6. And touches them as above (Sūtra 4).

7. He fixes the beam of the roof on the posts with (the formula), 'Rightly ascend the post, O beam, erect, shining, drive off the enemies. Give us treasures and valiant sons.'

8. When the house has got its roof, he touches it with (the verse),

'The consort of honour, a blissful refuge, a goddess, thou hast been erected by the gods in the beginning; clothed in grass, cheerful thou art; bring us bliss, to men and animals.'

9. Then, under the constellation Anurādha, the ground (on which the house stands) is expiated (in the following way).

10. By night he puts wood on the fire in an inner room (of the house), performs the rites down to the Vyāhṛiti oblations, and sacrifices (with the following Mantras):

Patala 8, Section 28.

Vástoshpati! Be our furtherer; make our wealth increase in cows and horses, O Indu (i.e. Soma). Free from decay may we dwell in thy friendship; give us thy favour, as a father to his sons. Svâhâ!

May death go away; may immortality come to us. May Vivasvat's son (Yama) protect us from danger. May wealth, like a leaf (that falls) from a tree, fall down over us. May Sa/Mâiptati (i.e. Indra) be with us. Svâhâ!

Go another way, O death, that belongs to thee, separated from the way of the gods. Vástoshpati! To thee who hears us, I speak: do no harm to our offspring nor to our heroes. Svâhâ!

To this most excellent place of rest we have gone, by which we shall victoriously gain cows, treasures, and horses. May wealth, like a leaf (that falls) from a tree, fall down over us. May Sa/Mâiptati be with us. Svâhâ!

This, O Varuna' (&c.; see chap. 27, Sūtra 1, down to): 'Hail! Good luck!'

2. In this way the ground (on which the house stands) should be expiated every year;

3. Every season, according to some (teachers).

‘Hither are called the cows; hither are called goats and sheep; and the sweet essence of food is called hither to our house.

‘Hither are called many friends, the sweet companionship of friends. May our dwellings always be unharmed with all our men.

‘Rich in sap, rich in milk, refreshing, full of joy and mirth, free from hunger (?) and thirst, O house, do not fear us’—with (these verses) he approaches his house (when returning from a journey).

2. ‘To thee I turn for the sake of safety, of peace. The blissful one! The helpful one! Welfare! Welfare!’—with (this formula) he enters.

3. On that day, on which he has arrived, he should avoid all quarrelling.

4. ‘The joyful house I enter which does not bring death to men; most manly (I enter) the auspicious one. Bringing refreshment, with genial minds (we enter the house); joyfully I lie down in it’—with (this verse) he lies down.

5. ‘May we find our way with thee through all hostile powers, as through streams of water’—with (this verse) he looks at his wife; he looks at his wife.

PRASNA II, PATALA 1, SECTION 1.

1. Now (follows) the Simantonnayana (or parting of the pregnant wife's hair).

2. In the fourth month of her first pregnancy, in the fortnight of the increasing moon, under an auspicious constellation he puts wood on the fire, performs the rites down to the Vyâhrîti oblations, and makes four oblations to Dhâtri with (the verse), 'May Dhâtri give us wealth' (and the following three verses, Taitt. Samh. III, 3, 11, 2, 3).

3. 'This, O Varuna' (&c.; see I, chap. 27, Sûtra 2, down to): 'Hail! Good luck!'

He then makes the wife who has taken a bath, who wears a clean dress and ornaments, and has spoken with a Brâhma, sit down to the west of the fire, facing the east, in a round apartment. Standing to the east (of the wife), facing the west he parts her hair upwards (i.e. beginning from the front) with a porcupine's quill that has three white spots, holding (also) a bunch of unripe fruits, with the Vyâhrîtis (and) with the two (verses), 'I invoke Râkâ,' (and), 'Thy graces, O Râkâ' (Taitt. Samh. III, 3, 11, 5). Then he recites over (his wife the formulas), 'Soma alone is our king, thus say the Brâhma tribes, sitting near thy banks, O Gaṅgâ,'

1, 3. The corrupt word vivvîttakaṃkrā(ḥ) seems to contain a vocative fem. referring to Gaṅge—avivvîttakaṃkra? The Āpâstambiya Mantrapâtha reads, vivvîttakaṃkra āsînās īrena yamune tava. Comp. Âsvâlayana I, 14, 7; Pâraskara I, 15, 8.

2. In the third month, in the fortnight of the increasing moon, under an auspicious constellation (&c.; see the preceding section, Sûtras 2 and 3, down to :) in a round apartment. He gives her a barley-grain in her right hand with (the formula), 'A man art thou;'

3. With (the formula), 'The two testicles are ye,' two mustard seeds or two beans, on both sides of that barley-grain.

4. With (the formula), 'Svâvritat' (? svâvritat ?) (he pours) a drop of curds (on those grains). That he gives her to eat.

5. After she has sipped water, he touches her belly with (the formula), 'With my ten (fingers) I touch thee that thou mayst give birth to a child after ten months.'

6. 7. If she miscarries, he should three times stroke (her body), from the navel upwards, with her wet hand, with (the formula), 'Thitherwards, not hitherwards, may Tvashtri bind thee in his bonds. Making (the mother) enter upon the seasons, live ten months (in thy mother's womb) ; do not bring death to men.'

8. When her confinement has come, he performs the kshipraprasavana (i.e. the ceremony for accelerating the confinement). Having placed a water-pot near her head and a Tûryânti plant near her feet, he touches her belly.

Patala 1, Section 3.

1. 'As the wind blows, as the ocean waves, thus may the embryo move; may it come forth together with the after-birth'—with (this verse) he strokes (her body) from above downwards.

2. When the child is born, he lays an axe on a stone, and a piece of gold on that axe; after he has turned these things upside down (so that the stone lies uppermost), he holds the boy over them with (the two verses),

'Be a stone, be an axe, be insuperable gold. Thou indeed art the Veda called son; so live a hundred autumns.

5. That (fire) is only used for warming (dishes, etc.).

6. No ceremonies are performed with it except the fumigation (see the next Sūtra).

7. He fumigates (the child) with small grains mixed with mustard seeds. These he throws into the coals (of the Sūtikāgni) (eleven times, each time with one of the following Mantras):

(a) ‘May Sanda and Marka, Upavira, Sāṇḍikēra, Ulūkhala, Kyāvānavaa vanish from here. Svāhā!

(b) ‘Ālikhat, Vilikhat, Animisha, Kinvadanta, Upasruti. Svāhā!

(g) "Kill them! Bind them!" thus (says) this messenger of Brahman. Agni has encompassed them. Indra knows them; Brahma knows them; I the Brahmava know them who seize (men), who have prominent teeth, rugged hair, hanging breasts. Svāhā!

(h) The night-walkers, wearing ornaments on their breasts, with lances in their hands, drinking out of skulls! Svāhā!

(i) Their father Ukhārizravya karuaka walks (?) at their head, their mother walks in the rear, seeking a vikhura (?) in the village. Svāhā!

(k) The sister, the night-walker, looks at the family through the rift (?)—she who wakes while people sleep, whose mind is turned on the wife that has become mother. Svāhā!

(l) O god with the black path, Agni, burn the lungs, the hearts, the livers of those (female demons); burn their eyes. Svāhā!

8. Then he washes his hands and touches the ground with (the verses), 'O thou whose hair is well parted! Thy heart that dwells in heaven, in the moon: of that immortality impart to us. May I not weep over distress (falling to my lot) through my sons.

'I know thy heart, O earth, that dwells in heaven, in the moon: thus may I, the lord of immortality, not weep over distress (falling to my lot) through my sons.'

9. Now (follows) the medhāganana (or production of intelligence). With (an instrument of) gold over which he has laid a Darbha shoot tied (to that piece of gold) he gives to the child, which is held so that it faces the east, ghee to eat, with the formulas, 'Bhûh! I sacrifice the Rikas over thee! Bhuvah! I sacrifice the Yâgus over thee! Suva$h! I sacrifice the Sâmans over thee! Bhûr bhuvah suva$h! I sacrifice the Atharvan and Aâgirâs hymns over thee!'

10. He then bathes the child with lukewarm water with (the following Mantras):

'From chronic disease, from destruction, from wile, from Varu$na's fetter I release thee. I make thee guiltless before the Brahman; may both Heaven and Earth be kind towards thee.

'May Agni together with the waters bring thee bliss, Heaven and Earth together with the herbs; may the air together with the wind bring thee bliss; may the four quarters of the heaven bring thee bliss.

'Rightly have the gods released the sun from darkness and from the seizing demon; they have dismissed him from guilt; thus I deliver this boy from chronic disease, from curse that comes from his kin, from wile, from Varu$na's fetter.'

11. He then places the child in his mother's lap with (the verse):

long life I turn thee; may consumption go away to destruction!

2. Having placed (him there) he addresses (his wife with the Mantra), 'May no demon do harm to thy son, no cow that rushes upon him (?). Mayst thou become the friend of treasures; mayst thou live in prosperity in thy own way.'

3. He washes her right breast and makes her give it to the child with (the formula), 'May this boy suckle long life; may he reach old age. Let thy breast be exuberant for him, and life, glory, renown, splendour, strength.'

4. In the same way the left breast.

5. With (the words), 'He does not suffer, he does not cry, when we speak to him and when we touch him'—he touches both breasts. Then he places a covered water-pot near her head, with (the formula), 'O waters, watch in the house. As you watch with the gods, thus watch over this wife, the mother of a good son.'

6. On the twelfth day the mother and the son take a bath.

7. They make the house clean.

8. They take the Sûtikâgni away, and they bring the Aûpâsana fire.

9. Having put wood on that fire, and having performed the rites down to the Vyâhriti oblations, they sacrifice twelve oblations with the verses, 'May Dhâtrî give us wealth' (III, 3, 11, 2–5); according to some (teachers they make) thirteen (oblations).

4, 2. I am not certain about the translation of dhenur atisârini. The Âpastambîya Mantrapâla has atyâkârini. Atisârin means, suffering from diarrhoea; perhaps we should read abhisârini.

10. 'This, O Varuna' (&c.; see I, chap. 27, Sûtra 2, down to): 'Hail! Good luck!' Then let him give a name to the child, of two syllables or of four syllables, beginning with a sonant, with a semi-vowel in it, with a long vowel (or) the Visarga at its end, or a name that contains the particle su, for such a name has a firm foundation; thus it is understood.

11. Let the father and the mother pronounce (that name) first. For it is understood, 'My name first, O Gâtavedas.'

12. He should give him two names. For it is understood (Taitt. Samh. VI, 3, 1, 3), 'Therefore a Brâhmaṇa who has two names, will have success.'

13. The second name should be a Nakshatra name.

14. The one name should be secret; by the other they should call him.

15. He should give him the name Somayâgin (i.e. performer of Soma sacrifices) as his third name; thus it is understood.

16. When he returns from a journey, or when his son returns, he touches him with (the formula), 'With Soma's lustre I touch thee, with Agni's splendour, with the glory of the sun.'

17. With (the formula), 'With the humkâra (the mystical syllable hum) of the cattle I kiss thee, N. N.! For the sake of long life and of glory! Hum!' he

1. Then (follows) in the sixth month the Anna-prāśana (i.e. the first feeding with solid food).

2. In the fortnight of the increasing moon, under an auspicious constellation, he puts wood on the fire, performs the rites down to the Vyāhṛti oblations, and sacrifices (with the Mantras), 'This, O Varuna' (&c.; see I, chap. 27, Sūtra 2, down to): 'Hail! Good luck!' Then he gives (to the child) threefold food to eat, curds, honey, and ghee, with (the formula), 'Bhūḥ I lay into thee! Bhuvāḥ I lay into thee! Suvāḥ I lay into thee!'

3. Then he gives him (other) food to eat with (the formula), 'I give thee to eat the essence of water and of the plants. May water and plants be kind towards thee. May water and plants do no harm to thee.'

1. In the third year (he performs) the Kūḍākarman (i.e. the tonsure of the child's head).

5. He then pours cold and warm water together.

6. Having poured warm water into cold water he moistens the hair near the right ear with (the formula), ‘May the waters moisten thee for life’ (Taitt. Samh. I, 2, 1, 1).

7. With (the formula), ‘Herb, protect him!’ (Taitt. Samh., loc. cit.) he puts an herb, with its point upwards, into (the hair).

8. With (the formula), ‘Axe, do no harm to him!’ (Taitt. Samh., loc. cit.) he touches (that herb) with the razor.

9. With (the words), ‘Heard by the gods, I shave that (hair)’ (Taitt. Samh., loc. cit.) he shaves him.

10. In the same way (he moistens, &c.) the other (sides of his head) from left to right.

11. Behind with (the Mantra), ‘The razor with which Savitri, the knowing one, has shaven (the beard) of king Soma and Varuna, with that, ye Brāhma/anas, shave his (head); make that he be united with vigour, with wealth, with glory.’

On the left side with (the Mantra), ‘(The razor) with which Pūshan has shaven (the beard) of Brihhaspati, of Agni, of Indra, for the sake of long life, with that I shave thy (head), N. N.!’

A person who is kindly disposed towards him, gathers the (cut-off) hair and buries it in a cow-stable, or near an Udumbara tree, or in a clump of Darbha grass, with (the Mantra), 'Where Pūshan, Br̥haspati, Savitri, Soma, Agni (dwell), they have in many ways searched where they should depose it, between heaven and earth, the waters and heaven.'

14. He makes a gift to a Brāhmaṇa according to his liberality.

15. To the barber (he gives) boiled rice with butter.

16. In the same way the Godānakarman (or the ceremony of shaving the beard) is performed in the sixteenth year.

17. He has him shaven including the top-lock.

1. Now (follows) the expiation for attacks of the dog-demon (epilepsy) (on the boy).

2. When the attack assails (the boy, the performer of the ceremony) arranges his sacrificial cord over his left shoulder, sips water, and fetches water with a cup that has not yet been used (in order to pour it upon the boy). In the middle of the hall he elevates (the earth at) that place in which they use to gamble; he besprinkles it with water, casts the dice, scatters them (on all sides), makes a heap of them, spreads them out, makes an opening in the thatched roof of the hall, takes the boy in through that (opening), lays him on his back on the dice, and pours a mixture of curds and salt-water upon him, while they beat a gong towards the south. (The curds and water are poured on the sick boy with the following Mantras).

Prasna II, Pātala 3, Section 8.

1. Now (follows) the sacrifice of the sūlagava (or spit-ox, for propitiating Rudra and averting plague in cattle).

2. In the fortnight of the increasing moon, under an auspicious constellation, he puts wood on the fire, strews (Darbha grass) on the entire surface around the fire, cooks a mess of sacrificial food with milk, sprinkles it (with \( \text{Ag\'ya} \)), takes it from the fire, builds two huts to the west of the fire, and has the spit-ox led to the southerly (hut) with (the verse), ‘May the fallow steeds, the harmonious ones, bring thee hither, together with the white horses, the bright, wind-swift, strong ones, that are as quick as thought. Come quickly to my offering, Sarva! Om!’

3. To the northerly (hut he has) the ‘bountiful one’ (led);—(i. e. the consort of the spit-ox);

4. To the middle (between the two huts) the ‘conqueror’ (i. e. a calf of those two parents).

5. He gives them water to drink in the same order in which they have been led (to their places), prepares three messes of boiled rice, ‘spreading under’ and sprinkling (\( \text{Ag\'ya} \)) on them, and touches (the three beasts with those portions of rice) in the order in which they have been led (to their places), with (the Mantras), ‘May he, the bountiful one, touch it. To the bountiful one svâhâ! May she, the bountiful one, touch it. To the bountiful one svâhâ! May the conqueror touch it. To the conqueror svâhâ!’

6. After he has performed (the rites) down to the Vyâhr\( \text{\'} \)iti oblations, he takes the messes of boiled rice (to the fire) and sacrifices them (the first with the Mantra),

‘To the god Bhava svâhâ! To the god Rudra svâhâ! To the god Sarva svâhâ! To the god Ís\( \text{\'} \)ana . . . Pasupati . . . Ugra . . . Bhima svâhâ! To the great god svâhâ!’

8. Then he sacrifices of the middle portion of rice with (the Mantra), 'To the conqueror svāhā! To the conqueror svāhā!'

9. Then he cuts off from all the three portions of rice and sacrifices the Svishṭakṛt oblation with (the Mantra), 'To Agni Svishṭakṛt svāhā!'

10. Around that fire they place their cows so that they can smell the smell of that sacrifice.

11. 'With luck may they walk round our full face'—with (these words) he walks round all (the objects mentioned, viz. the fire, the three beasts, and the other cows), so as to turn his right side towards them, and worships (the sūlagava) with the (eleven) Anuvākas, 'Adoration to thee, Rudra, to the wrath' (Taitt. Samh. IV, 5), or with the first and last of them.

The baudhāyavihāra is, as its description clearly shows, a ceremony for propitiating Rudra and his hosts and for averting evil from the cattle and the fields. The commentary understands it as forming part of the sūlagava described in chap. 8, and with this opinion it would agree very well that no indication of the time at which the baudhāyavihāra ought to be performed (such as āpūryamānapakshe pūnaye nakshatre) is given. 4. Then other ten (leaves) with (the formula), 'Divine hosts that are named and that are not named, touch them! To them svâhâ!'

5. Then he makes a basket of leaves, puts into it a lump of boiled rice with an 'under-spreading' (of Âgya) and sprinkling (Âgya) on it, goes outside his pasture-grounds, and hangs (the basket) up at a tree with (the formula), 'Quivered ones, touch it! To the quivered ones svâhâ!'

8. He then cooks that mess of sacrificial food, sacred to Kshetrapati (the lord of the field), with milk, sprinkles it (with Aṣṭa), takes it from the fire, and performs a sacrifice to Kshetrapati on the path where his cows use to go, without a fire, on four or on seven leaves.

9. He has him (i.e. the Kshetrapati? an ox representing Kshetrapati?) led (to his place) in the same way as the sūlagava (chap. 8, § 2).

10. He sacrifices quickly, (for) the god has a strong digestion (?).

11. He then performs worship with (the two verses), 'With the lord of the field,' 'Lord of the field' (Taitt. Samh. I, 1, 14, 2. 3).

12. Of (the remains of that sacrificial food) sacred to Kshetrapati his uterine relations should partake, according as the custom of their family is.

End of the Third Pataśa.

8. Mātridatta says, kshaitrapatyam kshetrapatidevatākam payasi sthālipākam, &c. The meaning of the expression 'that (enam) mess of sacrificial food' is doubtful; the commentary says, enam iti pūrvāpekshaṁ pūrvaravādaupāsana evāsyāpi sārpaṇārtham.—The last words (on four or on seven leaves) the commentator transfers to the next Sūtra, but he mentions the different opinion of other authorities.

Having prepared food for the Fathers and having arranged southward-pointed Darbha grass as seats (for the Brāhmaṇas whom he is going to invite), he invites an odd number of pure Brāhmaṇas who are versed in the Mantras, with no deficient limbs, who are not connected with himself by consanguinity or by their Gotra or by the Mantras, (such as his teacher or his pupils).

3. In feeding them he should not look at any (worldly) purposes.

4. Having put wood on the fire and strewn southward-pointed and eastward-pointed Darbha grass around it, having prepared the Āgya in an Āgya pot over which he has laid one purifier, having sprinkled water round (the fire) from right to left, and put a piece of Udumbara wood on (the fire), he sacrifices with the (spoon called) Darvi which is made of Udumbara wood.

5. Having performed the rites down to the Āgyabhāga offerings, he suspends his sacrificial cord over his right shoulder and calls the Fathers (to his sacrifice) with (the verse), 'Come hither, O Fathers, friends of Soma, on your hidden, ancient paths, bestowing on us offspring and wealth and long life, a life of a hundred autumns.'

6. He sprinkles water in the same direction (i.e. towards the south) with (the verse), 'Divine waters, send us Agni. May our Fathers enjoy this sacrifice. May they who receive their nourishment every month bestow on us wealth with valiant heroes.'

7. Having performed the rites down to the Vyâhrti oblations with his sacrificial cord over his left shoulder, he suspends it over his right shoulder and sacrifices with (the following Mantras):

' To Soma with the Fathers, svadha! Adoration!
' To Yama with the Ángiras and with the Fathers, svadha! Adoration!

'With the waters that spring in the east and those that come from the north: with the waters, the supporters of the whole world, I interpose another one between (myself and) my father. Svadha! Adoration!

'I interpose (another one) through the mountains; I interpose through the wide earth; through the sky and the points of the horizon, through infinite bliss I interpose another one between (myself and) my grandfather. Svadha! Adoration!

'I interpose (another one) through the seasons, through days and nights with the beautiful twilight. Through half-months and months I interpose another one between (myself and) my great-grandfather. Svadha! Adoration!'

Then he sacrifices with their names: 'To N. N. svadha! Adoration! To N. N. svadha! Adoration!'

with (the formula), 'To Agni Kavyavāhana Svish-takrit svadhā! Adoration!'

4. He then touches the food with (the formulas), 'The earth is thy vessel, the heaven is the lid. I sacrifice thee into the Brahman's mouth. I sacrifice thee into the up-breathing and down-breathing of the Brâhmaṇas. Thou art imperishable; do not perish for the Fathers yonder, in yon world! The earth is steady; Agni is its surveyor in order that what has been given may not be lost.

'The earth is thy vessel, the heaven is the lid, &c. Do not perish for the grandfathers yonder, in yon world. The air is steady; Vāyu is its surveyor, in order that what has been given may not be lost.

'The earth is thy vessel, the heaven is the lid, &c. Do not perish for the great-grandfathers yonder, in yon world. The heaven is steady; Āditya is its surveyor, in order that what has been given may not be lost.'

5. With (the words), 'I establish myself in the breath and sacrifice ambrosia,' he causes the Brâhmaṇas to touch (the food).

Patala 4, Section 12.

1. While they are eating, he looks at them with (the words), 'My soul (ātman) dwells in the Brahman that it may be immortal.'

2. When they have eaten (and go away), he goes after them and asks for their permission to take the remains of their meal (for the rites which he is going to perform). Then he takes a water-pot and a handful of Darbha grass, goes forth to a place that lies in a south-easterly intermediate direction, spreads the Darbha grass out with its points towards the south, and pours out on that (grass) with downward-turned hands, ending in the south, three handfuls of water, with (the formulas), ‘May the fathers, the friends of Soma, wipe themselves! May the grandfathers . . . the great-grandfathers, the friends of Soma, wipe themselves!’ or, ‘N. N.! Wash thyself! N. N.! Wash thyself!’

3. On that (grass) he puts down, with downward-turned hands, ending in the south, the lumps (of food for the Fathers). To his father he gives his lump with (the words), ‘This to thee, father, N. N.!’ to the grandfather with (the words), ‘This to thee, grandfather, N. N.!’ to the great-grandfather with (the words), ‘This to thee, great-grandfather, N. N.!’ silently a fourth (lump). This (fourth lump) is optional.

4. Should he not know the names (of the ancestors), he gives the lump to the father with (the words), ‘Svadhâ to the Fathers who dwell on the earth,’ to the grandfather with (the words), ‘Svadhâ to the Fathers who dwell in the air,’ to the great-grandfather with (the words), ‘Svadhâ to the Fathers who dwell in heaven.’

5. Then he gives, corresponding to each lump, collyrium and (other) salve and (something that represents) a garment.

3. According to the commentary after each formula the words are added, ‘and to those who follow thee;’ comp. Taitt. Samh. I, 8, 5, 1; III, 2, 5, 5; Katy.-Sraut. IV, 1, 12.
6. The collyrium (he gives), saying three times, 'Anoint thy eyes, N. N.! Anoint thy eyes, N. N.!'
7. The salve, saying three times, 'Anoint thyself, N. N.! Anoint thyself, N. N.!'
8. With (the formula), 'These garments are for you, O Fathers. Do not seize upon anything else that is ours,' he tears off a skirt (of his garment) or a flake of wool and puts that down (for the Fathers), if he is in the first half of his life.
9. He tears out some hairs of his body, if in the second half.
10. Then he washes the vessel (in which the food was of which he had offered the lumps), and sprinkles (the water with which he has washed it), from right to left round (the lumps) with (the Mantra), 'These honey-sweet waters, bringing refreshment to children and grandchildren, giving sweet drink and ambrosia to the Fathers, the divine waters refresh both (the living and the dead), these rivers, abounding in water, covered with reeds, with beautiful bathing-places; may they flow up to you in yon world!' Then he turns the vessel over, crosses his hands so that the left hand becomes right and the right hand becomes left, and worships (the Fathers) with the formulas of adoration, 'Adoration to you, O Fathers, for the sake of sap' (Taitt. Samh. III, 2. 5. 5).
11. Then he goes to the brink of some water and pours down three handfuls of water (with the following Mantras):

6 seq. A fourth time he gives the same thing silently; comp. Sûtra 3.
8, 9. If his age is under fifty years or over fifty years (Mâtridatta; comp. the commentary on Kâtyâyana-Sraut. IV, 1, 17. 18).
Patala 4, Section 13.

1. 'This is for thee, father, this honey-sweet wave, rich in water. As great as Agni and the earth are, so great is its measure, so great is its might. As such a great one I give it. As Agni is imperishable and inexhaustible, thus may it be imperishable and inexhaustible, sweet drink to my father. By that imperishable (wave), that sweet drink, live thou together with those, N. N.! The Rikas are thy might.

'This is for thee, grandfather, &c. . . . As great as Våyu and the air are . . . As Våyu is imperishable . . . to my grandfather. . . . The Yâgus are thy might.

'This is for thee, great-grandfather, &c. . . . As great as Âditya and the heaven are . . . The Sàmans are thy might.'

2. Returning (from the place where he has performed the Pîndâ offerings) he puts the substance cleaving (to the Stháli) into the water-pot and pours it out, with (the verse), 'Go away, O Fathers, friends of Soma, on your hidden, ancient paths. After a month return again to our house and eat our offerings, rich in offspring, in valiant sons.'

3. Thereby the (Srâddha) celebrated in the middle of the rainy season has been declared.

4. There (oblations of) flesh are prescribed;

5. Of vegetables, if there is no flesh.

End of the Fourth Patala.

Prasna II, Patala 5, Section 14.

1. We shall explain (the festival of) the Ashṭakā.
2. The eighth day of the dark fortnight that follows after the full moon of Māgha, is called Ekāshṭakā.
3. On the day before that Ashṭakā, under (the Nakshatra) Anūrādhās, in the afternoon he puts wood on the fire, strews southward-pointed and eastward-pointed Darbha grass around it, and turns rice out of four shallow cups over which he has laid one purifier, with (the Mantra), 'I turn out, impelled by the god Savitrī, this cake prepared from four cups (of rice), which may drive away all suffering from the Fathers in the other world. On the impulse of the god Savitrī, with the arms of the two Aśvins, with Pūshan's hands I turn thee out, agreeable to the fathers, the grandfathers, the great-grandfathers.'
4. With the same purifier he silently strains the Prokshañi water; he silently sprinkles (with that water the rice and the vessels), silently husks (the rice), silently bakes it in four dishes like a Purodāsa, sprinkles (Āgya) on it, takes it from the fire, sprinkles (water) round (the fire) from right to left, and puts a piece of Udumbara wood on (the fire). With the (spoon called) Darvi which is made of Udumbara wood, he cuts off in one continual line which is directed towards south-east, (the Avadāna portions)

14, 1. Hiranyakesin describes only one Ashṭakā, the Ekāshṭakā, while the other texts speak of three or four Ashṭakās; comp. the quotations in the note on Sāṅkhāyana III, 12, 1.
4. The rules of the Śrauta ritual regarding the baking of the Purodāsa are given by Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsopfer, P. 43.
one after the other, spreading under and sprinkling over them (Āgya), and sacrifices them, one after the other, in one continual line which is directed towards south-east, with (the Mantras), 'The mortars, the pressing-stones have made their noise, preparing the annual offering. Ekāśhākā! May we be rich in offspring, in valiant sons, the lords of wealth. Svadhā! Adoration!

'God Agni! The cake which is prepared with ghee and accompanied by (the word) svadhā, that the Fathers may satiate themselves—(this our) offering carry duly, Agni. I, the son, sacrifice an oblation to my fathers. Svadhā! Adoration!

'Here is a cake, Agni, prepared from four cups (of rice), with ghee, rich in milk, in wealth, in prosperity. May the Fathers gladly accept it all together; may it be well sacrificed and well offered by me. Svadhā! Adoration!'

5. Then he makes oblations of (other) food with (the verses), 'The one who shone forth as the first,' 'The Ekāśhākā, devoting herself to austerities,' 'She who shone forth as the first' (Taitt. Samhitā IV, 3, 11, 1. 3. 5).

6. Cutting off (the Avadānas destined for the Svishākṛit oblation) together from the cake and from the (other) food and mixing them with clarified butter, he makes an oblation thereof with (the formula), 'To Agni Kavyavāhāna Svishākṛit svadhā! Adoration!'

7. That (cake) with ghee and honey and with the food (mentioned in Sūtras 5. 6) he touches in the way prescribed for the Srāddha ceremony and puts down lumps (of it) according to the ritual of the Pinda offerings.

7. Comp. above, chap. 11, 4; 12, 2 seq.

8. (The remains of) that (cake, &c.) he serves to learned Brāhmaṇas.

9. He gives them food and presents as at the Śrāddha ceremony.

10. The known (rites) down to the pouring out of the handfuls of water (are performed here) as at the monthly (Śrāddha).

Pātala 5, Section 15.

1. On the following day he sacrifices a cow to the Fathers.

2. Having put wood on the fire and strewn southward-pointed and eastward-pointed Darbha grass around it, he sacrifices the oblation for the touching of the animal (see below), with (the verse), 'This cow I touch for the Fathers; may my assembled fathers gladly accept it (which is offered) with fat and ghee, with the word svadha; may it satiate my fathers in the other world. Svadha! Adoration!' Then he touches (the cow) with one (blade of) sacrificial grass and with an unforked Vapāsrapanī of Udumbara wood, with (the formula), 'I touch thee agreeable to the Fathers.'

3. He sprinkles (the cow with water) with (the words), 'I sprinkle thee agreeable to the Fathers.'

4. When it has been sprinkled and fire has been

10. See above, chap. 12, 13.

4. The Udānya read, as Mātridatta states, 'to the south of the fire.'
carried round it, they kill it to the west of the fire, its head being turned to the west, its feet to the south.

5. After it has been killed, he silently ‘strengthens’ its sense-organs (by touching them) with water, and silently takes out the omentum, the heart, and the kidneys.

6. With the Vapâsrapani of Udumbara wood he roasts the omentum; with spits of Udumbara wood the other (parts mentioned in Sûtra 5) separately.

7. After he has roasted them, and has sprinkled Âgya over them, and has taken them from the fire, he sprinkles water round (the fire) from right to left, puts a piece of Udumbara wood on (the fire), and sacrifices with a Darvi spoon of Udumbara wood the omentum, spreading under and sprinkling over it (Âgya), with (the verse), ‘Carry the omentum, Gâtavedas, to the Fathers, where thou knowest them resting afar. May streams of fat flow to them; may their wishes with all their desires be fulfilled. Svadhâ! Adoration!’

8. He sacrifices the omentum entirely. The other parts (Sûtra 5) he should offer to the Brâhmaṇas and should feed them (with those parts of the cow).

9. When the food (for the Brâhmaṇas) is ready, he cuts off (the Avadânas) together from the mess of boiled rice, and from the pieces of meat, and mixing them with clarified butter he makes oblations.

5. On the ‘strengthening’ of the sense-organs of an immolated victim, comp. Âpastamba-Srauta-sûtra VII, 18, 6 seq. Schwab, Thieropfer, 110.—On matasne, see Indische Studien, IX, 248; Schwab 127.

8. Possibly the reading of the Udîyas indicated by Mâtridatta, vyâkṛitya instead of upâkṛitya, is correct. The translation would be, ‘With the rest, distributing it, &c.’
thereof with the verses, 'Behold the Ekāshṭakā, the giver of food with meat and ghee, (which is offered) with (the word) svadhā. By the Brāhmaṇas that food is purified. May it be an imperishable (blessing) to me! Svadhā! Adoration!'

'The Ekāshṭakā, devoting herself to austerities, the consort of the year, exuberant (with milk), has poured forth milk. May you live on that milk, O Fathers, all together. May this (food) be well offered and well sacrificed by me! Svadhā! Adoration!

'The image of the year' (Taitt. Samh. V, 7, 2, 1).

10. After he has sacrificed, he cuts off (the Ava-dānas) from the food and from the pieces of meat, and mixing them with clarified butter he makes an oblation with (the formula), 'To Agni Kavyavāhana Svishākṛit svadhā! Adoration!'

11. The known (rites) down to the pouring out of the handfuls of water (are performed here) as at the monthly (Śrāddha).

12. The gifts of food and presents, however, are not necessary here.

13. On the following day, he prepares food for the Fathers with the rest of the meat, and sacrifices with (the two verses), 'Thou, Agni, art quick,' (and), 'Pragâpati!' (see above, I, 1, 3, 5).

14. (= Sūtra 11).

End of the Fifth Pañāla.

11. See above, chap. 14, 10.
13. This is the so-called Anvashṭakya ceremony.
Prasna II, Patala 6, Section 16.

1. Now (follows) the Sravana ceremony.

2. On the day of that full moon which falls under (the Nakshatra) Sravana, after the evening Agnihotra he puts wood on the (third of the three Sruta fires, called the) Dakshināgni. One who has not set up the (Sruta) fires, (does the same with) the sacred domestic fire.

3. Then he procures unbroken grains, unbroken fried grains, coarsely ground grains, (leaves and blossoms) of the Kimśuka tree, collyrium and (other) salve, and Āgya.

4. Having 'spread under' (Āgya) in the (spoon called) Darvi, he cuts off (the Avadānas) of those kinds of food (mentioned in Sūtra 3), mixes them with clarified butter, and sacrifices (with the formulas), 'Adoration to Agni the terrestrial, the lord of terrestrial beings! Svāhā! Adoration to Vāyu the all-pervading, the lord of aerial beings! Svāhā! Adoration to Sūrya, the red one, the lord of celestial beings! Svāhā! Adoration to Vishnu, the whitish one, the lord of the beings that dwell in the quarters (of the world). Svāhā!'

5. He anoints the Kimśuka (flowers and leaves) with Āgya, and sacrifices with (the Mantras), 'Devoured is the gadfly; devoured is thirst (?); devoured is the stinging worm.' 'Devoured is the stinging worm; devoured is thirst; devoured is the gadfly.'

5. I am not sure about the translation of viṇaśā. Perhaps it is only a blunder for vitrṇa, which is the reading of the Āpastamba Mantrapāṭha. Comp. Winternitz, Der Sarpabali, ein altindischer Schlangencult (Wien, 1888), p. 28.
'Devoured is thirst; devoured is the gadfly; devoured is the stinging worm.'

6. He takes a water-pot and a handful of Darbha grass, goes forth, his face turned towards the east, spreads the Darbha grass out with its points towards the east, and makes four Bali-offerings on that (grass) with (the formulas), 'To the terrestrial Serpents I offer this Bali,' 'To the aerial, &c.; to the celestial, &c.; to the Serpents dwelling in the quarters (of the world),' &c.

7. Having given there collyrium and (other) salve (to the Serpents), he worships them with the Mantras, 'Adoration be to the Serpents' (Taitt. Samhitâ IV, 2, 8, 3).

8. He should take a water-pot and should at that distance in which he wishes the serpents not to approach, three times walk round his house, turning his right side towards it, and should sprinkle water round it with (the formulas), 'Beat away, O white one, with thy foot, with the fore-foot and with the hind-foot, these seven human females and the three (daughters) of the king's tribe.

'Within the dominion of the white one the Serpent has killed nobody. To the white one, the son of Vidarva, adoration!

'Adoration to the white one, the son of Vidarva!'

9. Then he worships the Serpents towards the different regions, one by one with (the corresponding section of) these Mantras, 'The convergent one thou art called, the eastern region' (Taitt. Samh. V, 5, 10, 1 seq.).

10. From that time he daily makes the Bali-offerings till the full-moon day of Mārgasirsha.

11. Here the Kimsuka offerings (see § 5) are not repeated.

12. The sprinkling (of water) round (the house) does not take place (see § 8).

13. The last Bali he offers with (the words), ‘Going to acquit myself, going to acquit myself.’

End of the Sixth Pātala.

Prasna II, Patała 7, Section 17.

1. We shall explain the Agrahāyani ceremony.

2. On the full-moon day of Mārgasirsha he puts wood on the fire, strews (Darbha grass) on the entire surface round the fire, cooks a mess of sacrificial food with milk, sprinkles it (with Āgya), takes it from the fire, performs the rites down to the Vyāhr̄iti oblations, and sacrifices (four oblations) with (the following Mantras):

‘This offering, the creeping of Iḍā, rich in ghee, moving and not moving, accept gladly, O Gātavedas.

13. Some authorities understand, as Mātridatta states, that he should offer the Bali only with the words as they stand in the Sūtra, others prescribe the formula (comp. § 6): ‘To the terrestrial (aerial, &c.) Serpents I offer this Bali going to acquit myself, going to acquit myself.’

17, 1. Comp. on the Agrahāyani ceremony Sāṅkhāyana IV, 17; Pāraskara III, 2, &c.; Winternitz, Sarpabali, 32 seq.

2. The first Mantra is very corrupt; comp. Atharva-veda III, 10, 6. Regarding the legend of Iḍā, who was procreated out of Manu’s Pākā-sacrifice, and ‘came forth as if dripping, and clarified butter gathered on her step,’ comp. Satapatha Brāhmava I, 8, 1, 7 (M. M., India, what can it teach us? p. 136).
What domestic animals there are, of all shapes, all seven kinds of them: may they gladly dwell here and may they prosper. Svâhâ!

‘The night which men welcome like a cow that comes to them, (the night) which is the consort of the year, may that (night) be auspicious to us. Svâhâ!

‘Bringing bliss to the cattle, to the wife, bringing bliss by night and by day, may this (night) which is the consort of the year, be auspicious to us. Svâhâ!

‘The full-moon night, bringing abundance, visiting one after another, dividing the months and fortnights: may this (night), the full one, protect us. Svâhâ!’

3. He sacrifices the oblation to Agni Svishakrīt with (the verse), ‘Agni, make this (sacrifice) full that it may be well offered. Be victorious, O god, in all battles. Shine far and wide, showing us a wide path. Bestow on us long life, full of splendour and free from decay. Svâhâ!’

4. Then he washes his hands and touches the earth with (the formulas), ‘In power I establish myself, in royalty. Among the horses I establish myself, among the cows. In the limbs I establish myself, in the self. In the Prânas I establish myself, in prosperity. In Heaven and Earth I establish myself, in sacrifice.

‘May the three times eleven gods, the thirty-three, the gracious ones, whose Purohita is Brîhaspati, on the impulse of the god Savitri—may the gods with (all) the gods give me bliss!’

5. The master of the house sits down at their southerly end.
6. The other persons to the north,
7. According to their seniority.
8. They who know the Mantras among them, murmur the Mantras (which will be stated).
9. With (the verse), 'Be soft to us, O earth, free from thorns; grant us rest; afford us wide shelter' (Taitt. Ár. X, 1, 10), and with the two (verses), 'Verily of the mountains' (Taitt. Samh. II, 2, 12, 2. 3) they lie down on their right sides.
10. With (the verse), 'Up! with life' (Taitt.
Samh. I, 2, 8, 1) they arise.
11. When they have arisen, they murmur, 'We have arisen; we have become immortal.'
12. In that way they (lie down and) arise that night three times.
13. Having served food to the Brâhmânas and having caused them to say, 'An auspicious day!
Hail! Good luck!' they rest that night.

End of the Seventh Pañala.

Prasna II, Pañala 8, Section 18.

1. Now we shall explain the opening and the con-cclusion (of the annual course of study).
2. During the fortnight that precedes the Sravanâ

13. 'Here end the Grihya ceremonies,' says Mátridatta. Dr.
Kirste (Preface, p. viii), accordingly, believes that the three last chapters may be later additions. It may be observed in connection with this, that in the Āpastambiya-Grihya, which throughout is so closely related to our text, the ceremonies of the Upâkarana and Utsargana, of which these three chapters treat, are not described.

18, 2. Sravanâpaksha means, according to Mátridatta, sráva-full moon, when the herbs have appeared, under (the Nakshatra) Hasta or on the full-moon day (itself), the opening ceremony of the (annual course of) study (is performed).

3. Having put wood on the fire and performed the rites down to the Vyâhriti oblations, he sacrifices (with his pupils) to the Rishis of the Kândas: 'To Prâgâpati, the Rishi of a Kânda, svâhâ! To Soma, the Rishi of a Kânda, svâhâ! To Agni, the Rishi of a Kânda, svâhâ! To the Visve devás, the Rishis of a Kânda, svâhâ! To Svayambhû, the Rishi of a Kânda, svâhâ!—these are the Rishis of the Kândas. Or (he sacrifices) to the names of the Kândas, to the Sâvitrî, to the Rig-veda, the Yâgur-veda, the Sâma-veda, the Atharva-veda, and to Sadasaspati.

4. Having (thus) sacrificed, they repeat the first three Anuvâkas,

5. Or the beginnings of all Kândas.

6. He enters upon (sacrificing) the Gaya, &c. (oblations; see above, I, 1, 3, 8).

7. After all rites down to the Svishtakrît oblation have been performed, they stop studying three days or one day; then they should go on studying so as to commence where they have broken off: so say the teachers.

8. During the fortnight that precedes the Taishî full moon, under (the Nakshatra) Rohizî or on the full-moon day (itself), the Utsarga (or conclusion of the term of study) is celebrated.

napûrvapaksha, and indeed the moon stands in conjunction with the Nakshatra Hasta only on one day of the first, not of the second, fortnight of the month Srâvana (comp. the note on Âsvalâyana-Grihya III, 5, 2. 3). Comp. taishîpakshasya rohîyām, below, § 8.

8. As to taishîpaksha, comp. the note on Sûtra 2.
9. (The teacher) with his pupils goes in an easterly or northerly direction, and where they find a pleasant water with a pleasant bathing-place, they dive into it and perform three suppressions of the breath with the Agharmarshana hymn (Rig-veda X, 190= Taitt. Âr. X, i, 13, 14). Holding purifiers (i.e. Darbha blades) in their hands they bathe with the three (verses), ‘Ye waters, ye are wholesome’ (Taitt. Samkh. IV, i, 5, 1), with the four (verses), ‘The gold-coloured, pure, purifying waters’ (T. S. V, 6, i, i seq.), and with the Anuvâka, ‘(Soma) which clears itself, the heavenly being’ (Taitt. Br. I, 4, 8): giving the Darbha blades to each other and feigning to try to seize (??) each other.

10. Then they arrange on a pure spot that is inclined towards the east, seats of eastward-pointed Darbha grass, so that they end in the north—

Patala 8, Section 19.

1. For Brahman, Pragâpati, Brihaspati, Agni, Vâyu, the Sun, the Moon, the Stars, king Indra, king Yama, king Varuna, king Soma, king Vaîśravaṇa, for the Vasus, the Rudras, the Âdityas, the Visve devâs, the Sâdhyas, the Ribhus, the Bhrigus, the Maruts, the Atharvans, the Ângiras: for these divine beings.

9. On the last words of this Sûtra, Mâtridatta says, ditsanta iveti dâtum ikhâhanta ivânyonyam prati. athavâ âditsanta iveti pâthah. âditsanto mushânta ivânyonyam.—Professor Kielhorn’s text MS. has, âtisanta ivânyonyam; Professor Bühler’s text MS., ditsamta ivânyonyam.

19, 1. According to Mâtridatta, they prepare a seat for Brahman with the words, ‘For Brahman I prepare (a seat),’ and so on. Comp. chap. 20, 3.
2. Visvámitra, Gamadagni, Bharadvága and Gautama, Atri, Vasishtha, Kasyapa: these are the seven Rishis.

3. Wearing their sacrificial cords below (round their body) they arrange towards the north, at a place that is inclined towards the north, seats of northward-pointed Darbha grass, so that they end in the east, for Visvámitra, Gamadagni, Bharadvága, Gautama, Atri, Vasishtha, Kasyapa.

4. Between Vasishtha and Kasyapa they arrange (a seat) for Arundhati, (the wife of Vasishtha);

5. Towards the south, in a place inclined towards the east, for Agastya.

6. Then for the (following) teachers, ending with those who teach (only) one Veda (?), viz. for Kríshna Dvaipáyana, Gátukarnya, Taruksha, Trinabindu, Varmin, Varúthin, Vágína, Vágasrávas, Satyasrávas, Súsravas, Sutasrávas, Somásushmáyana, Satvavat, Brihadukthá Vámadev(y)á, Vágiratna, Haryagváyana, Udamaya, Gautama, Rínaígaya, Rítáígaya, Kri-táígaya, Dhánaígaya, Babhru, Tryarúva, Trivarsha, Tridhátu, Símbínta, Parásara, Vishnu, Rudra, Skanda, Kásisvára, Gvára, Dharma, Artha, Káma, Krodha, Vasishtha, Indra, Tvashtři, Kartri, Dhátré, Dhátré, Mrítyu, Savitri, Sávitrí, and for each Veda, for the Rig-veda, the Yágur-veda, the Sáma-veda, the Atharva-veda, the Itihása and Puráña.

7. Towards the south, with their sacrificial cords suspended over their right shoulders, in a place inclined towards the south, they arrange seats of southward-pointed Darbha grass, so that they end in the west—

2. This is a frequently quoted versus memoriais.
Patala 8, Section 20.

1. For Vaisampáyana, Pálingu, Tittira [sic], Ukha, Átreya, the author of the Pada-text, Kaúndínya the author of the commentary, for the authors of the Sútras, for Satyáshádhi (Hiranyakesin), for the handers-down of the text, for the teachers, the Rishis, the hermits dwelling in the woods, the chaste ones, for those who have only one wife.

2. They prepare (seats) each for his own fathers and maternal ancestors.

3. With (the words), 'For N. N. I prepare (a seat); for N. N. I prepare (a seat)' (he prepares) a seat.

4. With (the words), 'I satiate N. N.; I satiate N. N.' (he makes offerings of) water.

5. With (the words), 'Adoration to N. N.! Adoration to N. N.!' (he offers) perfumes, flowers, incense, and lamps.

6. With (the words), 'To N. N. sváhá! To N. N. sváhá!' (he offers) food.

7. With (the words), 'I satiate N. N.; I satiate N. N.' (he offers) water with fruits in it.

8. Having worshipped them with (the words), 'Adoration to N. N.! Adoration to N. N.!'—

9. Having put wood on the fire to the west of the surface (on which he had performed the Tarpana), 20, 1. The Kándánukrama of the Átreyi-sákhâ, which has been printed by Professor Weber in his edition of the Taittiríya Sáṃhitâ, vol. ii, p. 356, shows that the dative Paliṅgave ought to be corrected to Paliṅgaye. The 'vrittikāra' is there called not Kaúndínya, but Kundína.

9. There is only one difference between the text of this Sútra and having performed the rites down to the Vyāhṛti oblations (&c., as above, chap. 18, 3–7).

10. With the two (verses), 'From joint to joint,' 'Thou who with a hundred' (Taitt. Samh. IV, 2, 9, 2) they plant Dūrvā grass at the shore of the water.

11. They stir up waves in the water and run a race in an easterly or northerly direction until they lose their breath.

12. When they have returned (from that race? or when they have returned from the whole ceremony to the village?) they offer cakes, coarsely ground grain, and boiled rice to the Brâhmaṇas.

13. The same (rites are repeated) when they have finished the study of the whole Veda, with the exception of the planting of Dūrvā grass, of (stirring up) the water, and of the race.

14. Thus they satiate daily (after the Brâhmayāgaṇa) the gods, the Rishis, and the Fathers with water; they satiate them with water.

End of the Hiranyakesi-sūtra.

and that of chap. 18, 3–7: instead of hutvā trin ādītō nuvākān adhiyate (18, 4) we read here, hutvā prathamenānuvākenādhiyate, which I believe must be translated, 'Having sacrificed with the first Anuvāka, they recite (that Anuvāka).' Mātridatta says, hutvā prathamottamānuvākam adhiyate.

GRIHYA-SŪTRA OF ĀPASTAMBA.
INTRODUCTORY NOTE

TO THE

GRihya-Sûtra OF ÀPASTAMBA.

The short treatise of Àpastamba on the Gríhya ritual forms one Prāsa of the great corpus of the Àpastambiya-Kalpa-sûtra (see Sacred Books, vol. ii, p. xii) and stands, among the Gríhya texts, in closest connection with the Hiranyakesi-Gríhya-sûtra. The chief difference between these two Sūtras, both belonging to the Taittiriya School of the Black Yāgur-veda, consists herein, that Àpastamba, just as has been stated above¹ with regard to Gobhila, gives only the rules for the performance of the Gríhya rites without the Mantras, which are contained in a special collection, the Mantrapâtha, standing by the side of the Sūtras: Hiranyakesin, on the other hand, follows the more usual practice, as adopted by Sāñkhâyana, Ásvalâyana, Pâraskara, of interweaving the description of the ceremonies with the text of the corresponding Mantras. As to the relation in which the Àpastambiya-sūtras stand to the Mantrapâtha, there is, so far as I can see, no reason why we should not extend the theory which we have tried to establish with regard to Gobhila, to the evidently parallel case of Àpastamba: the Sūtras presuppose the existence of the Mantrapâtha, just as the latter text seems to presuppose the Sūtras.—The questions regarding the historical relation of Àpastamba to Hiranyakesin have been treated of by Professor Bühler in his Introduction to Àpastamba’s Dharma-sûtra, S. B. E., vol. ii, pp. xxiii seq.

I have here to thank Dr. Winternitz, to whom we are indebted for an excellent edition of the Àpastambiya-Gríhya-sûtra, for having placed at my disposal, before publication, the proof-sheets of his edition, and for lending me his copy of the Mantrapāṭha as well as of the commentary of Haradatta. The kindness of the same scholar has enabled me to make use of Professor Eggeling's copy of the first part of Sudarsanārya's commentary and of his own copy of the second part of the same work.

GRIHYA-SUTRA OF ÂPASTAMBA,

PÂTALA 1, SECTION 1.

1. Now (follow) the ceremonies (the knowledge of) which is derived from practice (and not from the Sruti).

2. They should be performed during the northern course of the sun, on days of the first fortnight (of the month), on auspicious days,

3. With the sacrificial cord suspended over (the sacrificer's) left shoulder.

4. (The rites should be performed) from left to right.

5. The beginning should be made on the east side or on the north side,

6. And also the end.

7. Ceremonies belonging to the Fathers (are performed) in the second fortnight (of the month),

8. With the sacrificial cord suspended over the right shoulder,

9. From right to left,

10. Ending in the south.

11. Ceremonies occasioned by special occurrences (are performed) according as their occasions demand.

1, 1-11. The Paribhâshâs for the Pâkayagânas.
7-10. Comp. 7 with 2, 8 with 3, 9 with 4, 10 with 6.
12. Having set the fire in a blaze, he strews eastward-pointed Darbha grass around it,
13. Or eastward-pointed and northward-pointed (grass);
14. Southward-pointed at sacrifices to the Fathers,
15. Or southward-pointed and eastward-pointed.
16. To the north of the fire he strews Darbha grass and (on that) he places the vessels (required for sacrifice) upside-down, two by two, if referring to ceremonies directed to the gods,
17. All at once, if to men,
18. One by one, if to the Fathers.
19. The preparation of the (blades used as) 'purifiers,' the measure of their length, the preparation of the Prokshāṅī water, and the sprinkling of the vessels are the same here as at the sacrifices of the new and full moon, (but are performed) in silence.
20. To the west of the fire he pours water into a vessel over which he has laid (two grass blades called) purifiers, purifies (the water) three times with two northward-pointed purifiers, holds it on a level with his nose and mouth, places it to the north of the fire on Darbha grass, and covers it with Darbha grass.
21. On the south side he causes a Brāhmaṇa to sit down on Darbha grass.
22. He melts the Āgya, pours it, to the west of the fire, into the Āgya-pot, over which he has laid two purifiers, draws coals (out of the sacrificial fire) towards the north, puts (the Āgya) on them, throws light on it by means of a burning (grass-blade), throws two Darbha points into it, moves a fire-brand round it three times, takes it from the fire towards the north, sweeps the coals back (into the fire), purifies (the Âgya) three times with two northward-pointed purifiers, moving them backward and forward, and throws the purifiers into the fire.

Patala 1, Section 2.

1. He warms at the fire the implement with which he sacrifices, wipes it off with Darbha blades, warms it again, sprinkles it (with water), puts it down, touches the Darbha blades with water, and throws them into the fire.

2. As paridhis (or pieces of wood laid round the fire) yoke-pins are used at the marriage, the Upanayana, the Samâvartana, the parting of the (wife's) hair, the tonsure of the child's hair, the cutting of the beard, and at expiatory ceremonies.

3. He sprinkles water round the fire, on the south side from west to east with (the words), 'Aditi, give thy consent!' on the west side from south to north with 'Anumati, give thy consent!' on the north side from west to east with 'Sarasvati [sic], give thy consent!' all around with 'God Savitri, give thy impulse!'

4. At ceremonies belonging to the Fathers (water is sprinkled) only all round (the fire), silently.

5. Having put a piece of wood on the fire, he offers the two Āghāra oblations as at the sacrifices of the new and full moon, silently.

6. Then he offers the two Āgyabhāga oblations, over the easterly part of the northerly part (of the fire) with (the words), 'To Agni Svāhā!' over the easterly part of the southerly part (another oblation) exactly like the preceding one, with (the words), 'To Soma Svāhā!'

7. Having offered the chief oblations (belonging to each sacrifice) according to prescription, he adds the following oblations, viz. the Gaya, Abhyātāna, Rāśh/rabhṛt oblations, the oblation to Praγāpati, the Vyāhrṛtis one by one, the oblation to (Agni) Svish/takṛt with (the following formula), 'What I have done too much in this ceremony, or what I have done here too little, all that may Agni Svish-takṛt, he who knows, make well sacrificed and well offered. Svāhā!'

8. The sprinkling (of water) round (the fire is repeated) as above; the Mantras are altered so as to say, 'Thou hast given thy consent,' 'Thou hast given thy impulse.'

9. The designation 'Pākayagañā' is used of ceremonies connected with worldly life.

10. There the ritual based on the Brāhmaṇa (holds good),

7. On the Gaya, Abhyātāna, Rāśh/rabhṛt formulas, comp. Pāraskara I, 5, 7 seq.; Hiranyakesin I, 1, 3, 7 seq.; Taitt. Samhitā III, 4, 4–7.—The last formula occurs also in Āśvalāyana I, 10, 23; Hiranyakesin I, 1, 3, 6, &c.
8. Comp. above, Sūtra 3.
10. According to Haradatta, this Sūtra would imply that wherever the ritual described in the preceding Sūtras holds good,
11. (To which the words allude), 'He sacrifices twice; he wipes off (his hand) twice; he partakes twice (of the sacrificial food); having gone away he sips (out of the Sru£) and licks off (the Sru£).

12. All seasons are fit for marriage with the exception of the two months of the sis'ira season, and of the last summer month.

13. All Nakshatras which are stated to be pure, (are fit for marriage);

14. And all auspicious performances.

15. And one should learn from women what ceremonies (are required by custom).

16. Under the Invakás (Nakshatra), (the wooers who go to the girl's father) are sent out: such wooers are welcome.

Patala 1, Section 3.

1. Under the Maghás (Nakshatra) cows are provided;

another ritual based on the Brâhma, and more especially on the treatment of the Agnihotra in the Brâhma, may be used in its stead.

11. Comp. Taitt. Brâhma II, 1, 4, 5; Satapatha Brâhma II, 3, 1, 18. 21.—At the Agnihotra the sacrificer, having wiped off the Sru£ with his hand, wipes off the hand on the Barhis or on the earth (Âpast.-Sraut. VI, 10, 11; 11, 4; Kâtyâyana IV, 14, 20). As to the following acts alluded to in this Sûtra, comp. Âpastamba VI, 11, 4. 5; 12, 2.

16. On the Nakshatra Invakás, comp. Section 3, Sûtra 4. This Sûtra forms a Sloka-hemistich, on which Haradatta observes, 'This verse has not been made by the Sutrakâra.'

2. Under the Phalguni (Nakshatra) marriage is celebrated.

3. A daughter whom he wishes to be dear (to her husband), a father should give in marriage under the Nishṭyā (Nakshatra); thus she becomes dear (to her husband); she does not return (to her father's) house: this is an observance based on a Brāhmaṇa.

4. The word Invakās means Mrīgasiras; the word Nishṭyā means Svāti.

5. At the wedding one cow;

6. In the house one cow:

7. With the (first cow) he should prepare an Argha reception for the bridegroom as for a guest,

8. With the other (the bridegroom [?] should do so) for a person whom he reveres.

9. These are the occasions for killing a cow: (the arrival of) a guest, (the Ashṭakā sacrifice offered to) the Fathers, and marriage.

10. Let (the wooer) avoid in his wooing a girl that sleeps, or cries, or has left home.

11. And let him avoid one who has been given (to another), and who is guarded (by her relations), and one who looks wicked (?), or who is a most

4. Comp. Sūtra 3, and above, Section 2, Sūtra 16.
5-8. Comp. Sāṅkhāyana-Gṛhyā I, 12, 10. It is clear that with the first cow the bride's father has to receive the bridegroom. The 'house' mentioned in Sūtra 6 seems to be the house of the newly-married couple. In the expression 'whom he reveres,' 'he,' according to the commentaries, is the bridegroom.

10. This Sūtra forms a half-sloka.

11. Most expressions in this Sūtra are quite doubtful, and their translation rests on the explanations of the commentators (see pp. 44, 45 of Dr. Winternitz's edition), which are evidently for the most part only guesses.
excellent one (?), or (who is like the fabulous deer) sarabha (?), a hunch-back, a girl of monstrous appearance, a bald-headed girl, a girl whose skin is like a frog's (?), a girl who has gone over to another family (?), a girl given to sensual pleasures (?), or a herdess, or one who has too many friends, or who has a fine younger sister, or one whose age is too near to that of the bridegroom (?).

12. Girls who have the name of a Nakshatra, or of a river, or of a tree, are objectionable.

13. And all girls in whose names the last letter but one is r or l, one should avoid in wooing.

14. If possible, he should place (the following) objects hidden before the girl, and should say to her, 'Touch (one of these things).'

15. (The objects are), different kinds of seeds mixed together, loose earth from (the kind of sacrificial altar called) vedi, an earth-clod from a field, cow-dung, and an earth-clod from a cemetery.

16. If she touches one of the former (objects, this portends) prosperity as characterized (by the nature of what she has touched).

17. The last is regarded as objectionable.

18. Let him marry a girl of good family and character, with auspicious characteristics, and of good health.

19. Good family, a good character, auspicious characteristics, learning, and good health: these are the accomplishments of a bridegroom.

eyes, will bring happiness to him; let him pay no attention to the other things: such is the opinion of some.

Patala 2, Section 4.

1. Let him send out as his wooers friends who have assembled, who are versed in the Mantras.
2. He should recite over them the first two verses (Mantrap. I, 1, 1. 2).
3. When he himself has seen (the bride), let him murmur the third (verse; M. I, 1, 3).
4. With the fourth (M. I, 1, 4) let him behold her.
5. Let him seize with his thumb and fourth finger a Darbha blade, and let him wipe (therewith) the interstice between her eye-brows with the next Yagus (M. I, 1, 5), and let him throw it away towards the west.
6. If an omen occurs (such as the bride's or her relations' weeping), let him murmur the next (verse; M. I, 1, 6).
7. With the next (verse; M. I, 1, 7) let him send an even number of persons who have assembled there, and who are versed in the Mantras, to fetch water.
8. With the next Yagus (M. I, 1, 8) he places a round piece of Darbha net-work on her head; on that, with the next (verse; M. I, 1, 9) he places a right yoke-hole; on this hole he lays with the next (verse; M. I, 1, 10), a piece of gold, and washes her with the next five verses (M. I, 2, 1–5), (so that the water runs over that gold and through the yoke-hole); with the next (verse; M. I, 2, 6) he causes her to dress in a fresh garment, and with the next (M. I, 2, 7) he girds her with a rope.

9. Then he takes hold of her with the next (verse; M. I, 2, 8) by her right hand, leads her to the fire, spreads a mat, west of the fire, so that the points of the blades in it are directed towards the north, and on this mat they both sit down, the bridegroom to the north.

10. After the ceremonies have been performed from the putting of wood on the fire down to the Āgyabhāga oblations, he recites over her the first two (verses of the third Anuvāka).

11. Then he should take with his right hand, palm down, her right hand which she holds palm up.

12. If he wishes that only daughters may be born to him, he should seize only the fingers (without the thumb);

13. If he wishes that only sons may be born to him, the thumb.

14. He takes (her hand) so as just to touch her thumb and the little hairs (on her hand),

15. With the four verses, 'I take thy hand' (Mantrap. I, 3, 3–6).

16. He then makes her step forward with her right foot, to the north of the fire, in an easterly or northerly direction, with (the formula), 'One step for sap' (M. I, 3, 7).

17. At her seventh step he murmurs, 'Be a friend' (M. I, 3, 14).
1. Having before the sacrifice gone round the fire, so that their right sides are turned towards it,

2. They sit down in their former position, and while she takes hold of him, he offers the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras), with (the Mantras), 'To Soma, the acquirer of a wife, Svāhā!' (M. I, 4, 1–16), one oblation with each Mantra.

3. He then causes her, to the north of the fire, to tread with her right foot on a stone, with (the verse), 'Tread' (M. I, 5, 1).

4. Having 'spread under' Âgya into her joined hands, he pours roasted grain twice (into them), and sprinkles Âgya over it.

5. Some say that an uterine relation of hers pours the grain (into her hands).

6. He (?) sacrifices (that grain) with (the verse), 'This wife' (M. I, 5, 2).

7. Having gone round the fire, with the right side turned towards it, with the next three (verses; M. I, 5, 3–5) he makes her tread on the stone as above (M. I, 5, 6).

8. And the oblation (is performed) with the next (verse; M. I, 5, 7).

9. (Then follow) again the circumambulation (M. I, 5, 8–10), the injunction to tread on the stone

(I, 5, 11), and the oblation with the next (verse; I, 5, 12);

10. (Then) the circumambulation again (I, 5, 13–15).

11. He enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations.

12. Having performed (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), and having untied the rope with the next two verses (I, 5, 16–17), he should then make her depart (from her father's house in a vehicle), or should have her taken away.

13. Having put that fire (with which the marriage rites have been performed, into a vessel), they carry it behind (the newly-married couple).

14. It should be kept constantly.

15. If it goes out, (a new fire) should be kindled by attrition,

16. Or it should be fetched from the house of a Srotriya.

17. Besides, if (the fire) goes out, one of them, either the wife or the husband, should fast.

18. Or he may sacrifice with the next (verse; M. I, 5, 18), and not fast.

19. The next (verse; M. I, 6, 1) is for putting the chariot (on which the young couple is to depart), in position;

20. With the next two (verses; M. I, 6, 2. 3), he puts the two animals to the chariot;

21. First the right one.

22. When she mounts (the chariot), he recites over her the next (verses; M. I, 6, 4–7).

11, 12. See Section 2, Sûtras 7, 8; Section 4, Sûtra 8.
12 seq. Comp. Hiranyakesin I, 7, 22, 1 seq.
23. With the next (verse; M. I, 6, 8), he spreads out two threads in the wheel-tracks (in which the chariot is to go), a dark-blue one in the right (track), a red one in the left.

24. With the next (verses; M. I, 6, 9–11), he walks on these (threads).

25. And when they pass by bathing-places, posts, or cross-roads, let him murmur the next (verse; M. I, 6, 12).

Patala 2, Section 6.

1. The next (verse; M. I, 6, 13), he recites over a boat (with which they are going to cross a river).

2. And let the wife, when she is crossing, not see the crew.

3. When they have crossed, let him murmur the next (verse; M. I, 6, 14).

4. If they have to pass over a cemetery, or if any article (which they carry with them), or their chariot is damaged, the ceremonies from the putting of wood on the fire down to the Āג�abhâga oblations are performed, and while she takes hold of him, he offers the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras; M. I, 7, 1–7), then he enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations, and performs (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire).

5. If they pass by trees with milky sap or by other trees that serve as marks, by rivers or by deserts, he should murmur the next two (verses; M. I, 7, 8, 9), according to the characteristics in them (which refer to these different cases).

6. With the next (verse) he shows her the house (M. I, 7, 10).
7. With the next two (verses; M. I, 7, 11, 12) he unyokes the two animals; the right one first.

8. Having, with the next (verse; M. I, 8, 1), spread out, in the centre of the house, a red bull's skin with the neck to the east, with the hair up, he causes her to recite the next (verse; M. I, 8, 2), while he makes her enter the house, (which she does) with her right foot.

9. And she does not stand on the threshold.

10. In the north-east part of the house the ceremonies from the putting of wood on the fire down to the Āgayabhāga oblations are performed, and while she takes hold of him, he offers the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras; M. I, 8, 3-15); then he enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations, and performs (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire). Then they sit down with the next (verse; M. I, 9, 1) on the skin, the bridegroom to the north.

11. He then places with the next (verse; M. I, 9, 2), the son of a wife who has only sons and whose children are alive, in her lap, gives fruits to the (child) with the next Yagus (M. I, 9, 3), and murmurs the next two (verses; M. I, 9, 4-5). Then he (and his wife) observe silence until the stars appear.

12. When the stars have appeared, he goes out (of the house with her) in an easterly or northerly direction, and shows her the polar star and (the star) Arundhati with the next two verses (M. I, 9, 6-7), according to the characteristics (contained in those verses).
1. He then makes her offer the sacrifice of a Sthâlîpâka sacred to Agni.

2. The wife husks (the rice grains out of which this Sthâlîpâka is prepared).

3. After he has cooked (the Sthâlîpâka), and has sprinkled (Âgya) over it, and has taken it from the fire towards the east or the north, and has sprinkled (Âgya) over it while it stands (there near the fire), (the ceremonies) from the putting of wood on the fire down to the Âgyabhâga oblations (are performed), and while she takes hold of him, he sacrifices of that Sthâlîpâka.

4. The ‘spreading under’ and the sprinkling over (of Âgya are done) once; two Avadânas (or cut-off portions are taken).

5. Agni is the deity (of the first oblation); the offering is made with the word Svâhā.

6. Or he may sacrifice after having picked out, once, a portion (of the sacrificial food with the Darvi spoon).

7. Agni Svishâkritis is the second (deity).

8. (At the Svishâkritis oblation) the ‘spreading under’ and taking an Avadâna are done once, the sprinkling over (of Âgya) twice.

9. The Avadâna for the first deity (is taken) out of the middle (of the Sthâlîpâka);

10. It is offered over the centre (of the fire).

7, 1 seq. Hiranyakesin I, 7, 23, 2 seq.

6. As to the technical meaning of upahatya or upaghâtam, comp. the note on Gobhila I, 8, 2; Grihya-samgraha I, 111.
11. (The Avadāna) for the second (deity is taken) from the northern part (of the Sthālipāka);
12. It is offered over the easterly part of the northern part (of the fire).
13. Having silently anointed (a part of) the Barhis (by dipping it) into the remains both (of the Sthālipāka and the Āgya) in the way prescribed (in the Srauta ritual) for the (part of the Barhis called) Prastara, he throws (that part of the Barhis) into the fire.
14. (The rule regarding) the second sprinkling (of water round the fire) is valid (here).
15. He gives (the remains of) that (sacrificial food) with butter to a Brāhmaṇa to eat—
16. Whom he reveres. To that (Brāhmaṇa) he makes the present of a bull.
17. In the same way, with the exception of the sacrificial gift, they should sacrifice a Sthālipāka from then onwards, on the days of the new and full moon, after having fasted.
18. Some say that a vessel full (of grain) is the sacrificial gift.
19. From then onwards he should offer morning and evening with his hand these two oblations (to Agni and to Agni Svishṭakrīt) of (rice) grains or of barley.

19. The two regular daily oblations corresponding to the Agni-hotra of the Srauta ritual.
20. The deities are the same as at the Sthālipāka (just described).
21. Some say that the first oblation in the morning is sacred to Sūrya.
22. Before and after (those oblations) the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire is performed) as stated above.
23. By the sacrifice of the new and full moon the other ceremonies have been explained (the knowledge of) which is derived from practice.
24. The deities (of those rites) are as stated (with regard to each particular case), having their place between Agni (Sūtra 5) and Svish-takrīt (Sūtra 7).

9. Between their sleeping-places a staff is interposed, which is anointed with perfumes and wrapped round with a garment or a thread.

10. In the last part of the fourth night he takes up the (staff) with the next two (verses; M. I, 10, 1–2), washes it and puts it away; then (the ceremonies) from the putting of wood on the fire down to the Âgyabhâga oblations (are performed), and while she takes hold of him, he sacrifices the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras; M. I, 10, 3–9); then he enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations, and performs (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire). Then he makes her sit down to the west of the fire, facing the east, and pours some Âgya of the remains (of those oblations) on her head with the (three) Vyâhrîtis and the word Om as the fourth (M. I, 10, 10–13). Then they look at each other with the next two verses (M. I, II, 1–2), according to the characteristics (contained in those verses); with the next verse (M. I, II, 3) he besmears the region of their hearts with remains of Âgya; then he should murmur the next three verses (I, II, 4–6), and should murmur the rest (of the Anuvâka; I, II, 7–11) when cohabiting with her.

11. Or another person should recite (the rest of the Anuvâka) over her, (before they cohabit).

12. During her (first) monthly illness he instructs her about the things forbidden (to menstruous women), contained in the Brâhmaṇa, in the section, 'A menstrual woman with whom,' &c.

13. After the appearance of her monthly illness, he should, when going to cohabit with her after her illness, recite over her, after she has bathed, the next verses (M. I, 12, 1–13, 4).

Patala 3, Section 9.

1. Each following night with an even number, from the fourth (after the beginning of her monthly illness) till the sixteenth, brings more excellent offspring to them, if chosen for the (first) cohabiting after her illness; thus it is said.

2. If he sneezes or coughs while going about on business, he should touch water and should murmur the two following (verses; M. I, 13, 5. 6) according to the characteristics (which they contain).

3. In the same way with the next (Mantras—M. I, 13, 7–10—he should address the following objects), according to the characteristics (which those Mantras contain): a conspicuous tree, a heap of excrements, the skirt (of his garment) which is blown against him by the wind, and a shrieking bird.

4. One (for instance, the wife's father) who wishes that the hearts of both (husband and wife) may be in accord should observe chastity through at least three nights and should prepare a Sthålîpâka. Then (the ceremonies) from the putting (of wood) on (the fire) down to the Ágyabhâga oblations (are performed), and while the wife takes hold of him, he sacrifices of the Sthålîpâka the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras; M. I, 14, 1–7); then he enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations, and performs (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire). (The remains of) the (sacrificial food) with butter, he should give to eat to an even number of Brâhmaṇas, at least to two, and should cause them to pronounce wishes for his success.

5. When the moon, on the following day, will be in conjunction with Tishya, she strews three times seven barley-grains around (the plant) Clypea Hernandifolia with (the formula), 'If thou belongest to Varuṇa, I redeem thee from Varuṇa. If thou belongest to Soma, I redeem thee from Soma.'

9, 5. Comp. Gobhila II, 6, 6 seq.
6. On the following day she should set upright (the plant) with the next (verse; M. I, 15, 1), should recite the next three (verses; M. I, 15, 2-4) over it, should tie (its root) with the next (verse; M. I, 15, 5) to her hands so that (her husband) does not see it, and should, when they have gone to bed, embrace her husband with her arms, with the verse alluding to the word upadhaṇa (‘putting on;’ M. I, 15, 6).

7. Thus he will be subject to her.

8. By this (rite) also (a wife) overcomes her co-wives.

9. For this same purpose she worships the sun daily with the next Anuvâka (M. I, 16).

10. If a wife is affected with consumption or is otherwise sick, one who has to observe chastity, should rub her limbs with young lotus leaves which are still rolled up, and with lotus roots, with the next (formulas, limb by limb) according to the characteristics (contained in those formulas; M. I, 17, 1-6), and should throw away (the leaves and roots) towards the west.

11. With the next (verses; M. I, 17, 7-10) he should give the wife's garment (which she has worn at the wedding [?]) to (a Brāhmaṇa) who knows this (ceremony).

Patala 4, Section 10.

1. We shall explain the Upanayana (or initiation of the student).

2. Let him initiate a Brāhmaṇa in the eighth year after the conception,

3. A Rāganya in the eleventh, a Vaisya in the twelfth year after the conception.
4. Spring, summer, autumn: these are the (fit) seasons (for the Upanayana), corresponding to the order of the castes.

5. (The boy's father) serves food to Brāhmaṇas and causes them to pronounce auspicious wishes, and serves food to the boy. (The teacher?) pours together, with the first Yagus (of the next Anuvāka, warm and cold) water, pouring the warm water into the cold, and moistens (the boy's) head with the next (verse; M. II, 1, 2).

6. Having put three Darbha blades into his hair (towards each of the four directions) (the teacher [?]) shaves his hair with the next four (verses; M. II, 1, 3–6) with the different Mantras, towards the different (four) directions.

7. With the following (verse, M. II, 1, 7, somebody) addresses him while he is shaving.

8. Towards the south, his mother or a Brahma-śārin strews barley-grains on a lump of bull's dung; with this (dung) she catches up the hair (that is cut off), and puts it down with the next (verse; M. II, 1, 8) at the root of an Udumbara tree or in a tuft of Darbha grass.

9. After (the boy) has bathed, and (the ceremonies) from the putting (of wood) on (the fire) down to the Āgyabhāga oblations (have been performed), he causes him to put a piece of Palāsa wood on the fire with the next (verse; M. II, 2, 1), and makes him tread with his right foot on a stone to the north of the fire, with (the verse), 'Tread' (M. II, 2, 2).

10. Having recited the next two (verses; M. II, 2, 3, 4) over a garment that has been spun and woven on one day, and has caused him, with the next three (verses; M. II, 2, 5–7), to put it on, he recites over him, after he has put it on, the next (verse; M. II, 2, 8).

11. He ties thrice around him, from left to right, a threefold-twisted girdle of Muṅga grass with the next two (verses; M. II, 2, 9, 10), and (gives him) a skin as his outer garment with the next (verse; II, 2, 11).

12. To the north of the fire (the teacher) spreads out Darbha grass; on that he causes (the boy) to station himself with the next (verse; M. II, 3, 1), pours his joined hands full of water into (the boy's) joined hands, makes him sprinkle himself three times with the next (verse; M. II, 3, 2), takes hold of his right hand with the next (formulas; M. II, 3, 3–12), gives him with the next (formulas; M. II, 3, 13–23) in charge to the deities (mentioned in those Mantras), initiates him with the next Yagus (M. II, 3, 24), and murmurs into his right ear the (Mantra), 'Blessed with offspring' (II, 3, 25).

Patala 4, Section 11.

1. The boy says, 'I am come to be a student' (II, 3, 26).

11. Comp. Āpast. Dharma-sūtra I, 1, 2, 33; I, 3, 3 seq.

12. As to the words, 'he initiates him' (upanayati), comp. Sāṅkhāyana II, 2, 11, 12; Āsvalāyana I, 20, 4 &c.
2. The other (i.e. the teacher) has to ask; the boy has to answer (II, 3, 27-30).

3. The other murmurs the rest (of the Anuvâka),

4. And causes the boy to repeat (the Mantra) which contains wishes for himself (II, 3, 32).

5. (The rites) down to the Ágyabhâgas have been prescribed.

6. Having then caused him to sacrifice the oblations (indicated in the) next (Mantras; M. II, 4, 1-11), he enters upon (the performance) of the Gaya and following oblations.

7. Having performed (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), he puts down, to the west of the fire, a bunch of northward-pointed grass; on that (the teacher) who performs the initiation, sits down with the next Yagus (M. II, 4, 12).

8. The boy, sitting to the east (of him), facing the west, seizes with his right hand (the teacher's) right foot and says, 'Recite the Sâvitri, Sir!'

9. He recites (the Sâvitri) to him, 'That (glorious splendour) of Savitri' (Taitt. Samh. I, 5, 6, 4; M. II, 4, 13);

11. (When repeating the Sâvitri Pâda by Pâda, he pronounces) the Vyâhrtis singly at the beginning or at the end of the Pâdas;

12. In the same way (the first and the second Vyâhrti at the beginning or at the end) of the hemistichs; the last (Vyâhrti, when he repeats) the whole verse.

13. With the next Mantra (M. II, 4, 14) the boy touches his upper lip;

11, 5. See above, Section 10, Sûtra 9.
14. With the next (II, 4, 15) both his ears;
15. With the next (II, 5, 1) he takes up the staff.
16. The staff of a Brāhmaṇa is made of Palāsa wood, that of a Rāganya of a branch of the Nyagrodha tree, so that the downward-turned end (of the branch) forms the tip (of the staff), that of a Vaisya of Bādara or Udumbara wood.
17. Some state (only), without any reference to caste, that the staff should be made of the wood of a tree.
18. After (the teacher) has made him repeat (the formula), 'My memory' (M. II, 5, 2), and he has bestowed an optional gift on his teacher, and (the teacher) has made him arise with (the formula, M. II, 5, 3), 'Up, with life!' (the student) worships the sun with the next (Mantras; II, 5, 4).
19. If (the teacher) wishes, 'May this (student) not be estranged from me,' let him take (the student) by the right hand with the next (verse; II, 5, 6).
20. They keep that fire (used at the Upanayana) three days,
21. And (during that time) salted and pungent food should be avoided.
22. Having wiped (with his hand wet) around (the fire) with (the formula), 'Around thee' (M. II, 6, 1), he should put (twelve) pieces of wood on that (fire) with the next Mantras (II; 6, 2–13).
23. In the same way also on another (fire, when the Upanayana fire is kept no longer),
24. Fetching fuel regularly from the forest.
25. With the next (formula—M. II, 6, 14—the teacher) instructs (the student in his duties).

16, 17. These Sūtras are identical with Dharma-sūtra I, 1, 2, 38 (S. B. E., vol. ii, p. 9).
26. On the fourth day (after the Upanayana the teacher) takes the garment (of the student) for himself with the next (verse; M. II, 6, 15), having made him put on another (garment).

Patala 5, Section 12.

1. Having studied the Veda, when going to take the bath (which signifies the end of his studentship), he enters a cow-shed before sunrise, hangs over its door a skin with the hair inside, and sits there.

2. On that day the sun should not shine upon him.

3. At noon, after (the ceremonies) from the putting (of wood) on the fire down to the Āgyābhaṅga oblations (have been performed), he puts a piece of Palāsa wood on (the fire) with the next (verse; M. II, 7, 1), sits down to the west of the fire on a mat or on erakā grass, recites the next (verse, II, 7, 2) over a razor, and hands it over to the barber with the next Yañus (II, 7, 3). (The rites) beginning with the pouring together of (warm and cold) water down to the burying of the hair are the same as above (comp. M. II, 7, 4).

4. He sits down behind the cow-shed, takes the girdle off, and hands it over to a Brahmacārin.

5. The (Brahmacārin) hides it with the next Yagus (II, 7, 5) at the root of an Udumbara tree or in a tuft of Darbha grass.

6. With water of the description stated above he

7. Having bathed and shampooed his body with such ingredients as are used in bathing, (aromatic powder, &c.),

8. He puts on with the next Yagus (M. II, 7, 13) a fresh under garment, and anoints himself, after having given the salve in charge of the deities with the next (Mantras, II, 7, 14), with the next (verse, II, 7, 15) with sandal salve which is scented with all kinds of perfumes. With the next (verse, II, 7, 16) he moves about a gold pellet with its setting, which is strung on a string, three times from left to right in a water-pot; with the next (verse, II, 7, 17) he ties the (pellet) to his neck; in the same way, without Mantras, he ties a pellet of Bâdara wood to his left hand, and repeats the rites stated above with a fresh upper garment, with the (verses), 'May the rich' (comp. above, IV, 10, 10; M. II, 7, 18).

9. To the skirt (of that garment) he ties two ear-rings, puts them into the (sacrificial spoon called) Darvi, offers the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras; M. II, 8, 1-8), pouring the Âgya over (the ear-rings), and enters upon (the performance of) the Gaya and following oblations.

10. Having performed (the ceremonies) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), he should tie (one of the ear-rings) with the same (verses) to his right ear, and with the same (verses one) to his left ear.

11. In the same way he should with the following (formulas, M. II, 8, 9-9, 5), according to the characteristics (contained in them), (put) a wreath on his head, anoint (his eyes), look into a mirror, (put on) shoes, (and should take) a parasol and a staff.

12. He keeps silence until the stars appear.

13. When the stars have appeared, he goes away towards the east or north, worships the quarters (of the horizon) with the next hemistich, and the stars and the moon with the next (M. II, 9, 6).

14. Having spoken with a friend he may go where he likes.

Patala 5, Section 13.

1. Now this (is) another (way for performing the Samâvartana). He bathes silently at a bathing-place and puts silently a piece of wood on (the fire).

2. He sits down on a bunch of grass, as stated above (comp. M. II, 9, 7), at a place where they are going to honour him (with the Argha reception).

3. A king and a chieftain (sit down) in the same way (as a Brâhmaṇa), with the next two (formulas, M. II, 9, 8. 9), according to the characteristics (contained in them).

4. (The host) announces (to the guest), 'The water for washing the feet!'

5. (The guest) should recite the next (verse, II, 9, 10) over (that water) and should stretch out the right foot first to a Brâhmaṇa, the left to a Sūdra.

6. Having touched the person who washes him, he should touch himself (i.e. his own heart) with the next (formula, M. II, 9, 11).

7. (The host, taking the Argha water) in an 13, 2. See above, IV, 11, 7.

earthen vessel which he holds with two bunches of grass, announces (to the guest), 'The Argha water!'

8. (The guest) should recite the next (formula, II, 9, 12) over (that water) and should murmur the next Yagus (II, 9, 13), while a part (of the water) is poured over his joined hands.

9. Over the rest (of the water) which is poured out towards the east, he recites the next (verse, M. II, 9, 14).

10. (The host) pours together curds and honey in a brass vessel, covers it with a larger (brass cover), takes hold of it with two bunches of grass, and announces (to the guest), 'The honey-mixture!'

11. Some take three substances, (those stated before) and ghee.

12. Some take five, (the three stated before), and grains, and flour.

13. The guest recites the next two (formulas, M. II, 10, 1. 2) over (the honey-mixture) and sips water with the two Yagus (II, 10, 3. 4) before (eating) and afterwards; with the next (verse, II, 10, 5) he should partake three times (of the food) and should give the remainder to a person towards whom he is kindly disposed.

14. A king or a chieftain should only accept it and (give it) to his Purohita.

15. (The host) announces the cow with (the word), 'The cow!'

16. After the guest has recited the next (formula, M. II, 10, 6) over (the cow, the host) cooks its omentum, and having performed the 'spreading under' and the sprinkling over (of Âgya), he sacrifices it with the next (verse, M. II, 10, 7) with a Palâsa leaf from the middle or the end (of the stalk).
17. If the guest chooses to let (the cow) loose, he murmurs the next (formulas, II, 10, 8-11) in a low voice (and says) loudly, 'Om! Let it loose!' (II, 10, 12).

18. (In this case) he recites the next (formulas, M. II, 10, 13-17) in a low voice over the food which is announced to him (instead of the cow), (and says) loudly, 'Om! Make it ready!' (II, 10, 18).

19. For his teacher, for a Ritvīg, for his father-in-law, for a king he ought to perform this (Arghya ceremony) as often as they visit his house, if at least one year has elapsed (since they came last).

20. For a renowned teacher (of the Veda the ceremony should be performed) once.

Patala 6, Section 14.

1. The Simantonnayana (or parting of the pregnant wife's hair, is performed) in her first pregnancy, in the fourth month.

2. (The husband) serves food to Brāhmaṇas and causes them to pronounce auspicious wishes; then, after (the ceremonies) from the putting (of wood) on the fire down to the Āgyabhâga oblations (have been performed), he offers the oblations (indicated in the) next (Mantras, M. II, 11, 1-8), while (the wife) takes hold of him, and enters upon the (performance) of the Gaya and following oblations.

3. Having performed (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), he makes her sit down to the west of the fire, facing the east, and parts her hair upwards (i.e. beginning from the front) with a porcupine's quill that has three white spots, with three Darbha blades, and with a bunch of unripe Udumbara fruits, with the Vyâhrâitis or with the two next (verses, II, 11, 9, 10).

4. He says to two lute-players, 'Sing!'

5. Of the next two (verses, II, 11, 11, 12) the first (is to be sung on this occasion) among the (people of the) Sâlvas.

6. The second (is to be used) for Brâhmanas; and the river near which they dwell is to be named.

7. He ties barley-grains with young shoots (to the head of the wife); then she keeps silence until the stars appear.

8. When the stars have appeared, he goes (with his wife) towards the east or north, touches a calf, and murmurs the Vyâhrâitis; then she breaks her silence.

9. The Pumsâvana (i.e. the ceremony to secure the birth of a male child) is performed when the pregnancy has become visible, under the constellation Tishya.

10. From a branch of a Nyagrodha tree, which points eastward or northward, he takes a shoot with two (fruits that look like) testicles. The putting (of wood) on the fire, &c., is performed as at the Simantonnayana (Sûtra 2).

11. He causes a girl who has not yet attained maturity to pound (the Nyagrodha shoot) on an upper mill-stone with another upper mill-stone, and to pour water on it; then he makes his wife lie down on her back to the west of the fire, facing the east, and inserts (the pounded substance) with his thumb into her right nostril, with the next Yagus (II, 11, 13).

7, 8. Sudarshânârya mentions that instead of the singular, 'She keeps silence, she breaks her silence,' some read the dual, so that the husband and his wife are referred to.

12. Then she will give birth to a son.

13. Here follows the ceremony to secure a quick deliverance.

14. With a shallow cup that has not been used before, he draws water in the direction of the river's current; at his wife's feet he lays down a Tūryanti plant; he should then touch his wife, who is soon to be delivered, on the head, with the next Yagus (II, 11, 14), and should sprinkle her with the water, with the next (three) verses (II, 11, 15-17).

15. Yadi garāyu na pated evamvihitābhīr evādbhīr uttarābhyaṁ (II, 11, 18. 19) avokshet.

Patala 6, Section 15.

1. After he has touched the new-born child with the Vātsapra hymn (Taitt. Samh. IV, 2, 2; M. II, 11, 20), and has taken him on his lap with the next Yagus (M. II, 11, 21), with the next (three) (verses—II, 11, 22; 12, 1. 2—one by one) he addresses the child, kisses him on his head, and murmurs (the third verse) into his right ear.

2. And he gives him a Nakshatra name.

3. That is secret.

4. He pours together honey and ghee; into this (mixture) he dips a piece of gold which he has tied with a noose to a Darbha blade. With the next (three) formulas (II, 12, 3-5) he gives the boy (by means of the piece of gold, some of the mixture) to eat. With the next five (verses, II, 12, 6-10) he bathes him. Then he pours curds and ghee together and gives him this (mixture which is called) 'sprinkled butter' (prishadāgya) to eat out of a brass vessel, with the Vyāhrītis to which the syllable 'Om' is added as the fourth (II, 12, 11-14). The remainder he should mix with water and pour out in a cow-stable.

5. With the next (verse, M. II, 13, 1) he places (the child) in the mother's lap; with the next (II, 13, 2) he causes her to give him her right breast; with the next two (verses, II, 13, 3. 4) he touches the earth, and after (the child) has been laid down, (he touches him) with the next (formula, II, 13, 5).

6. With the next Yagus (II, 13, 6) he places a water-pot at (the child's) head, sacrifices mustard seeds and rice-chaff with his joined hands three times with each of the next (formulas, II, 13, 7-14, 2), repeating each time the word Svāhā, and says (to the people who are accustomed to enter the room in which his wife lies), 'Whenever you enter, strew silently (mustard seeds with rice-chaff) on the fire.'

7. This is to be done until the ten days (after the child's birth) have elapsed.

8. On the tenth day, after (the mother) has risen and taken a bath, he gives a name to the son. The father and the mother (should pronounce that name first).

9. (It should be a name) of two syllables or of four syllables; the first part should be a noun; the second a verb; it should have a long vowel (or) the Visarga at the end, should begin with a sonant, and contain a semi-vowel.
10. Or it should contain the particle su, for such a name has a firm foundation; thus it is said in a Brähmana.

11. A girl's name should have an odd number of syllables.

12. When (the father) returns from a journey, he should address the child and kiss him on his head with the next two (verses, M. II, 14, 3. 4), and should murmur the next Mantras (II, 14, 5) into his right ear.

13. With the next Yagus (II, 14, 6) he addresses a daughter (when returning from a journey).

Patala 6, Section 16.

1. In the sixth month after the child's birth he serves food to Brähmanas and causes them to pronounce auspicious wishes; then he should pour together curds, honey, ghee, and boiled rice, and should give (the mixture) to the boy to eat, with the next (four) Mantras (II, 14, 7–10);

2. (He should feed him) with partridge, according to some (teachers).

3. In the third year after his birth the Kaula (or tonsure is performed) under (the Nakshatra of) the two Punarvasus,

4. Brähmanas are entertained with food as at the initiation (Upanayana).

5. The putting (of wood) on the fire, &c. (is performed) as at the Simantonnayana.

6. He makes (the boy) sit down to the west of

7. Or according to their family custom.

8. The ceremonies beginning with the pouring together of (warm and cold) water and ending with the putting down of the hair are the same (as above; comp. M. II, 14, 11).

9. He puts down the razor after having washed it off.

10. The ceremony is (repeated) three days with the (same razor). (Then) the rite is finished.

11. (The father) gives an optional gift (to the Brāhmaṇa who has assisted).

12. The Godāna (or the ceremony of shaving the beard, is performed) in the sixteenth year, in exactly the same way or optionally under another constellation.

13. Or he may perform the Godāna sacred to Agni.

14. Some prescribe the keeping of a vow through one year in connection with the Godāna.

8. See IV, 10, 5-8.

10. I translate as if the words tena tryaham and karmani-vṛitiḥ formed two Sūtras.

13. ‘Having performed the same rites as at the opening of the study of the Āgneya-kāṇḍa, he performs an Upasthana to the deities as taught with regard to the Sukriyavrata.’ Haradatta.—‘After the ceremonies down to the Āgyabhāgas have been performed, one chief oblation of Āgya is offered with the formula, “To Agni, the Rṣhi of the Kānda, svāhā!”’ Sudarśanārya.

14. Comp. the statements given in the note on Gobhila III, 1, 1.
15. The difference (between the A'aula and the Godâna) is that (at the Godâna) the whole hair is shaven (without leaving the locks).

16. According to the followers of the Sâma-veda he should 'touch water.'

Patala 7, Section 17.

1. The ground for building a house should be inclined towards the south-west. He elevates the surface and sweeps (the earth) with a broom of Palâsa wood or of Samî wood, with the next (verse, M. II, 15, 1), in the same (south-west) direction;

2. In the same way three times.

3. He touches the ground, which has thus been prepared, with the next (verse, II, 15, 2). Then he has the pits for the posts dug from left to right, throws the earth (from the pits) towards the inside (of the building-ground), and erects the right door-post with the next two (verses, M. II, 15, 3. 4);

4. In the same way the other (door-post).

5. Having erected after (the door-posts) the other (posts) in the same order in which (the pits) have been dug, he recites the next Yagus (II, 15, 5) over the ridge-pole when it is placed (on the posts),

6. The next (six) (Yagus formulas, II, 15, 6-11) over the (house when it is) finished, according to the characteristics contained in the single formulas.

7. He sets a piece of Palâsa wood or of Samî wood on fire, takes the fire up (in a dish) with the next verse (II, 15, 12), carries it to the house with 16. The udakopasparâsana according to the rite of the Sâma-vedins is described by Gobhila, I, 2, 5 seqq.

the next Yagus (II, 15, 13), and places the fire in the north-eastern part of the house with the next (II, 15, 14).

8. The place for the water-barrel is to the south of that spot.

9. He strews there Darbha grass, so that its points are turned in every direction, pours rice and barley-grains over the (grass) with the next (verse, II, 15, 15), and thereon he places the water-barrel.

10. With the next (Yagus, II, 15, 16) he pours four potfuls of water into it.

11. If (the barrel) breaks, he recites the next (verse, II, 15, 17) over it.

12. After the ceremonies from the putting of wood on the fire down to the Ågyabhâga oblations have been performed, he offers the (four) oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras; II, 15, 18–21); then he enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations.

13. Having performed (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), he should sprinkle (water) with a water-pot around the house or the resting-place on the inside, with the next Yagus (II, 15, 22) three times from left to right; then he should serve cakes, flour, and boiled rice to the Brâhmanas.

Patala 7, Section 18.

1. When a boy is attacked by the dog-demon (i.e. epilepsy), (the father or another performer of the ceremony), having devoted himself to austerities

(such as fasting), covers him with a net. Then he causes a gong to be beaten or a bell to be rung; takes (the boy) by another way than the door into the gambling-hall, raises (the earth in the middle of the hall) at the place in which they gamble, sprinkles it (with water), casts the dice, lays (the boy) on his back on the dice, and besprinkles him with his joined hands with curds and salt, with the next (eleven) (formulas, II, 16, 1-11), in the morning, at noon, and at night.

2. Then he will get well.

3. Over a boy who suffers from the 'Saṅkha' disease, (the father, &c.) having devoted himself to austerities, should recite the next two (verses, II, 16, 12, 13), and should pour (water) on his head with a water-pot with the next (verse, II, 16, 14), in the morning, at noon, and at night.

4. Then he will get well.

5. On the day of the full moon of (the month) Śrāvāna after sunset a Sthalipāka (is offered).

6. After the ceremonies down to the Āgyabhāga oblations have been performed in the same way as at the fortnightly sacrifices, he sacrifices of the Sthalipāka, and with each of the next (formulas, II, 16, 15-17) he offers with his joined hands Kim-suka flowers.

7. With the next (three) verses (II, 17, 1-3) (he offers) pieces of Āragvadha wood (Cathartocarpus fistula);

3. 'Saṅkhin is a person attacked by such a disease that he utters cries like the sound of a conch trumpet (saṅkha).’ Haradatta.

5. Here follows a description of the Sarpabali.

8. Then the Āgya oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras, II, 17, 4-7).
9. Then he enters upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations.
10. Having performed (the rites) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), he silently takes the objects required (for the rites which he is going to perform), goes out in an easterly or northerly direction, prepares a raised surface, draws on it three lines directed towards the east and three towards the north, pours water on the (lines), and lays (an offering of) flour (for the serpents) on them, with the next (formula, II, 17, 8).
11. Silently (he lays down) unground (?) grain, roasted grain, collyrium, ointment, (the fragrant substance called) Sthagara, and Uṣiras root.
12. With the next (formulas, II, 17, 9-26) he should worship (the serpents), should sprinkle water round (the oblations), should return (to his house) silently without looking back, should sprinkle (water) with a water-pot from left to right, thrice around the house or the resting-place on the inside, with the two verses, 'Beat away, O white one, with thy foot' (II, 17, 27, 28), and should offer food to the Brāhmaṇas.

Patala 7, Section 19.

1. The unground grain (which is left over, see above, VII, 18, 11) they give to the boys to eat.
2. Let him repeat in the same way this Bali-offering of whatever food he has got or of flour, from that day to full moon of (the month) Mārgasīrsha.
3. On the day of the full moon of Mārgasirṣha after sunset a Sthālipāka (is offered as above, VII, 18, 5).

4. In the Mantra for the Bali-offering he changes (the word 'I shall offer' into) 'I have offered.'

5. Then he does not offer (the Bali) any longer.

6. (Now follows) the Āgrayaṇa sacrifice (or partaking of the first-fruits) of one who has not set up the (Srauta) fires.

7. He prepares a Sthālipāka of the fresh fruits, sacrifices to the deities of the (Srauta) Āgrayaṇa sacrifice with (Agni) Svishtakṛt as the fourth, fills his mouth with grains, swallows them, sips water, forms a lump of the boiled (sacrificial) food, and throws it up with the next Yagus (II, 18, 1) to the summit of the house.

8. (Now follows) the 'redescent' in the winter.

9. With the next Yagus (II, 18, 2) they 'redescent' (or take as their sleeping-place a layer of straw instead of the high bedsteads which they have used before). With the next Yagus formulas (II, 18, 3–7) they lie down on a new layer (of straw) on their right sides,

10. The father to the south, the mother to the north (of him), and so the others, one after the other from the eldest to the youngest.

11. After he has arisen, he touches the earth with the next two (verses, II, 18, 8, 9).

12. In the same way the lying down, &c., is repeated thrice.

13. Having prepared a Sthālipāka for Īsāna and

8. Comp. the note on Sāṇkhāyana IV, 17, 1.

13. The description of the sūlagava sacrifice, which here follows, agrees in most points with the statements of Hiranyakesin II, 3, 8.
one for Kshetrapati, he goes out in an easterly or northerly direction, prepares a raised surface, (and then follow the ceremonies) beginning with the putting of wood on the fire.

14. To the west of the fire he builds two huts.

Patala 7, Section 20.

1. With the next (verse, II, 18, 10) he has the Īsāna led to the southern (hut),

2. With worldly words the 'bountiful goddess' to the northern (hut),

3. To the middle (between the two huts) the 'conqueror.'

4. He gives them water to drink in the same order in which they have been led (to their places), takes three portions of boiled rice (from the Sthālīpāka prepared for Īsāna), takes (these portions of rice) to the fire, makes (the three gods) touch them with the next (formulas, II, 18, 11-13), sacrifices of these portions, to each god of the portion which belongs to him, with the next (formulas, II, 18, 14-30), cuts off (Avadānas) from all (portions), and sacrifices with the next Yagus (II, 18, 31) to Agni Svishākrīt.

5. Having worshipped (the god Īsāna) with the next Yagus (II, 18, 32), he distributes with the next (formulas, II, 18, 33-39) leaves together with portions of boiled rice, two (leaves) with each (Yagus), then ten to the divine hosts (II, 18, 40), and ten to the (divine hosts) that follow (and are referred to in the next Yagus, II, 18, 41).

20, 1-3. Comp. Hiranyak. II, 3, 8, 2-4. Haradatta explains the Īsāna, the midhushī, and the gayanta as images of the three gods.
6. With the next (formulas, II, 18, 42-45) he does the same as before (i.e. he distributes two leaves with each Mantra).

7. Having formed a lump of boiled rice, he puts it into a basket of leaves, and with the next Yagus (II, 18, 46) hangs it up on a tree.

8. Here he should murmur the Rudra texts (Taitt. Samh. IV, 5),

9. Or the first and last (Anuvàka).

10. He places his cows around the fire so that the smoke (of the sacrifice) may reach them.

11. With his firmly shut fist full of Darbha grass he besprinkles (them) with scents; the bull first.

12. He should perform a sacrifice to Kshetrapati, without a fire, in the path used by his cows.

13. He has (the Kshetrapati) led to his place in the same way as the Ísâna (see above, Sûtra 1).

14. He puts (portions of boiled rice) into four or seven leaves, naming (the god).

15. Let him sacrifice quickly; the god has a strong digestion (?).

16. With the next two (verses, II, 18, 47-48) he does worship (to Kshetrapati).

17. The Sthâlipâka (belonging to Ísâna) he gives to the Brâhmaññas to eat;

18. That belonging to Kshetrapati his uterine relations eat,

19. Or as is the custom in their family.
Patala 8, Section 21.

1. The times for the monthly Srâddha are in the second fortnight (of the month), as they are stated.

2. Let him feed, without regard of (worldly) purposes, pure Brâhmanas, versed in the Mantras, who are not connected with himself by consanguinity or by their Gotra or by the Mantras (such as his teacher or his pupils), an odd number, at least three.

3. He makes oblations of the food (prepared for the Brâhmanas) with the next (verses, II, 19, 1-7);

4. Then the Âgya oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras, II, 19, 8-13).

5. Or invertedly (i.e. he offers Âgya with the verses referred to in Sûtra 3, and food with those referred to in Sûtra 4).

6. Let him touch the whole (food) with the next (formulas, II, 19, 14-16).

7. Or the (single) prepared (portions of food destined) for the single Brâhmanas.

8. Having caused them with the next (formula, II, 20, 1) to touch (the food, he gives it to them to eat).

9. When they have eaten (and gone away), he goes after them, circumambulates them, turning his right side towards them, spreads out southward-pointed Darbha grass in two different layers, pours water on it with the next (formulas, II, 20, 2-7), distributes the Pändas, ending in the south, with the next (formulas, II, 20, 8-13), pours out water as before with the next (formulas, 14-19), worships (the ancestors) with the next (formulas, II, 20, 20–23), sprinkles with the next (verse, 24) water three times from right to left round (the Pindas) with a water-pot, besprinkles the vessels, which are turned upside down, repeating the next Yagus (25) at least three times without taking breath, sets up the vessels two by two, cuts off (Avadânas) from all (portions of food), and eats of the remains at least one morsel with the next Yagus (26).

10. Of the dark fortnight that follows after the full moon of Mâgha, the eighth day falls under (the constellation of) Gymphâ: this day is called Ekâsh/akâ.

11. In the evening before that day (he performs) the preparatory ceremony.

12. He bakes a cake of four cups (of rice).

13. (The cake is prepared) in eight dishes (like a Purodâsa), according to some (teachers).

Patala 8, Section 22.

1. After the ceremonies down to the Ågyabhâga oblations have been performed in the same way as at the fortnightly sacrifices, he makes with his joined hands oblations of the cake with the next (verse, II, 20, 27).

2. The rest (of the cake) he makes ready, divides (it) into eight parts and offers it to the Brâhma/nas.

12, 13. Comp. Hiranyak. II, 5, 14, 3 seq.
22, 1. Comp. above, VII, 18, 6.
2. I believe that seshâ means the rest of the cake. The word ‘siddha/’ possibly refers to such preparations of the food as are indicated in Hiranyak. II, 5, 14, 7. Haradatta understands seshâ as the rest of the rites (tantrasya seshâ): ‘The rest of the rites is
3. On the following day he touches a cow with a Darbha blade, with the words, ‘I touch thee agreeable to the Fathers.’

4. Having silently offered five Agya oblations, and having cooked the omentum of the (cow), and performed the ‘spreading under’ and the sprinkling over (of Agya), he sacrifices (the omentum) with the next (verse, II, 20, 28) with a Palâsa leaf from the middle or the end (of the stalk).

5. (He sacrifices) boiled rice together with the meat (of the cow) with the next (verses, II, 20, 29–35),

6. Food prepared of meal with the next (verse, II, 21, 1),

7. Then the Agya oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras, II, 21, 2–9).

8. (The rites) from the Svishtakrít down to the offering of the Pindas are the same (as at the Srâddha).

9. Some (teachers) prescribe the Pindâ offering for the day after the Ashtakâ.

10. Here (follows) another (way for celebrating the Ashtakâ sacrifice). He sacrifices curds with his joined hands in the same way as the cake.

11. Having left over from the meat of the (cow, see above, 3, 4) as much as is required, on the day after (the Ashtakâ) (he performs) the rite of the Anvashâkâ.

12. This rite has been explained in the description of the monthly Srâddha.

13. If he goes out in order to beg for something, let him murmur the next (Mantras, II, 21, 10-16) and then state his desire.

14. If he has obtained a chariot, he has the horses put to it, lets it face the east, and touches with the next (verse, II, 21, 17) the two wheels of the chariot or the two side-pieces.

15. With the next Yagus (II, 21, 18) he should mount, and drive with the next (verse, II, 21, 19) towards the east or north, and should then drive off on his business.

16. Let him mount a horse with the next (formulas, II, 21, 20-30),

17. An elephant with the next (formula, II, 21, 31).

18. If any harm is done him by these two (beasts), let him touch the earth as indicated above.

19. If he is going to a dispute, he takes the parasol and the staff in his left hand.

Patala 8, Section 23.

1. Having sacrificed, with his right hand, a fist full of chaff with the next (verse, II, 21, 32), he should go away and murmur the next (verse, 33).

2. Over an angry person let him recite the two next (formulas, II, 22, 1. 2); then his anger will be appeased.

3. One who wishes that his wife should not be touched by other men, should have big living centipedes ground to powder, and should insert (that powder) with the next (formula, II, 22, 3), while she is sleeping, into her secret parts.

4. For success (in the generation of children)

let him wash (his wife) with the urine of a red-brown cow.

5. For success (in trade) let him sacrifice with the next (verse—II, 22, 4—some portion) from the articles of trade which he has in his house.

6. If he wishes that somebody be not estranged from him, let him pour his own urine into the horn of a living animal, and sprinkle (it) with the next two (verses, II, 22, 5, 6) three times from right to left around (the person) while he is sleeping.

7. In a path which servants or labourers use to run away, he should put plates (used for protecting the hands when holding a hot sacrificial pan) on (a fire), and should offer the oblations (indicated by the) next (Mantras, II, 22, 7–10).

8. If a fruit falls on him from a tree, or a bird befouls him, or a drop of water falls on him when no rain is expected, he should wipe that off with the next (Mantras, II, 22, 11–13), according to the characteristics (contained in these Mantras).

9. If a post of his house puts forth shoots, or if honey is made in his house (by bees), or if the footprint of a dove is seen on the hearth, or if diseases arise in his household, or in the case of other miracles or prodigies, let him perform in the new-moon night, at dead of night, at a place where he does not hear the noise of water, the rites from the putting (of wood) on the fire down to the Âgya-bhâga oblations, and let him offer the oblations (indicated in the) next (Mantras, II, 22, 14–23), and enter upon the performance of the Gaya and following oblations.

10. Having performed (the ceremonies) down to the sprinkling (of water) round (the fire), he puts up towards the south with the next (verse, II, 22, 24) a stone as a barrier for those among whom a death has occurred.

End of the Āpastambīya-Grīhyasūtra.

ĀPASTAMBA'S
YAGÑA-PARIBHĀŠHĀ-SŪTRAS.
INTRODUCTION.

As Professor Oldenberg was unable to find any other texts connected with the Grīhya-sūtras, I have tried to bring this volume to its proper size by adding a translation of Āpastamba's Yagñā-Paribhāṣā-sūtras. These Sūtras give some general information about the performance of sacrifices, and may prove useful to the students both of the Srauta and the Grīhya sacrifices. Paribhāṣā is defined as a general rule or definition applicable throughout a whole system, and more binding than any particular rule. How well this sense of paribhāṣā was understood in India, we may see from a passage in the Sisupalavadha XVI, 80:

Parītalā pramitāksharāpi sarvam vishayam prāptavatī gatā pratishthām na khalu pratihanyate kutaskīt paribhāsheva gariyasi yadagñā.

'Whose (the king's) command, though brief, having reached the whole kingdom round about and obtained authority, is never defeated, being of the highest weight, like a Paribhāṣā.'

These Paribhāṣās are a very characteristic invention of ancient Indian authors, particularly during the Sūtra period. We find them as early as the Ānukramanis, and even at that early time they had been elaborated with many purely technical contrivances. Thus we are told in the Index to the Rig-veda that, as a general rule, if no deity is mentioned in the index of the hymns, Indra must be supposed to be the deity addressed; when no metre is mentioned, the metre must be understood to be the Trishtubh; at the beginning of each Maudala the hymns must be taken to be addressed to Agni, till we come to hymns distinctly addressed to Indra. Now it is clear that in this case these Paribhāṣās or general instructions must have been laid down before the whole work was carried out. The same applies to other Paribhāshās, such as those of the metrical Sūtras, but I feel more doubtful as to the Paribhāshās in the grammatical Sūtras of Pāṇini. To judge from the Paribhāshenduṣekhara, it would seem that the Paribhāshā-сутras to Pāṇini’s grammar also had been settled before a single Sūtra of Pāṇini was composed, and yet it seems almost incredible that this gigantic web of Sūtras should have been woven on so complicated a warp. This question ought to be settled once for all, as it would throw considerable light on the workmanship of Pāṇini’s Sūtras, and there is no one better qualified to settle it for us than the learned editor of the Paribhāshenduṣekhara. It is different with our Paribhāshās. There is no necessity to suppose that they were worked out first, before the Sūtras were composed. They look more like useful generalisations than like indispensable preliminary instructions. They give us a general idea of the sacrifice, and inculcate rules that ought to be observed throughout. But I doubt whether they are as essential for enabling the priest to carry out the instructions of the Sūtras in performing a sacrifice as the grammatical paribhāshās are in carrying out the grammatical rules of Pāṇini.

The Āpastamba-сутras for which our Paribhāshās are intended are said to have comprised thirty Prānas (see Burnell, Catalogue, p. 19, and p. xxix in Professor Oldenberg’s Introduction). Burnell mentions that sometimes two Prānas, treating of the Paitrīmedhika rites, were counted as the thirty-first and thirty-second of the whole work. Of these thirty Prānas fifteen have been edited with Rudradatta’s commentary by Professor Garbe in the Bibliotheca Indica, 1882–1885. Rudradatta’s commentary does not seem to have extended beyond the fifteenth Prāṇa; some authorities, however, suppose that Haradatta, to whom commentaries on the later Prānas are ascribed, was only another name for Rudradatta. According to Kāundappā’s Prayogaratnamālā (see Burnell, Classified Index, I, p. 17 a), the Paribhāshā-сутras formed part of the twenty-fourth Prāṇa (katurvitme nataḥ prasne nyāyapra-varahautrakam). Here Nyāya in the sense of method, way, plan, seems to stand for Paribhāshā. Another name is Sāmānya-sūtra (see Burnell, Classified Index, p. 15 b, where it is mentioned as § 4 of Prasna XXIV). Kaundappākārya himself, who is said to have been minister of Virabhūpati, the son of the famous king Bukka of Vīgāyanagara, begins his work with a paribhāshā-parikkheda.

I published a German translation of these Sūtras with notes many years ago, in the Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, 1855. I here give the same translation, but I have shortened the notes and compared the translation once more with the MSS.

The principal MSS. used are MS. I. O. L. 1676 b, 259, and 1127. MS. 1676 b, now 308, is described in Professor Eggeling's Catalogue of the Sanskrit MSS. in the Library of the India Office, vol. i, p. 58 b. It is written in Devanāgari, contains thirty leaves, and is called at the end iti Srikapardinābhāshye uddhāritasāram paribhāshāpatalam. MS. 259, now 309, contains twenty-seven leaves in Devanāgari, and is called at the end iti Kapardisvāmi-bhāshye paribhāshāpatalam. MS. 1127, now 307, in Devanāgari, is dated Samvat 1691, Sāka 1556, and contains on 220 leaves portions of Tālavrīndanivāsin's manual, the Āpastambasūtra-prayoga-vṛttri, and on pp. 75 a–116 a Kapardisvāmin's commentary on Āpastamba's Paribhāshāpatalam. Burnell mentions another copy of this work in his Classified Index, I, p. 17 b, and he states (Catalogue, p. 24) that, according to tradition, the author was a native of Southern India, called Anappillai, and that tālavṛinda or tālavrinta is a translation of the Tamil panai-kkātu, a very common name for villages among palmyra trees (panai = palmyra, kātu = forest).

While preparing my new translation for the Press, I received a printed edition of the text and commentary published by Śrī Satyavrataśāmasramibhattākārya in his valuable Journal, the Uṣā, beginning in the eighth fasciculus. He gives also a Bengali translation, and some commentaries in the same language, which have proved useful in certain difficult passages.
ÂPASTAMBA'S
YAGÑA-PARIBHÂSHÂ-SÛTRAS.

GENERAL RULES OF THE SACRIFICE.

Sûtra I.
We shall explain the sacrifice.

Commentary.
Yagñâ, sacrifice, is an act by which we surrender something for the sake of the gods. Such an act must rest on a sacred authority (âgama), and serve for man's salvation (sreyo•rtha). The nature of the gift is of less importance. It may be purodâsa, cake; karu, pulse; sámnâyya, mixed milk; pa•stu, an animal; soma, the juice of the Soma-plant, &c.; nay, the smallest offerings of butter, flour, and milk may serve for the purpose of a sacrifice.

Yagñâ, yâga, yagana, and ishti are considered as synonyms.

Sûtra II.
The sacrifice is for the three colours or castes (varña), for Brâhma•nas and Râganyas, also for the Vaisya.

Commentary.
Though the sacrifice is meant for the three castes, here called varña, i.e. colour, the third caste, that of the Vaisya or citizen, is mentioned by itself, while the two castes, the Brâhma•nas and Râganyas (the Kshatriyas or nobles), are mentioned together. This is done because there are certain sacrifices (bahuyagamâna), performed by Brâhma•nas and Râganyas together, in which Vaisyas take no part. In the Sânkhâyana-sûtras, I, 1, 3, also the Vaisya is mentioned by himself. In Kātyāyana's Sūtras, however, no such distinction is made, and we read, I, 6, Brāhmaṇa-rāganya-vaiṣyānām srutak. Women, if properly married, are allowed to participate in sacrifices, but no one is allowed to be accompanied by a Sūdra woman, even though she be his wife. Properly a Brāhmaṇa should marry a wife of his own caste only. A Kshatriya may marry a woman of his own or of the Brāhmaṇa caste. A Vaisya's proper wife should be taken from his own caste. See, however, Manu III, 12 seq.

The four castes, with the Sūdra as the fourth, are mentioned once in the Rig-veda, X, 90, 12. The opposition between Āryas and Sūdras occurs in the Atharva-veda, XIX, 62, &c., and in most of the Brāhmaṇas. In the Satapatha Brāhmaṇa we read of the four castes, Brāhmaṇa, Rāganya, Vaiṣya, and Sūdra, and we are told that none of them vomits the Soma. Kātyāyana excludes from the sacrifice the āṅghārīna, cripple, shanda, eunuch, and all asratriyas, persons ignorant of the Veda, which would bar, of course, the whole class of the Sūdras, but they are also specially excluded. Concessions, however, had to be made at an early time, for instance, in the case of the Rathakāra, who is admitted to the Agnyādhanā, &c. This name means chariot-maker, but Ápadeva, in his Mimāmsā-nyāya-prakāsa, remarks that, though rathakāra means a chariot-maker etymologically, it should be taken here as the name of a clan, namely that of the Saudhanvanas (MS. Mill 46, p. 13b). Deva, in his commentary on the Kātyāyana-sūtras, makes the same remark. See also Weber, Ind. Stud. X, 12 seq. These Saudhanvanas, often identified with the Rābhus, are evidently the followers of Brību, mentioned RV. VI, 45, 31; 33, and wrongly called Brīdhu in Manu X, 107; see M. M., Hist. of A. S. L., p. 494. In the Sāṅkhāyana-Srauta-sūtras, XVI, 11, 11 (ed. Hillebrandt), he is rightly called Brību. In later times Rathakāra is the name of a caste, and its members are supposed to be the offspring of a marriage between a Māhishya and a Karaṇī. A Māhishya is the son of a Kshatriya and a Vaiṣyā, a Karāṇī the daughter of a Vaiśya and a Sudrā. Sudhanvan also is used in Manu, X, 23, as the name of a caste, namely the offspring of fallen (vrātya) Vaiśyas.

Another exception is made in favour of a Nīshāda-sthapatī, a Nīshāda chieftain. If it meant a chieftain of Nīshādas, it might be meant for a Kshatriya who happens to be a chieftain of Nīshādas. Here it is meant for a chieftain who is himself a Nīshāda, a native settler. He is admitted to the Gavedhuka sacrifice.

Again, although, as a rule, the sacrificer must have finished his study of the Veda and be married, a sacrifice is mentioned which a Brahmakārīn, a student, may perform. The case thus provided for is, yo brahmakārī striyam upeyāt, sa gardabham pasum ālabheta. As these sacrificers are not upanīta, and therefore without the sacred fires, their sacrifices have to be performed with ordinary fires, and the sacrificial offerings, the purodāsas, are not cooked in kapālas, jars, but on the earth, while the avadānas (cuttings), heart, tongue, &c., are sacrificed in water, and not in fire. The Nīshāda chieftain has to learn the necessary Vedic verses by heart, without having passed through a regular course of Vedic study. The same applies to women, who have to recite certain verses during the sacrifice.

That certain women are admitted to the sacrifice, is distinctly stated by Kātyāyana, I, 1, 7, stri kāvīseshāt.

Sūtra III.

The sacrifice is prescribed by the three Vedas.

Commentary.

In order to know the whole of the sacrifice, one Veda is not sufficient, still less one sākhā (recension) only. The sacrifice is conceived as a whole, and its members (aṅgas) are described in different parts of the three Vedas.

Sūtra IV.

By the Rig-veda, the Yagur-veda, the Sāma-veda (is the sacrifice prescribed).
Sūtra V.
The Darsa-pūrṇamāsasau, the new and full-moon sacrifices, are prescribed by the Rig-veda and the Yaġur-veda.

Sūtra VI.
The Agnihoṭra is prescribed by the Yaģur-veda.

Sūtra VII.
The Agnishtoma is prescribed by all.

Commentary.
By saying all, the Atharva-veda is supposed to be included, at least according to one commentator.
The Agnishtoma requires sixteen priests, the Paśu sacrifices six, the Kāturmāsyaśas five, the Darsa-pūrṇamāsas four.

Sūtra VIII.
With the Rig-veda and Sāma-veda the performance takes place with a loud voice (uḥkāiḥ).

Commentary.
Even lines of the Yaģur-veda, if they are contained in the Rig-veda and Sāma-veda, would have to be pronounced with a loud voice. Certain mantras, however, are excepted, viz. the gapa, abhimantrana, and anumantrana-mantras.

Sūtra IX.
With the Yaģur-veda the performance takes place by murmuring (upāmsu).

Commentary.
This murmuring, upāmsu, is described as a mere opus operatum, the words being repeated without voice and without thought. One may see the movements of the vocal organs in murmuring, but one should not hear them at a distance. If verses from the Rig-veda or Sāma-veda occur in the Yagur-veda, they also have to be murmured. See Kâty. I, 3, 10.

Sûtra X.

With the exception of addresses, replies, choosing of priests (pravara), dialogues, and commands.

Commentary.

As all these are meant to be understood by others, they have therefore to be pronounced in a loud voice. The address (âsruta) is om srâvaya; the reply (pratyâsruta) is astu sraushat\(^1\); the choosing of priests (pravara) is agnir devo hotâ; a dialogue (samvâda) is brahman prokshishyâmi, om proksha; a command (sampresha) is prokshanir âsâdaya.

Sûtra XI.

In the Sâmîdhêni hymns the recitation is to be between (the high and the low tone).

Commentary.

The Sâmîdhêni hymns are the hymns used for lighting the fire. One commentator explains antarâ, between, as between high tone (krûsha\(\text{t}a\)) and the murmuring (upâmsu). Another distinguishes three high tones, the krûsha\(\text{t}a\) (also called tára or kraûţka), the madhyama, and the mandra, and assigns the madhyama to the Sâmîdhêni hymns. The mandra notes come from the chest, the madhyama notes from the throat, the uttama notes from the head.

Sûtra XII.

Before the Âgyabhâgas (such as the Âgya-portions at the Darsa-pûramâsa), and at the morning Savana (oblation of Soma), the recitation is to be with the soft (mandra) voice.

---

\(^1\) See Hillebrandt, Das Altind. Neu- und Vollmondsofier, p. 94.
Commentary.

The pronunciation is loud, ukkaiḥ, but soft, mandra. Satyavrata restricts this rule to the passages mentioned in Sūtra X. He also treats the second part of Sūtras XII, XIII, and XIV as separate Sūtras.

Sūtra XIII.

Before the Svishākṛiti (at the Darsa-pūrṇa-māsa) sacrifice, and at the midday Savana, the recitation is to be with the middle voice.

Sūtra XIV.

In the remainder and at the third Savana with the sharp (krushṭa) voice.

Commentary.

The remainder refers to the Darsa-pūrṇa-māsa sacrifice, the three Savanas to the Soma sacrifice. Satyavrata takes all these rules as referring to the cases mentioned in Sūtra X.

Sūtra XV.

The movement of the voice is the same.

Commentary.

In the three cases mentioned before, the voice moves quickly, when the words are to be pronounced high; slowly, when low; and measuredly, when neither loud nor low.

Sūtra XVI.

The Hotṛi-priest performs with the Ṛg-veda.

Sūtra XVII.

The Udgāṭri-priest with the Sāma-veda.

---

1 See on this, Ṛg-veda Prātiśākhya 13, 17; Āsval. I, 5, 27; Sāṅkh. I, 14; Hillebrandt, l. c. p. 103.
Sûtra XVIII.
The Adhvaryu-priest with the Yagur-veda.

Sûtra XIX.
The Brahma-priest with all.

Commentary.
"With all" means with the three Vedas, because the Brahma-priest, or superintendent of the whole sacrifice, must be acquainted with the three Vedas. Others would include the Atharva-veda.

Sûtra XX.
When it is expressly said, or when it is rendered impossible, another priest also may act.

Commentary.
Vipratischedha is explained by asambhava and asakti.

Sûtra XXI.
The priestly office (ārtvyāya) belongs to the Brāhmaṇas.

Commentary.
Sacrifices may be performed for Kshatriyas, Vaisyas, and, in certain cases, even for others, but never by any but Brāhmaṇas. The reason given for this is curious,—because Brāhmaṇas only are able to eat the remains of a sacrifice. See Satap. Br. II, 3, 1, 39; Kātyāyana IV, 14, 11; also I, 2, 8, com.

Sûtra XXII.
For all sacrifices the fires are laid once.

Commentary.
The sacrificial fires have to be arranged for the first time by a peculiar ceremony, called the Agnyadhâna. They are generally three (Treta), the Gârhapatyâ, the father; the Dakshîna, the son; and the Áhavaniya, the grandson. The first laying of the Gârhapatyâ fire-altar takes place in spring for a Brâhma, in summer for a Râganya, in winter for a Vaisya.

Sûtra XXIII.

If it is said, guhoti, 'he sacrifices,' it should be known that sarpir âgya, melted butter, is meant.

Commentary.

Sarpis is here taken as an adjective, running; yad asarpat tat sarpir abhavat. Ágya is explained as navanitavikâradravyagâtiyavâkanak sabdâh, i.e. a word signifying any kind of substance made of fresh butter.

In the Aitareya-Brâhma, I, 3, we read ágyam vai devânâm surabhi, ghrîtam manushyânâm, ayutam pîtrînâm, navanitam garbhânâm, 'Ágya is sweet or fragrant to the gods, ghrîta to men, ayuta to the manes, navanîta to children.' Here the commentator explains that ágya is butter, when melted (vilinam sarpis), ghrîta, when hardened. Ayuta, sometimes called astu, is butter, when slightly melted, nishpakva, when thoroughly melted. According to Kâtyâyana I, 8, 37, ágya is of different kinds. It may be simple ghrîta, which, as a rule, should be made of the milk of cows. But in the absence of ágya, the milk of buffaloes (mâhisha), or oil (taila), or sesam-oil (gârtila), or linseed oil (atasisneha), &c., may be taken.

Sûtra XXIV.

If it is said, guhoti, it should be known that the Adhvaryu is meant as performer.

Commentary.

Though there is a man who offers the sacrifice, yet the actual homa, the throwing of butter &c. into the fire, has to be performed by the Adhvaryu priest.
Sūtra XXV.
Likewise, the spoon (guhû) as the vessel.

Commentary.
Guhû, the spoon, is so called because it is used for pouring out (guhoti, homa).

Sūtra XXVI.
If the guhû has been elsewhere employed, let it be done with a ladle (sruva).

Commentary.
The guhû is a sruva, a spoon, the sruva, a ladle.

Sūtra XXVII.
The offering is made in the Āhavaniya fire.

Sūtra XXVIII.
The sacrificial vessels are kept from the first laying of the fires (ādhāna) for the whole life.

Commentary.
All sacrificial vessels and instruments are to be kept, and most of them are burnt with the sacrificer at his death.

Sūtra XXIX.
At every sacrifice these vessels are to be purified.

Sūtra XXX.
The rule for the sacrifice are the Mantras and Brāhmaṇas.

Sūtra XXXI.
The name Veda belongs both to the Mantras and Brāhmaṇas.
Sūtra XXXII.

The Brāhmaṇas are the precepts for the sacrifice.

Sūtra XXXIII.

The rest of the Brāhmaṇa, that which does not contain precepts, consists of explanations, i.e. reproof, praise, stories, and traditions.

Commentary.

It is difficult to find words corresponding to technical terms in Sanskrit. Arthavāda, which I have translated by explanation, means not only the telling of the meaning, but likewise the telling of the object; parakṛiti, story, means literally the action of another; purākalpa, traditions, means the former state. The difference between the two is stated to be that parakṛiti refers to the act of one person, purākalpa to that of several. This subject is fully treated in the Pūrva-mimāmsā. Satyavrata begins a new Sūtra with 'reproof' (nindā).

Sūtra XXXIV.

All the rest are Mantras.

Sūtra XXXV.

But passages which are not handed down, are not to be classed as Mantras, as, for instance, the pravara, the words used in choosing priests, divine or human; úha, substitution of one word for another; and nāmadheya-grahana, the mentioning of the names of particular sacrificers.

Commentary.

The reason why such passages are not to be treated as Mantras is that they should not be subject to some of the preceding rules, as, for instance, the murmuring, enjoined in Sūtra IX. Those passages naturally vary in each sacrifice. With regard to the names a distinction is made between the gárhyam náma, the domestic name of a person, such as Yagyásarman, and the astrological name, such as Rauhiṇa, derived from the star Rohini.

Sūtra XXXVI.

Likewise the sound of a carriage and the sound of a drum.

Commentary.

These sounds, though serving for the sacrifice, are not to be considered as liable to the rules given for the recitation of Mantras.

Sūtra XXXVII.

The prohibition of reciting Mantras in the Svâdhyâya does not apply to the sacrifice, because there is then a different object.

Commentary.

Svâdhyâya, i.e. self-reading, is the name given to the study of the Veda, both in first learning and in afterwards repeating it. This study is under several restrictions, but these restrictions cease when the Veda is used for sacrificial purposes.

Sūtra XXXVIII.

Sacrificial acts are accompanied by one Mantra.

Commentary.

If it is said that the priest cuts the plants with fourteen verses, that means that there are fourteen plants to be cut and that one verse is used for each plant.

Sūtra XXXIX.

This applies also to sacrificial acts which have a number and are to be carried out by separate (repeated) acts.
Commentary.

If a rule is given, such as triḥ ṭrokiṣṭati, he sprinkles thrice, the mantra which accompanies the act, is recited once only. Again in the case of acts that require repetitions, such as rubbing, pounding, &c., the hymns are recited once only.

Sūtra XL.

The same applies to rubbing, sleeping, crossing a river, down-pours of rain, the conjuring of unlucky omens, unless they happened some time ago.

Commentary.

If several members of the body are to be rubbed, the verses required for the purpose are recited once only. A prayer is enjoined if one wakes during the night. If one wakes more than once that prayer is not to be repeated. In crossing a river the necessary verse is not to be repeated at every wave, nor during a down-pour, at every drop of rain. If some unlucky sight has to be conjured, the conjuring verse is spoken once and not repeated, unless some time has elapsed and a new unlucky sight presents itself.

Sūtra XLI.

In case of a journey, however, one hymn is used till the object (of the journey) has been accomplished.

Commentary.

I read prayān eva tu-ā-arthanivṛttēḥ. Another reading is arthanivṛttēḥ.

Sūtra XLII.

It is the same also with regard to acts which do not produce an immediate effect.

Commentary.

The commentators distinguish between acts which produce a visible effect, such as pounding or sprinkling, and acts which do not, such as addressing, approaching, looking. The latter are called asamnipātin. Thus when the stones used for the preparation of Soma are addressed, the hymn which is used for addressing them, is not repeated for each single stone, the same as in Śūtra XL. Śūtras XLI and XLII are sometimes joined.

ŚŪTRA XLIII.

Repetition takes place in the case of the Havishkrīt, Adhrigu, Puronuvākyā, and Manotā hymns, (because they have to be used) at different times.

Commentary.

Havishkrīt-adhrigu-puronuvākyā-manotāṁ is to be taken as a Dvandva compound.

The Havishkrīt hymn is an invocation when the havis is made. The Adhrigu hymn is ‘Daivyāḥ samitāraḥ,’ &c. The Puronuvākyā hymn is that which precedes the Vāgyā, immediately after the Sampraisha. The Manotā hymn is ‘Tvam hy agne prathamo manotā,’ &c. These hymns are to be repeated, if the act which they accompany has to be repeated after a certain interval.

ŚŪTRA XLIV.

When it is expressly stated, one sacrificial act may be accompanied by many hymns.

Commentary.

Thus we read, ‘He takes the Abhri, the hoe, with four Mantras.’

ŚŪTRA XLV.

One ought to let the beginnings of a sacrificial act coincide with the end of the Mantras.
Commentary.

The mantra which indicates the nature and purpose of a sacrificial act should come first, and as soon as it has been finished the act should follow. See Kâty. I, 3, 5.

Sûtra XLVI.

In the case of the âghâra, sprinkling of clarified butter, and of dhârá, pouring out of Soma, the beginning of the mantra and the act takes place at the same time.

Sûtra XLVII.

Mantras are indicated by their first words.

Commentary.

These first words are often called Pratikas, and rules are given in Âsvalâyana's Srauta-sûtras I, 1, 17–19, as to the number of words that should form such a pratika, if it is meant for one verse, for three verses, or for a whole hymn. According to Âsvalâyana, if one foot is quoted, it is meant for a verse; if an imperfect foot of an initial verse is quoted, it is meant for a whole hymn; if more than a foot is quoted, it is meant for three verses.

Sûtra XLVIII.

One should know that with the beginning of a following mantra, the former mantra is finished.

Sûtra XLIX.

In the case of Hotrâ and Yâgamâna-mantras, an aggregation takes place.

Commentary.

Hotrâs are mantras recited by the Hotri-priest, Yâgamânâs are mantras recited by the sacrificer himself. They are hymns which accompany, but do not enjoin any sacrificial act.
Sûtra L.

In the case of the Yāgyās and Anuvākyās this (the aggregation) is optional.

Commentary.

The Yāgyā is explained by prayakṣhāti yāgyayā, the Anuvākyā by āhvayaty anuvākyayā. Sometimes more than one are mentioned, but in that case the priest is free to do as he likes. According to the same principle, when we read that one should sacrifice with rice or with barley, that means that rice should be used after the rice-harvest, barley after the barley-harvest, and not that rice and barley should be used at the same time.

Sûtra LI.

It is the same with numbers.

Commentary.

If we read that, as in the case of fees to be given to priests, two, seven, eleven, twelve, twenty-one, sixty, or a hundred, this means that either one or the other, not that all should be given at the same time.

Sûtra LII.

But accumulation is meant in the buying (of Soma), in the redemption, and in initiation.

Commentary.

When it is said that Soma is bought for a goat, gold, &c., that it is re-bought from the priests by means of a fee, or that at the time of the Dikṣā, the purification and initiation of a sacrificer, clothes, gold, grain, &c., should be given, these are cases not of aut-aut but of et-et.

The Soma-plant, which is supposed to be bought from northern barbarians, is botanically described in an Ayurvedic extract, quoted in the Dhūrtasvāmi-bhāshyaṇikā (MS. E. I. H. 531, p. 3b), as
The creeper called Soma is dark, sour, without leaves, milky, fleshy on the surface, producing phlegm and vomiting, food for goats.'

This passage, quoted from some Ayur-vedic text, is still the only one which gives an approximative description of the Soma-plant. Dr. Hooker says that the predicates ‘sour and milky’ point to Sarcostemma, but the question is not decided yet. For further information see George Watt, The Soma Plant, an extract from the third volume of the Dictionary of Economic Products of India, and Hillebrandt, Vedische Mythologie, pp. 14 seq.

Sūtra LIII.

If one has performed an offering to Rudra, to the Rākshasas, to Nirvīti, or to the Pitris, if one has cut or broken or thrown away anything, or rubbed oneself, &c., one should touch water.

Commentary.

The touching of water is for the sake of purification. Nirasana is left out in some MSS. The ka, inserted after abhimārṣanāṇī, is explained, as usual, as including other acts also, corresponding to our etc.

Sūtra LIV.

All priestly performances take place on the northern side of the Vihāra.

Commentary.

Uttarata-upakāraḥ has to be taken as a compound. Vihāra is explained as vihriyante-gnayaḥ pātrāni ka yasmin dēse, i.e. the sacrificial ground. Upakāra is explained as adhvaryvādinām samkaraḥ, and this samkara, according to Kātyāyana I, 3, 42, is the path between the Kātvāla and Utkara, the Utkara being on the west, the pravītās on the east of the Vihāra. Kātyāyana I, 8, 26, expresses the same rule by uttarata-upakāro yagūḥaḥ, the vihāra being the place where the yagūḥa takes place.
Sūtra LV.

The priest should never turn away from the fire, i.e. should never turn his back on the altar.

Sūtra LVI.

Nor from the Vihāra.

Sūtra LVII.

Sacrificial utensils should be turned inside, the performers being outside.

Commentary.

The meaning is that the priest should carry such things as spoons, vessels, &c., holding them towards the altar. The sacrificer and his wife should likewise be on the inside of the priest, and the priests should take precedence sideways according to their rank.

Sūtra LVIII.

After a sacrificial object has been hallowed by a Mantra, the priest should not toss it about.

Sūtra LIX.

Sacrificial acts intended for the gods, should be performed by the priest towards the east or towards the north, after he has placed the Brahmanic cord over the left and under the right arm (yagñopavi-tin), and turning towards the right.

Sūtra LX.

Sacrificial acts intended for the Fathers should be performed by the priest towards the south, after he has placed the Brahmanic cord over the right and under the left arm (prādīnāvītin), and turning towards the left.

Sūtra LXI.

Sūtra LXII.

Ropes which are not joined (single ropes), should be tied by the priest from left to right.

Commentary.

The exact process here intended is not quite clear. The ropes seem to have been made of vegetable fibres. See Kāty. I, 3, 15-17.

Sūtra LXIII.

Let a man sacrifice with the Amāvāsyā sacrifice at the time of the Amāvāsyā, new moon.

Commentary.

A mā-vāsyā is the dwelling together, i.e. the conjunction, of sun and moon, an astronomical expression which was adopted in the common language of the people at a very early time. It does not occur, however, in the Rig-veda. In our Sūtra amāvāsyā is used in the sense both of new moon and new-moon sacrifice.

Sūtra LXIV.

And let a man sacrifice with the Paurṇamāsyā sacrifice at the time of the Paurṇamāśi, full moon, thus it is said.

Commentary.

Here the full moon is called paurṇamāśi, the sacrifice paurṇamāsyā. Satyavrata joins the two Sūtras in one, and leaves out yageteti, which may have belonged to the commentary.
Sūtra LXV.

Let a man observe that full-moon day as a day of abstinence on which the moon comes out full before.

Commentary.

The full moon (paurūṇamāṣi) is really the very moment on which the moon is full and therefore begins to decrease. That moment on which sun and moon are, as the Hindus said, at the greatest distance from each other, is called the parva-sandhi, the juncture of the two phases of the moon. Thus the name of paurūṇamāṣi belongs to the last day of the one and to the first day (pratipad) of the other phase, and both days might be called paurūṇamāṣi. If therefore the moon is full on the afternoon, the evening, or the twilight of one day, that day should be observed as a fast-day, and the next day should be the day of sacrifice.

The meaning of purastād, which I have translated by before, is doubtful. One commentator says it has no object, and should be dropped, purastād ity etat padam asmin sūtra idānim anvayam nalaabhate prayoganābhāvāt. Purastād, before, may, however, mean before the second day, on which the real sacrifice takes place, and the commentator mentions purastāt-paurṇamāṣi as a name of the katurdasi-yukta, i.e. the full moon beginning on the fourteenth day. The same kind of full moon is also called Anumati, Pūrvā-paurṇamāṣi, and Sandhyā-paurṇamāṣi, while that which takes place on the pratipad, the first day of the lunar phase, is called Rākā, Uttarā-paurṇamāṣi, Astamitoditā, and Svabh-pūritā.

Corresponding to these two kinds of Paurṇamāṣi there are also two kinds of Amāvāsyā. That which falls on the fourteenth day is called Pūrvā-amāvāsyā, or Sīnivālī, the ēnu kaḻ vēa; that which falls on the pratipad, the first day of the new phase, is called Kuhū, Uttarā-amāvāsyā, Svoyuktā. See also Ait.-Brāhm. II, 4; Nir. XI, 31-32.
Sūtra LXVI.

Or the day when one says, To-morrow it will be full.

Commentary.

In that case the day before should be observed as a day of abstinence. The real full moon would then take place in the fore-noon, pūrvāhūne, of the next day. Abstinence, upavāsa, consists in abstaining from meat and from maithuna, in shaving beard and head, cutting the nails, and, what seems a curious provision, in speaking the truth. See Kāty.-Srāuta-sūtras II, 1, 8–12.

Sūtra LXVII.

The Vāgasaṇeyins mention a third, the Kharvikā full moon.

Commentary.

Kharva means small. If one divides the night into twelve parts, and if in a portion of the twelfth part the greatest distance of sun and moon takes place, then the full moon is called kharvikā, also kṣiṃnā. Or, if on the sixteenth day, the full moon takes place before noon, that also is called kharvikā paurnamāsi. In that case abstinence or fasting takes place on the sixteenth day (tasyāṃ shodasehany upavāsaḥ). Both paurnamāsis are also called sadyaskālā.

Sūtra LXVIII.

Let a man observe that new-moon day (amāvāsyā) as a day of abstinence, on which the moon is not seen.

Commentary.

This Sūtra has to be connected with Sūtra LXV. The abstinence takes place on the day, if the actual new moon, the nearest approach of sun and moon, falls on the afternoon, at night, or at twilight. And this new moon, the junction of the fifteenth day and the pratīpad, is called Kuhū. We should read amāvāsyām.
SUTRAS LXVI–LXXI.

SûTRA LXIX.

Or the day when one says, To-morrow they will not see it.

Commentary.

In that case, when the real new moon takes place in the fore-noon, abstinence is observed on the day before, and the new moon is called Sûrivâli. Satyavrata reads svo yukta iti vâ instead of svo na drashtâra iti vâ. Drashtâraḥ should be explained as ikshitâraḥ, ‘they will not see it.’ There is much difference of opinion on this subject among different Sâkhâs, Sûtrakâras, and their commentators; see Taitt. Samh. III, 4, 9; Weber, Ind. Stud., V, p. 228.

SûTRA LXX.

The principal acts (pradhâna), prescribed in one (typical) performance, follow the same special rules (vidhâna).

Commentary.

This Sûtra is variously explained: Satyavrata’s commentary, which I have followed in the translation, explains pradhânâni as âgneyâdini, i.e. the chief parts of such a sacrifice as the Darsa-pûrnamâsa; vidhânâni as ângâni. Kapardisvâmin’s commentary also explains vidhânâni as the ângâni of a pradhânam; pradhânam as pûrnamâsa, &c. It would therefore mean that such ceremonies as the Âgneya (ashta-kapâla), Âgni-śomiyâ (ekâdasa-kapâla), and upâmsu, which form the pradhânas of the Darsapûrnamâsa, retain throughout the same vidhânas or ângas as prescribed in one Prakaraṇa, viz. the Darsapûrnamâsa. The Ângas or members are all the things used for sacrificial purposes, milk, butter, grains, animals, &c.

SûTRA LXXI.

The special rules are limited by (the purpose of) the (typical) performance (prakaraṇa).
Commentary.

Here the rules (vidhis) are again the Āṅgas, which belong to a sacrifice, as the members belong to the body.

Sûtra LXXII.

If no special instruction is given (in the Sruti), the acts are general.

Sûtra LXXIII.

If a special instruction is given, they are restricted.

Commentary.

Nirdesa is explained as viśesha-sruti, and the meaning is supposed to be that unless such a special rule is given, the Āṅgas of all the Pradhāna acts remain the same, as, for instance, the Paryagnikarana, the Prayāgas, &c. Special instructions are when it is said: payasā maitravarunam srināti, sruvena purodāsam anakti, he cooks the Maitravaruna with milk, he anoints the Purodāsa with the spoon, &c.

Sûtra LXXIV.

The Ashṭā-kapāla for Agni, the Ekādasa-kapāla for Agni-Shomau, and the Upāmsuyāga (the muttered offering of butter), form the principal acts at the Paurṇamāsī, the full moon.

Commentary.

The Ashṭā-kapāla is the cake baked in eight cups, the Ekādasa-kapāla that baked in eleven cups, and respectively destined for Agni and Soma. What is meant are the sacrificial acts for which these cakes are used.

Sûtra LXXV.

The other Homas are Āṅga.

Commentary.

The other acts, such as the prayāgas and anuyāgas, are auxiliary, and have no promise of reward by themselves.
Sūtra LXXVI.

The Ashā-kapāla for Agni, the Ekādāsa-kapāla or Dvādāsa-kapāla for Indra-Agni, form the principal acts at the Amāvāsyā, the new moon, in the case of one who does not sacrifice with Soma.

Sūtra LXXVII.

In the case of one who sacrifices with Soma, the second principal act is the Sāmnāyya (both at the full-moon and new-moon sacrifices).

Commentary.

The Sāmnāyya is a mixture of dadhi and payas, sour and sweet milk, and is intended for Indra or Mahendra. It takes the place of the second Purodāsa at the new-moon sacrifice.

Sūtra LXXVIII.

In the case of a Brāhmaṇa, who does not sacrifice with Soma, the Agnishomiya cake is omitted.

Commentary.

This rule does not seem to be accepted by all schools. It is not found in Kātyāyana, and Hiranyakesin observes: Nāsomayāgino brāhmaṇasyāgnishomiyaḥ purodāso vidyata ity ekeshām. See Hillebrandt, l. c. p. iii.

Sūtra LXXIX.

Without distinction of caste, the Aindrāgna offering is omitted for one who offers the Sāmnāyya.

Commentary.

Even though he be not a Somayāgin, says the commentary.

1 Vaidya in his Dictionary explains it, however, as any substance mixed with clarified butter and offered as a burnt offering, which can hardly be right.
This whole matter is summed up in Kapardin's commentary: Amāvāsyāyām asomayāgīna anindrāgna-sāma-nāyyayor vikalpah. Pauruṇāsasyām tv asomayāgīno brāhmaṇasyāgnishomiyayāgābhāvah. Tadrahitāpi paurnamāsī purushārtham śādhyati. Tatra dvayor eva hi yāgayaḥ paurṇamāsīṣabdayākyayatam astī, pratyekam nāmayogat. Tasmād agnishomiyayāgārahitāv evetarau purushārtham śādhyataḥ.

SūTRA LXXX.

The Pitṛi-yagña, the sacrifice to the fathers, is not Aṅga (auxiliary) because its own time is prescribed.

Commentary.

The text should be pitriyagñaḥ svakālavidhanād anāṅgaḥ syāt. This sacrifice for the Manes, called also the Pinda-pitriyagña, falls under the new-moon sacrifice, but is to be considered as a pradhāna, a primary sacrifice, not as an aṅga, a member of the Darsa.

SūTRA LXXXI.

Also, because it is enumerated like the Darsa-pūrṇamāsa sacrifice.

Commentary.

This refers to such passages from the Brāhmaṇas as: There are four great sacrifices, the Agnihotram, the Darsa-pūrṇamāsau, the Kāturmasyāni, and the Pinda-pitriyagñaḥ.

SūTRA LXXXII.

Also, because, when the Amāvāsyā sacrifice is barred, the Pitriyagña is seen to take place.

SūTRA LXXXIII.

A principal act (pradhāna) is accompanied by auxiliary acts (aṅga).
Commentary.

This Sûtra forms sometimes part of the preceding Sûtra, and would then refer to the Pitriyâgãna only.

Sûtra LXXXIV.

A principal act is what has its own name, and is prescribed with special reference to place, time, and performer.

Commentary.

This Sûtra is sometimes divided into two; the first, dese kâle kartariti nirdisyate, the second, asvasabdama yat. The following are given as illustrations. If it is said that 'he should sacrifice with the Vaisvadeva on a slope inclined to the East,' we have the locality. If it is said that 'he should sacrifice with the Vâgapeya in autumn,' we have the time. If it is said that 'the sacrificer himself should offer the Agnihotra on a parvan (change of the moon),' we have the performer. In each of these cases, therefore, the prescribed sacrificial act is a pradhâna sângam, a principal act with auxiliary members.

Sûtra LXXXV.

The Darvi-homa (libation from a ladle) stands by itself.

Commentary.

Apûrva is explained by the commentator, not in its usual sense of miraculous, but as not being subject to the former regulations.

Sûtra LXXXVI.

They are ordered by the word guhoti, he pours out.

Sûtra LXXXVII.

They are offered with the word Svâhâ.

Commentary.

According to Kâtyâyana I, 2, 6–7, the guhotis are offered sitting, the yagatis standing. See Sutra XCII. The guhoti acts consist in pouring melted butter into the fire of the Ahavaniya altar, which is so called because ‘âhû-yan te sminn âhutaya kshipyanta iti.’

Sûtra LXXXVIII.
Taking (the butter) once.

Sûtra LXXXIX.
Or, if there are several Āhuti s, taking (the butter) for each Āhuti.

Sûtra XC.
Or, doing as he likes in dividing (the butter).

Commentary.
These three Sutras belong together. They teach that one slice (avadâna) of butter should be taken, melted, and poured on the Āhavaniya fire; or, if there are more than one āhuti, then one slice should be taken for each. This, however, is made optional again by the last Sûtra.

Sûtra XCI.
There is no fuel (in the Darvi-homa), except at the Agnihotra.

Commentary.
In the case of the Agnihotra it is distinctly stated, dve samidhâv âdadhyât, let him lay down two sticks.

Sûtra XCII.
One pours out (guhoti) the Darvi-homas, sitting west of the Āhavaniya fire, and bending the right knee, or not bending it.

Sûtra XCIII.
If it is distinctly stated, it is done in a different way.
The vidhi, contained in Sūtra XCI, is therefore called autsargika, general, and liable to exceptions, as when it is said, that he turns to the east.

Sūtra XCIV.

One pours out (guhoti) all āhutis, west of the Āhavaniya fire, passing (the altar) southward, and then turning to the north.

Sūtra XCV.

The Āṣruta and Pratyāṣruta, the Yāgayā and Anuvākyā, the Upastarana and Abhighārana, with the slicings, the Katurgrīhiṇa also, and the Vashatkāra constitute the Darvi-homas.

Commentary.

The Āṣruta is ā śrāvaya; the Pratyāṣruta, astu sraushat; Anuvākyā and Yāgayā are verses, the first inviting the deity, the second accompanying the sacrifice. Whenever vegetable, animal, or sāmnāyya offerings have to be sliced, upastarana, spreading, and abhighārana, sprinkling with fat, take place. With āgya offerings there is Katurgrīhiṇa (taking four times), and the Vashatkāra.

Sūtra XCVI.

With āhutis one should let the act (the pouring out) take place after the Vashatkāra has been made, or while it is being made.

Commentary.

The Vashatkāra consists in the word Vashat, to be uttered by the Hotri-priest. The five sacrificial interjections are, svāhā, sraushat, vaushat, vashat, and svadhā.

Sūtra XCVII.

With the Grahas the act should be made to coincide with the Upayāma.
Commentary.

Grahas are offerings of Soma, and likewise the vessels (kamasa) in which the Soma is offered. The Soma is offered with the words upayama-grihito*si, and while these words are being uttered, the fluid should be poured out (dhərəm srəvayet).

Sūtra XC VIII.

With the Ish\(\text{ı}\)atak\(\text{ı}\)s, the act should be made to coincide with the words tayā deva tena.

Commentary.

When the different Ish\(\text{ı}\)atak\(\text{ı}\)s or bricks are placed together for building an altar, &c., the act itself begins with the first and ends with the last words of the accompanying verse.

Sūtra XC IX.

When there is a number of Purod\(\text{ə}\)s\(\text{ə}\)s, one should slice off one after another, saying for each portion vyāvartadhvam (separate)!

Commentary.

Purod\(\text{ə}\)s\(\text{ə}\) is a cake made of meal (pakvaḥ pishtapindaḥ), different from karu, which is more of a pulse consisting of grains of rice or barley, and clarified butter (ghrītataṇḍulobhayātmakan). This purod\(\text{ə}\)s\(\text{ə}\) cake has to be divided for presentation to different deities. If there are more than two deities, the plural vyāvartadhvam, separate, has to be used.

Sūtra C.

When the two last are sliced off, he should say for each portion, vyāvartethām, separate ye two!

Commentary.

Each slice, avadāna, is said to be about a thumb's breadth. In the case of sāmnāyya, the mixture of sour and sweet milk, a kind of coagulated sour milk, each portion is to be of the same breadth, but, as it is fluid, it is taken out with a ladle (sruva) of a corresponding size; see Kātyāyana I, 9, 7.

Sûtra CI.

For these two last portions he makes the indication of the deity.

Commentary.

With the earlier portions, there is a rule which of two gods should have the first or the second portion. With the last couple, however, the priest may himself assign whichever portion he likes to one or the other god. The commentary says, svayam eva idam asyā iti saṅkalpayet.

Sûtra CII.

When there is a number of Karus and Purodāsas, one separates what belongs to the Karus and what belongs to the Purodāsas, before the strewing.

Commentary.

Prāg adhivapanāt, before the strewing, is explained by prāg adhivapanārthakrishnāgīnādānāt, before one takes the black skin which is used for the strewing.

Sûtra CIII.

One then marks the two (the materials for the Karus and the Purodāsas) according to the deities (for whom they are intended).

Sûtra CIV.

Let the word idam be the rule.

Commentary.

This means that the offering (havis) intended for each deity should be pointed out by the words idam, this, Agnēh, is for Agni, &c. Thus we read with regard to the offerings intended for certain gods and goddesses: idam Dhātur, idam Anumatyā, Rākāyāh Sinivālyāh, Kuhvāh.
Sūtra CV.

All this applies also to Karus and Purodâsas which are separated.

Commentary.

The commentary explains vyatishikta by anyonyaṁ vyavahita, though it is difficult to see how it can have that meaning. It is said that in the Vaisvadeva the Karus and Purodâsas are vyatishikta, but that they also have to be divided before the adhivapana, and to be marked for each deity. Thus we read: Idam Agneḥ, Savituh, Pûshno, Marutâm, Dyâvâprithivyoh, &c.

Sūtra CVI.

At the time when the Kapâlas are put on the fire, one puts on the kāru with the first kapâla verse.

Commentary.

Karu is here used for the vessel for boiling the kāru, the karusthāli. The first of these verses is dhṛishṭiṁ asi. Kapâlas are the jars in which the rice is cooked.

Sūtra CVII.

The verse is adapted and changed to dhruvośi.

Commentary.

Samnâma means the same as uha, i.e. the modification of a verse so as to adapt it to the object for which it is used. In our case, karu, being a masculine, dhṛishṭi, a feminine, is replaced by dhruva, a masculine.

Sūtra CVIII.

At the time when the meal is to be cleansed, one cleanses the grains.

Commentary.

This takes place after the kāru-pot has been put on. The taudulas are the unhusked grains, pishṭa is the ground flour. In Sanskrit a distinction is made between sasya, the corn in the field, dhânya, corn with the husk, taṇḍula, grains without husks, anna, roasted grains.

Sûtra CX.

At the time of cooking (adhisrâpâna) one throws the grains in with the cooking verse.

Commentary.

This verse is gharmôśi.

Sûtra CXI.

Without taking the kâru (out of the sthâli) one puts it down.

Sûtra CXII.

At the Darsa-pûrnamâsa sacrifices there are fifteen Sâmidhenis.

Commentary.

Sâmidhenis are particular verses recited while the fire is being kindled. The first and last verses are repeated thrice, so as to make fifteen in all.

Sûtra CXIII.

At the Ishṭi and Pasûbandha sacrifices there are seventeen Sâmidhenis, when they are so handed down.

Sûtra CXIV.

When it is said that wishful ishṭis are performed in a murmur, this means that the names of the chief deities are pronounced in a murmur (likewise the yâgyâ and anuvâkyâ).

Sûtra CXIV.

The Darsa-pûrnamâsa sacrifice is the Prakriti or norm for all ishṭis.
The Sūtras, in describing the performance of certain sacrifices, treat some of them in full detail. These are called prakṛiti. Prakriyante smin dharmā iti prakaranam prakṛitiḥ. They form the type of other sacrifices, which are therefore looked upon as mere modifications, vikṛiti, and in describing them those points only are fully described in which they differ from their prakṛiti. A sacrifice which is a vikṛiti, may again become the prakṛiti of another sacrifice. This system is no doubt compendious, but it is not free from difficulty, and, in some cases, from uncertainty. It shows how much system there is in the Indian sacrifices, and how fully and minutely that system must have been elaborated, before it assumed that form in which we find it in the Brāhmaṇas and Sūtras. It must not be supposed that the sacrifices which serve as prakṛiti, are therefore historically the most ancient.

Sūtra CXV.

It is also the norm for the Agniṣhomīya Pasu, the animal sacrifice for Agni-Shomau.

Sūtra CXVI.

And this is the norm for the Savaniya.

Sūtra CXVII.

And the Savaniya is the norm for the Aikādasinas.

Sūtra CXVIII.

And the Aikādasinas are the norm for the Pasuganaṇas.

Commentary.

The rules for the Pasuganaṇas are therefore to be taken over from the Aikādasinas, the Savaniya, the Agniṣhomīya-pasu, and the Darśa-pūrnamāsa, so far as they have been modified in each particular case, and are finally determined by the rules of each Pasugana, as, for instance, the Āditya-pasu.

SūTRA CXIX.

The Vaisvadeva is the norm for the Varuna-praghāsa, Sākamedha, and Sira.

Commentary.

The Vaisvadeva, beginning, like the Darsa-pūrna-māsa, with an Āgneya ashtakapāla, takes certain rules from the Darsa-pūrnamāsa, and transfers these, together with its own, as, for instance, the nine prayāgas, to the Varuna-praghāsa, &c.

SūTRA CXX.

The Vaisvadevika Ekakapāla is the norm for all Ekakapālas.

Commentary.

The Ekakapāla is a purodāsa cake, baked in one kapāla. It is fully described in the Vaisvadeva, and then becomes the norm of all Ekakapālas. An ekakapāla cake is not divided.

SūTRA CXXI.

The Vaisvadevi Āmikshā is the norm for the Āmikshās (a preparation of milk).

SūTRA CXXII.

Here the Vikāra, the modification, is perceived from similarity.

Commentary.

If it has once been laid down that the Darsa-pūrnamāsa is the prakṛiti or norm for all ishtis, then similarity determines the modification in all details, such as the offerings and the gods to whom offerings are made. Thus Karu, being a vegetable offering, would rank as a vikāra of purodāsa, which occurs in the Darsa-pūrnamāsa sacrifice, and is likewise vegetable. Honey and water would be looked upon as most like the Āgya in the Darsa-pûrnamāsa. Āmikshā, a preparation of milk, would come nearest to the Sāmnāyya, which is a mixture of sour and sweet milk.

Sūtra CXXIII.

Offerings for one deity are vikāras of the Āgneya.

Commentary.

In the Darsa-pûrnamāsa, which is the prakṛiti of the ishiṣis, the purodāsa for Agni is meant for one deity. Hence all offerings to one deity in the vikṛitis follow the general rules of the Āgneya purodāsa, as described in the Darsa-pûrnamāsa, for instance, the karu for Sūrya, the Dvādasa-kapāla for Savitri.

Sūtra CXXIV.

Offerings for two deities are vikāras of the Agnishomīya.

Commentary.

They must, however, be vegetable offerings, because the purodāsa for Agni-Shomau is a vegetable offering. As an instance, the Āgnāvaishñava Ekādasakapāla is quoted. Agnishomīya has a short a, but the first a in āgnāvaishñava is long.

Sūtra CXXV.

Offerings for many deities are vikāras also of the Aindrāgna.

Commentary.

The kā in bahudevatās kā is explained by the commentary as intended to include the Āgnāvaishñava also. Any offering intended for more than one deity may be considered as intended for many deities.

Sūtra CXXVI.

They are optionally vikāras of the Aindrāgna.
Sometimes these two Sutras are combined into one. The commentator, however, sees in the vā of aindrāgnavikārā vā a deeper meaning. Agni-Shomau, he says, consists of four, Indragni of three syllables. Therefore if the name of more than one deity consists of four syllables, it should be treated as a vikāra of the Agnishomiya, if of less than four syllables, as a vikāra of the Aindrāgna.

SûTRA CXXVII.

An exception must be made in the case of the gods of the prakṛiti, as, for instance, the Aindra purodāsa, the Saumya karu.

Commentary.

The exception applies to cases where the offering in a vikṛiti sacrifice is meant for the same principal deities as those of the prakṛiti offering. For instance, in the Darsa-pûrnamāsa Agni and Soma are the deities of the Agnishomiya, Indra and Agni of the Aindrāgna. If then in one of the secondary or vikṛiti sacrifices there occurs an Aindra purodāsa, or a Saumya karu, then the Aindra purodāsa is treated as a vikāra of the Aindrāgna, the Saumya karu as a vikāra of the Agnishomiya. The Somendra karu also, as its principal deity is Soma, would follow the Agnishomiya, the Indrāsomiya purodāsa, as its principal deity is Indra, would follow the Aindrāgna.

SûTRA CXXVIII.

If there is sameness both in the offering and in the deity, then the offering prevails.

Commentary.

If a karu for Pragâpati occurs in a vikṛiti sacrifice, it would follow that, being offered to Pragâpati, it should be offered with murmuring, but, as it is a vegetable offering, it follows the norm of the purodāsa, though the purodāsa is intended for Agni.
Sūtra CXXIX.

If there is contradiction with regard to the substance and the preparation of an offering, the substance prevails.

Commentary.

A puroḍāsa may be made of vṛihi, rice, or of nivāra, wild growing rice. The wild rice has to be pounded, but not the good rice. The preparation, however, has to yield in a vikṛiti, the important point being the substance.

Sūtra CXXX.

If there is contradiction with regard to the substance, the object prevails.

Commentary.

An example makes the meaning of this Sūtra quite clear. Generally the yūpa or sacrificial post for fastening sacrificial animals is made of Khadira wood. But if a post made of wood is not strong enough to hold the animal, then an iron post is to be used, the object being the fastening of the animal, while the material is of less consequence.

Sūtra CXXXI.

In a Prakṛiti sacrifice there is no Ūha, modification of the mantras.

Commentary.

Certain mantras of the Veda have to be slightly altered, when their application varies. In the normal sacrifices, however, no such alteration takes place.

Sūtra CXXXII.

In a Vikṛiti sacrifice modification takes place, according to the sense, but not in an arthavāda.

Commentary.

Some mantras remain the same in the Vikṛiti as in the Prakṛiti. Others have to be modified so as to be adapted to anything new that has to be. If, for instance, there is a Purodâsa for Agni in the Prakriti, and in its place a Purodâsa for Sûrya in the Vikriti, then we must place Sûrya instead of Agni in the dedicatory mantra.

Sûtra CXXXIII.

When we hear words referring to something else, that is arthavâda.

Commentary.

Arthavâda is generally explained as anything occurring in the Brâhmaṇas which is not vidhi or command. Here, however, it refers to Mantras or passages recited at the sacrifice. We saw how such passages, if they referred to some part of the sacrifice, had to be modified under certain circumstances according to the sense. Here we are told that passages which do not refer to anything special in the sacrifice, are arthavâda and remain unmodified. All this is expressed by the words paravâkyasravanât. Vâkya stands for padâni, words, such as are used in the nivâpa-manastra, &c. Some of these words are called samavetârthâni, because they tell of something connected with the performance of the sacrifice, as, for instance, Agnaye gushtam nirvapâmi, I offer what is acceptable to Agni; others are asamavetârthâni, as, for instance, Devasya tvâ Savitukh prasave. When such passages which are not connected with some sacrificial act occur (sravanât), they naturally remain unaltered.

Sûtra CXXXIV.

If what is prescribed is absent, a substitute is to be taken according to similarity.

Commentary.

Here we have no longer modification, but substitution (pratinidhi). In cases where anything special that has been prescribed is wanting, a substitute must be chosen, as similar as possible, and producing a similar effect.
According to Mandana's Trikanda, the degrees of similarity are to be determined in the following order:

Kāryai rūpais tathā parvaik kshiraih pushpaili phalair api,

Gandhai rasaih sadrig grāhyam pūrvālābe param param.

'What is similar by effect, by shape, by leaves, by milk, by flowers, and by fruit, By smell, or by taste is to be taken one after the other, if the former cannot be found.'

Sūtra CXXXV.

If there is nothing very like, something a little like may be substituted, only it must not be prohibited.

Commentary.

If in a āru of mudgas, kidney-beans, phaseolus mungo, these kidney-beans should fail, a substitute may be taken, but that substitute must not be māshas, phaseolus radiatus, because these māshas are expressly forbidden; for it is said, Ayagūīyā vai māshāh, 'Māshas are not fit for sacrifice.'

Sūtra CXXXVI.

The substitute should take the nature of that for which it is substituted.

Commentary.

Taddharma, having the same qualities. If, for instance, nivāra has been substituted for vrihi, it should be treated as if it were vrihi. The name vrihi should remain, and should not be replaced by nivāra, just as Soma, if replaced by pūtikā, is still called Soma. Thus, when in the course of a sacrifice vrihi has once been replaced by nivāra, and vrihi can be procured afterwards, yet nivāra is then to be retained to the end. If, however, the substituted nivāra also come to an end, and afterwards both nivāra and vrihi are forthcoming, then vrihi has the preference. If neither be forthcoming, then some substitute is to be taken that approaches nearest to the substitute, the nivāra, not to the original vṛīhi. Further, if a choice has been allowed between vṛīhi, rice, and yava, barley, and vṛīhi has been chosen, and afterwards, as substitute for vṛīhi, nīvāra, then, if nīvāra come to an end, and in the absence of vṛīhi, when a new supply of both nīvāra and yava has been obtained, the yava is to be avoided, and the original substitute for vṛīhi, the nīvāra, must be retained. In most of these cases, however, a certain penance also (prāya-skṛitta) is required.

Sūtra CXXXVII.

If something is wanting in the measure, let him finish with the rest.

Commentary.

If it is said that a purodāsa should be as large as a horse’s hoof, and there is not quite so much left, yet whatever is left should be used to finish the offering.

Sūtra CXXXVIII.

Substitution does not apply to the master, the altar-fire, the deity, the word, the act, and a prohibition.

Commentary.

The master is meant for the sacrificer himself and his wife. Their place cannot, of course, be taken by anybody else. The altar-fire is supposed to have a supernatural power, and cannot be replaced by any other fire. Nothing can take the place of the invoked deities, nor of the words used in the mantras addressed to them, nor can the sacrifice itself be replaced by any other act. Lastly, when it is said that māshas, varakas, kodravas are not fit for sacrifice, or that a man ought not to sacrifice with what should not be eaten by Āryas, nothing else can be substituted for what is thus prohibited.

Sūtra CXXXIX.

The Prakṛiti stops from three causes, from a corollary, from a prohibition, and from loss of purpose.
Commentary.

A corollary (pratyāmnāna) occurs, when it is said, 'instead of Kusa grass, let him make a barhis of reeds.' A prohibition (pratishedha) occurs, when it is said, 'he does not choose an Ārsheya.' Loss of purpose (arthalopa) occurs, when peshána, pounding, would refer to karu, a pulse, that cannot be pounded, while grains can be.

Sūtra CXL.

The Agnishōma is the Prakṛiti of the Ekāha sacrifices.

Commentary.

The Ekāha are sacrifices accomplished in one day.

Sūtra CXLI.

The Dvādasāha is the Prakṛiti of the Aharganas.

Commentary.

The Dvādasāha lasts twelve days and is a Soma sacrifice. It is either an Ahina or a Sattras. An Ahargana is a series of daily and nightly sacrifices. Those which last from two nights to eleven nights are called Ahina. Those which last from thirteen to one hundred nights or more are called Sattras.

Sūtra CXLII.

The Gavāmayana is the Prakṛiti of the Sāmvatsarikas.

Commentary.

The Gavāmayana lasts three years, and it is the type of all Sāmvatsarika sacrifices, whether they last one, two, three or more years. They all belong to the class of Sattras.

Sūtra CXLIII.

Of the Nikāyi sacrifices the first serves as Prakṛiti.
Among the Nikāyā sacrifices, lit. those which consist of a number, all having the same name, but different rewards, the first is the prakṛiti of the subsequent ones. The commentator calls them sādyaskra &c., and mentions as the first the Agniśṭoma. See Sūtra CXLVI, and Weber, Ind. Stud. XIII, p. 218.

SŪTRA CXLIV.

At the Agniśṭoma there is the Uttara-vedi.

Commentary.

The commentator explains this by saying that at the Soma sacrifices, i.e. at the Agniśṭoma, Ukthya, Shodasaśin, and Atirātra, the fire is carried from the Ṛavaṇīya to the Uttara-vedi, which is also called the Soma altar.

SŪTRA CXLV.

The fire is valid for the successive sacrifices.

Commentary.

This fire refers to the fire on the Uttara-vedi, mentioned in the preceding Sūtra, and the object of the Sūtra seems to be to include the act of lighting the fire on the Uttara-vedi in the Prakṛiti, though properly speaking it does not form part of the Agniśṭoma. But I cannot quite understand the argument of the commentator.

SŪTRA CXLVI.

This does not apply to the Sādyaskras, the Vāgapeya, the Shodasaśin, and the Sārasvata Sattrā.

Commentary.

With regard to the Shodasaśin and its vikāra, the Vāgapeya, the laying of the fire is not mentioned. In the case of the Sādyaskras, it becomes impossible, because they have to be quickly finished. In the case of the Sārasvata Sattrā, there is the same difficulty on account of not remaining in the same place (anavasthāpān nāgnis kiyate).
SūTRA CXLVII.

A sacrificer wishes the object of his sacrifice at the beginning of the sacrifice.

Commentary.

Some MSS. read kāmāyeta, 'he should wish,' but the commentator explains that such a command (vidhi) is unnecessary, because it is natural to form a wish (sva/tah siddhatvāt).

SūTRA CXLVIII.

At the beginning of a special part of the sacrifice, one should wish the object of that part of the sacrifice.

Commentary.

The commentary, though objecting, and objecting rightly, to kāmāyeta, 'he should wish,' in the preceding Sūtra, accepts kāmāyeta as determining the present Sūtra, saying kāmāyetety anuvartate. One should read yagñāṅgakāmam, not yagñākāmam, for the commentary explains it by yagñāṅgaphalasāṅkalpakh. Whether it was really intended that there should be a special wish for each part or subsidiary act of a sacrifice (yagñāṅga), is another question, but the commentator evidently thought so.

Kātyāyana, who treats the same subject (1, 2, 10 seq.), states that there should be this desire for a reward for certain sacrifices which are offered for a certain purpose, as, for instance, the Dvādaśāḥa, but that there are no such motives for other sacrifices, and parts of sacrifices. He mentions, first of all, a niyama, a precept for the sacrifice, such as 'Speak the truth.' Then a nimitta, a special cause, as when some accident has taken place that must be remedied, for instance, when the house has been burnt down, &c. Thirdly, the Agnihotra, the morning and evening Homa; fourthly, the Darsa-pūrvamāsa; fifthly, the Dākshāyana, a vikrīti of the Darsa-pūrvamāsa, the Āgrayana; sixthly, the Nirūdha-pasu, the animal sacrifice. All these have to be performed as a sacred duty, and without any view to special rewards. Thus we read in Vāśishṭha:

Avasyam brāhmaṇo, gnin ādadhita, darsapūrnamāsāγra-yaneshṭa, kāturmasyapausosmaiṣ ka yajeta, ‘A Brāhmaṇa should without fail place his fires, and offer the Darsapūrnamāsa, the Āgrayaneshti, the Kāturmasyas, the Paṇu, and the Soma sacrifices.’

Hārita says: Pākayaganān yagen nityam haviryagāṁs ka nityasah, Somāṁs ka vidhipūrvena ya ikkhed dharmam avayam, ‘Let a man offer the Pākayagānas always, always also the Haviryagānas, and the Soma sacrifices, according to rule, if he wishes for eternal merit.’ The object of these sacrifices is aparimitaniḥsreyasarūpa-moksha, eternal happiness, and hence they have to be performed during life at certain seasons, without any special occasion (nimitta), and without any special object (kāma). According to most authorities, however, they have to be performed during thirty years only. After that the Agnihotra only has to be kept up. The proper seasons for these sacrifices are given by Manu, IV, 25-27:

‘A Brāhmaṇa shall always offer the Agnihotra at the beginning or at the end of the day and of the night, and the Darsa and Pauruṣamāsa (ishīs) at the end of each half-month;

‘When the old grain has been consumed the (Āgrayana) Ishī with new grain; at the end of the (three) seasons the (Kāturmasya) sacrifices; at the solstices an animal (sacrifice); at the end of the year Soma offerings;

‘A Brāhmaṇa, who keeps sacred fires, shall, if he desires to live long, not eat new grain or meat, without having offered the (Āgrayana) Ishī with new grain and an animal (sacrifice)’

These Pākayagānas, Haviryagānas or ishīs, and Soma sacrifices are enumerated by Gautama 2, as follows:

1 See Manu, transl. by Bühler, S. B. E., XXV, who quotes to the same purpose Gaut. VIII, 19-20; Vās. XI, 46; Vi. LIX, 2-9; Baudh. II, 4, 23; Yāgñ. I, 97, 124-125.

2 Kātyāyana, p. 34.
In a commentary on Dhūrtasvāmin’s Āpastambasūtra-bhāṣya (MS. E. I. H. 137) another list is given:

Pākasyaḥs: Ḥaviryagṛas: Somasyaḥs:

(1) Aupāsanahomat, Agnihotram, Agnishomaḥ,
(2) Vaiśvadevam, Darasapūrnamāsau, Atyagnishomaḥ, Ḥukyāḥ,
(3) śrāddham, Agrayam, Shodasi, Vāgapeyah,
(4) śrāvāni, Kāturmasyāṇi 1, Shodasi 2,
(5) Āgrāhāyani, Āgrāyaneshōḥ, Āgrāyaneshōḥ,
(6) Kāitrī, Nirūdhapasubandhaḥ, Atirātraḥ,
(7) Āsvayugī, Sautramāṇī, Aptoryāmaḥ.

This list is nearly the same as one given by Satyavrata Sāmśrami in the Usha. He gives, however, another list, which is:

Pākasamsthās: Ḥavirasamsthās: Somasamsthās:

(1) Sāyadhomaḥ, Agnyādheyaḥ, Agnishomaḥ,
(2) Prātarhomaha, Agnihotram, Atyagnishomaḥ, Ḥukyāḥ,
(3) Sūhālipaka, Darasa-, Sūhālipaka, Shodasi,
(4) Nāvyagrāha, Paurṇamāsaḥ, Vāgapeyah,
(5) Vaiśvadevam, Āgrāyaṇa, Vāgapeyah,
(6) Pitrīyagrāha, Kāturmasyāṇi, Atirātraḥ,
(7) Ashṭakā, Pasubandhaḥ, Aptoryāmaḥ.

times divided into vegetable and animal sacrificial. The vegetable substances are, taudulāh, pishāni, phalikarauāh, purodāsah, odanah, yavāgūh, prithukāh, lāgāh, dhānāh, and aktavāh. The animal substances are, payah, dadhi, āgyam, āmikshā, vāginam, vapā, tvakāh, māmsam, lohitam, and pasurasah.

Sūtra CXLIX.

If there are fewer Mantras and more (sacrificial) acts, then after dividing them into equal parts, let him perform the former with the former, the latter with the latter.

Commentary.

It happens, for instance, in certain ishtis that a pair of Yāgyā and Anuvākyā mantras is given, but six acts. In that case one half of the mantras is used for one half of the acts, and the other half of the mantras for the other half of the acts.

Sūtra CL.

If there are fewer acts and more Mantras, let him perform and act with one mantra, those which remain are optional, as the materials for the sacrificial post.

Commentary.

Kapardisvāmin seems to have divided this Sūtra into three, the second being avasīshṭā vilānapārthāh, the third yathā yūpadravyāviti. But it is better to take it as one, as it is in MS. 1676.

If there are, for instance, fourteen vapanas, while there are many more mantras, let him select fourteen mantras and use them for each vapana, while the rest will be useful for another performance. A similar case occurs when different kinds of wood are recommended for making the sacrificial post, or when rice or barley are recommended for an offering. Here a choice has to be made. The iti at the end is explained as showing that there are other instances of the same kind.
SūTRA CLI.

From the end there takes place omission or addition.

Commentary.

This refers again to the same subject, namely what has to be done if there are either more or less mantras than there are acts which they are to accompany. In that case it is here allowed to use as many mantras as there are acts, and to drop the rest of the mantras. Or, if there are less mantras than there are acts, then, after the mantras have been equally divided, the last verse is to be multiplied. For instance, in the Dvikapāla sacrifice for the two Āśvins, the placing of the two kapālas is accompanied by two mantras. The rest of the mantras enjoined in the prakṛti is left out. But if there are, for instance, twelve or more ishtaḥakās, bricks, to be placed, while there are only ten mantras, then the mantras are equally divided, and the fifth and tenth to be repeated, as many times as is necessary to equal the number of the ishtaḥakās.

SūTRA CLII.

As the Prakṛti has been told before, anything that has not been told before, should be at the end.

Commentary.

This seems to mean that anything new, peculiar to a Vikṛiti, and not mentioned in the Prakṛiti, should come in at the end, that is, after those portions of the sacrifice which are enjoined in the Prakṛiti.

SūTRA CLIII.

The rule should stand on account of the fitness of the Kumbhī, a large pot, the Śūla, the spit for boiling the heart, and the two Vapāsrapanīs, the spits for roasting the vapā.

Commentary.

Kumbhī is explained by sronyādipākasamarthā
Sūtras CLI–CLV.

The exact object of the Sūtra is not quite clear. Pra-bhutva is explained by samarthatva, that is, fitness. This would mean, that on account of their fitness, or because they can be used for the object for which they are intended, or, so long as they can be used, the rule applying to them should remain. The commentary explains tan-tram by tantratā or ekatā. It may mean that the same pots and spits should be used, so long as they fulfil their purpose. The next Sūtra would then form a natural limitation.

Sūtra CLIV.

But if there is a different kind of animal, there is difference (in pots and spits), owing to the diversity of cooking.

Commentary.

If different animals are to be cooked, then there must be different pots for each (pratiparam), because each requires a different kind of cooking. The commentary adds that, as the reason for using different pots is given, that reason applies also to young and old animals of the same kind (gāti), i.e. the young and small animal would require a different pot and a different kind of cooking.

Sūtra CLV.

At the Vanaspati sacrifice, which is a modification (vikāra) of the Svishṭakṛit, the addresses (nigama) of the deities should take place in the Yāgya, because they are included in the Prakṛiti.

Commentary.

These nigamas of the deities are not mentioned in the rules of the Vanaspati sacrifice, but they are mentioned in the rules for the Svishṭakṛit sacrifice of the Darsapūrnamāsa, which is the Prakṛiti, and should therefore be taken over. Here again, because a reason is given, it is understood that the same reason would apply to other portions of Svishṭakṛiti also, such as the Dvīr abhi-ghāraṇa, which is to be retained in the Vanaspati sacrifice.

Sūtra CLVI.

The Anvārambhāniyā or initiatory ceremony does not take place in a Vikṛiti, because the Vikṛitis would fall within the time of the Prakṛiti, and the Anvārambhāniyā has but one object, namely (the initiation of) the Darsa-pūrṇa-māsa sacrifice.

Commentary.

The Anvārambhāniyā ceremony has to be performed by those who begin the Darsa-pūrṇamāsa sacrifice. It has thus one object only, and is never enjoined for any other cause. It is not therefore transferred to any Vikṛiti, such as the Saurya ceremony, &c. The Darsa-pūrṇa-māsa sacrifice having to be performed during the whole of life, or during thirty years, the Vikṛitis would necessarily fall within the same space of time. The initiatory ceremony has reference to the Darsa-pūrṇamāsa sacrifice only, and thus serves as an introduction to all the Vikṛitis, without having to be repeated for each.

Sūtra CLVII.

Or (according to others) the Anvārambhāniyā should take place (in the Vikṛitis also), because the time (of the Darsa-pūrṇamāsa) does not form an essential part.

Commentary.

This Sūtra is not quite clear. It shows clearly enough that, according to some authorities, the Anvārambhāniyā or initiatory ceremony of the Darsa-pūrṇamāsa sacrifice should take place in the Vikṛitis also; but why? Because the time has not the character of a śesha, which is said to be a synonym of aṅga, an essential part of a sacrifice.
When it is said that the Darsa-pûrṇamāsa should be performed during life, this is not meant as determining the time of the sacrifice. It only means that so long as there is life a man should perform these sacrifices, and that their non-performance would constitute a sin. The former argument, therefore, that the time of the Vikrīti sacrifices would fall within the time of the Prakrīti sacrifice is not tenable.

Sūtra CLVIII.

And again, because there is difference in the undertaking.

Commentary.

Ārāmbha, the beginning, is explained as the determination to perform a certain sacrifice (darsa-pûrṇamāsābhyām yakṣhya iti nīṣkayapurahsarah saṅkalpaḥ). The object of the undertaking in the case of the Darsa-pûrṇamāsa sacrifice, as the Prakrīti, is simply svarga, in the Vikrītis it may be any kind of desire. Therefore the Anvārambhāniyā ceremony of the Darsa-pûrṇamāsas should be transferred to its Vikrītis. This seems to have been the opinion of the same authorities who are referred to in Sūtra CLVII. The final outcome of the whole controversy, however, is clearly that our Ākārya is in favour of omitting the Anvārambhāniyā in the Vikrītis. Anayoḥ pakshayaḥ anvārambhāniyābhavepakṣasyai the vādavatvam ākāryabhilashitam iti manyāmahe. The Anvārambhāniyā is not to be considered as an ordinary Aṅga, but as a special act to fit the sacrificer to perform the Darsa-pûrṇamāsa and to perform it through the whole of his life.

Sūtra CLIX.

For every object (new sacrifice) let him bring forward the fire (let him perform the Agniprana- yana, the fetching of the Āhavaniya from the Gārhapatya fire). When the sacrifice is finished the fire becomes again ordinary fire, as when the (divine) fire has returned (to the firesticks).

Commentary.

The fire for a sacrifice is supposed to be set apart or consecrated (śāstriya), but it is so for a special sacrifice only, and when that sacrifice is ended, it is supposed to become like ordinary fire again. Artha is prayogana, the sacrifice for which the fire is intended (agnisādhyavīhitakarmānuśāhānam; tasya tasya vihitasya karmanośnushānārtham gārhapatyādibhya āhavaniyādyagnim pravayet). The commentator remarks that there are two Agnis, the one who is visible, the other who is the god. Now while the divine Agni leaves the coals and ascends or is absorbed again in the two firesticks (arāni), the other remains like ordinary kitchen fire. See on Samārohana, Weber, Ind. Stud. IX, p. 311; Āsvalāyana-Srauta-sūtra III, 10, 4–5.

Sacred Books of the East
Translated by Various Oriental Scholars
And Edited by F. Max Müller

* * This Series is published with the sanction and co-operation of the Secretary of State for India in Council.

Report presented to the Académie des Inscriptions, May 11, 1883, by M. Ernest Renan.

"M. Renan présente trois nouveaux volumes de la grande collection des "Livres sacrés de l'Orient" (Sacred Books of the East), que dirige à Oxford, avec une si vaste érudition et une critique si sûre, le savant associé de l'Académie des Inscriptions, M. Max Müller... La première série de ce beau recueil, composée de 24 volumes, est presque achevée. M. Max Müller se propose d'en publier une seconde, dont l'intérêt historique et religieux ne sera pas moindre. M. Max Müller a su se procurer la collaboration des savans les plus éminens d'Europe et d'Asie. L'Université d'Oxford, que cette grande publication honore au plus haut degré, doit tenir à continuer dans les plus larges proportions une œuvre aussi philosophiquement conçue que savamment exécutée."

Extract from the Quarterly Review.

"We rejoice to notice that a second series of these translations has been announced and has actually begun to appear. The stones, at least, out of which a stately edifice may hereafter arise, are here being brought together. Prof. Max Müller has deserved well of scientific history. Not a few minds owe to his enticing words their first attraction to this branch of study. But no work of his, not even the great edition of the Rig-Veda, can compare in importance or in usefulness with this English translation of the Sacred Books of the East, which has been devised by his foresight, successfully brought so far by his persuasive and organising power, and will, we trust, by the assistance of the distinguished scholars he has gathered round him, be carried in due time to a happy completion."

Professor E. Hardy, Inaugural Lecture in the University of Freiburg, 1887.

"Die allgemeine vergleichende Religionswissenschaft datirt von jenem grossartigen, in seiner Art einzig dastehenden Unternehmen, zu welchem auf Anregung Max Müllers im Jahre 1874 auf dem internationalen Orientalistencongress in London der Grundstein gelegt worden war, die Übersetzung der heiligen Bücher des Ostens' (the Sacred Books of the East)."

FIRST SERIES.

VOL. I. The Upanishads.
Translated by F. Max Müller. Part I. The Kaândogya-upanishad, The Talavakâra-upanishad, The Aitareya-åranyaka, The Kaushitaki-brâhmana-upanishad, and The Vâgasaneyisamhitâ-upanishad. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.
The Upanishads contain the philosophy of the Veda. They have become the foundation of the later Vedânta doctrines, and indirectly of Buddhism. Schopenhauer, speaking of the Upanishads, says: 'In the whole world there is no study so beneficial and so elevating as that of the Upanishads. It has been the solace of my life, it will be the solace of my death.'
[See also Vol. XV.]

VOL. II. The Sacred Laws of the Āryas,
As taught in the Schools of Āpastamba, Gautama, Vâsishtha, and Baudhâyana. Translated by Georg Bühler. Part I. Āpastamba and Gautama. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.
The Sacred Laws of the Āryas contain the original treatises on which the Laws of Manu and other lawgivers were founded.
[See also Vol. XIV.]

VOL. III. The Sacred Books of China.
The Texts of Confucianism. Translated by James Legge. Part I. The Shù King, The Religious Portions of the Shih King, and The Hsiâo King. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.
Confucius was a collector of ancient traditions, not the founder of a new religion. As he lived in the sixth and fifth centuries B.C. his works are of unique interest for the study of Ethology.
[See also Vols. XVI, XXVII, XXVIII, XXXIX, and XL.]

VOL. IV. The Zend-Avesta.
Translated by James Darmesteter. Part I. The Vendidad. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.
The Zend-Avesta contains the relics of what was the religion of Cyrus, Darius, and Xerxes, and, but for the battle of Marathon, might have become the religion of Europe. It forms to the present day the sacred book of the Parsis, the so-called fire-worshippers. Two more volumes will complete the translation of all that is left us of Zoroaster's religion.
[See also Vols. XXIII and XXXI.]
VOL. V. Pahlavi Texts.
   Translated by E. W. West. Part I. The Bundahis, Bahman Yast, and Sháyast lá-sháyast. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.
The Pahlavi Texts comprise the theological literature of the revival of Zoroaster’s religion, beginning with the Sassanian dynasty. They are important for a study of Gnosticism.

VOLS. VI AND IX. The Qur’ân.
   Parts I and II. Translated by E. H. Palmer. 8vo, cloth, 21s.
   This translation, carried out according to his own peculiar views of the origin of the Qur’ân, was the last great work of E. H. Palmer, before he was murdered in Egypt.

VOL. VII. The Institutes of Vishnu.
   Translated by Julius Jolly. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.
A collection of legal aphorisms, closely connected with one of the oldest Vedic schools, the Kathas, but considerably added to in later time. Of importance for a critical study of the Laws of Manu.

VOL. VIII. The Bhagavadgitâ, with The Sanatsugâtiya, and The Anugitâ.
   Translated by Kâshinâth Trimbak Telang. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.
The earliest philosophical and religious poem of India. It has been paraphrased in Arnold’s ‘Song Celestial.’

VOL. X. The Dhammapada,
   Translated from Pâli by F. Max Müller; and
The Sutta-Nipâta,
   Translated from Pâli by V. Fausböll; being Canonical Books of the Buddhists. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.
The Dhammapada contains the quintessence of Buddhist morality. The Sutta-Nipâta gives the authentic teaching of Buddha on some of the fundamental principles of religion.

VOL. XI. Buddhist Suttas.
A collection of the most important religious, moral, and philosophical discourses taken from the sacred canon of the Buddhists.
VOL. XII. The Satapatha-Brâhmaṇa, according to the Text of the Mādhyandina School.
Translated by Julius Eggeling. Part I. Books I and II. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

A minute account of the sacrificial ceremonies of the Vedic age. It contains the earliest account of the Deluge in India.
[See also Vol. XXVI.]

VOL. XIII. Vinaya Texts.
Transcribed from the Pâlī by T. W. Rhys Davids and Hermann Oldenberg. Part I. The Pâtimokkha. The Mahâvagga, I–IV. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.
The Vinaya Texts give for the first time a translation of the moral code of the Buddhist religion as settled in the third century B.C.
[See also Vols. XVII and XX.]

VOL. XIV. The Sacred Laws of the Āryas,
As taught in the Schools of Āpastamba, Gautama, Vâsishtha, and Baudhâyana. Translated by Georg Bühler. Part II. Vâsishtha and Baudhâyana. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XV. The Upanishads.

VOL. XVI. The Sacred Books of China.
The Texts of Confucianism. Translated by James Legge. Part II. The Yi King. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XVII. Vinaya Texts.
Transcribed from the Pâlī by T. W. Rhys Davids and Hermann Oldenberg. Part II. The Mahâvagga V–X. The Kuḷavagga, I–III. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XVIII. Pahlavi Texts.
Transcribed by E. W. West. Part II. The Dâdistân-i Dinik and The Epistles of Manûsîkhâr. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XIX. The Fo-sho-hing-tsan-king.
A Life of Buddha by Asvaghosa Bodhisattva, translated from Sanskrit into Chinese by Dharmaraksha, A.D. 420, and from Chinese into English by Samuel Beal. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

This life of Buddha was translated from Sanskrit into Chinese, A.D. 420. It contains many legends, some of which show a certain similarity to the Evangelium infantiae, &c.
EDITED BY F. MAX MÜLLER.

VOL. XX. Vinaya Texts.
Translated from the Pāli by T. W. RHYS DAVIDS and HERMANN OLDENBERG. Part III. The Kullavagga, IV-XII. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XXI. The Saddharma-pundarika; or, The Lotus of the True Law.
Translated by H. KERN. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

The Lotus of the true Law, a canonical book of the Northern Buddhists, translated from Sanskrit. There is a Chinese translation of this book which was finished as early as the year 286 A.D.

VOL. XXII. Gaina-Sūtras.
Translated from Prākrit by HERMANN JACOBI. Part I. The Ākārāṅga-Sūtra and The Kalpa-Sūtra. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

The religion of the Gainas was founded by a contemporary of Buddha. It still counts numerous adherents in India, while there are no Buddhists left in India proper.

VOL. XXIII. The Zend-Avesta.
Translated by JAMES DARMAESTETER. Part II. The Sirōzahs, Yasts, and Nyāyīs. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XXIV. Pahlavi Texts.
Translated by E. W. WEST. Part III. Dinā-ī Maṅgōg-ī Khirad, Śīkand-gūmānīk Vīgār, and Sad Dar. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

SECOND SERIES.

VOL. XXV. Manu.
Translated by GEORG BÜHLER. 8vo, cloth, 21s.

This translation is founded on that of Sir William Jones, which has been carefully revised and corrected with the help of seven native Commentaries. An Appendix contains all the quotations from Manu which are found in the Hindu Law-books, translated for the use of the Law Courts in India. Another Appendix gives a synopsis of parallel passages from the six Dharma-sūtras, the other Smritis, the Upanishads, the Mahābhārata, &c.

VOL. XXVI. The Satapatha-Brāhmaṇa.
Translated by JULIUS EGGELING. Part II. Books III and IV. 8vo, cloth. 12s. 6d.
VOLS. XXVII AND XXVIII. The Sacred Books of China.

The Texts of Confucianism. Translated by James Legge. Parts III and IV. The Li Ki, or Collection of Treatises on the Rules of Propriety, or Ceremonial Usages. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d. each.

VOL. XXIX. The Grihya-Sūtras, Rules of Vedic Domestic Ceremonies.

Part I. Sāṅkhāyana, Āśvalāyana, Pāraskara, Khâdīra. Translated by Hermann Oldenberg. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

These rules of Domestic Ceremonies describe the home life of the ancient Aryas with a completeness and accuracy unmatched in any other literature. Some of these rules have been incorporated in the ancient Law-books.

VOL. XXX. The Grihya-Sūtras. Part II. [In the Press.]

VOL. XXXI. The Zend-Avesta.

Part III. The Yasna, Visparad, Āfrinagān, Gāhs, and Miscellaneous Fragments. Translated by L. H. Mills. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

VOL. XXXII. Vedic Hymns.

Translated by F. Max Müller. Part I. 8vo, cloth, 18s. 6d.

VOL. XXXIII. The Minor Law-books.

Translated by Julius Jolly. Part I. Nārada, Brīhaspati. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XXXIV. The Vedānta-Sūtras, with the Commentary by Saṅkarākārya.

Translated by G. Thibaut. 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d.

VOL. XXXV. The Questions of King Milinda. Translated from the Pāli by T. W. Rhys Davids. 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d.

VOL. XXXVII. The Contents of the Nasks, as stated in the Eighth and Ninth Books of the Dinkard. Translated by E. W. West. [In the Press.]

VOLS. XXXIX AND XL. The Sacred Books of China. The Texts of Tāoism. Translated by James Legge. 8vo, cloth, 21s.

 The Second Series will consist of Twenty-four Volumes in all.
